INTRODUCTION.

TO MY FRIENDS :—

After the Memorial History of Hampstead was received by the public in the winter of 1899, many valuable records and interesting items came to me from people who were in some way interested in our town, which suggested the thought of preparing an Appendix to the history, which, if not published, could be preserved in the Public Library for the use of future generations.

The facts and records were safely treasured with that aim in view, until the greatly appreciated honor was extended to me to be the historian of the church at its one hundred and fiftieth anniversary. In accepting the invitation my efforts to search deeper into the annals and traditions of the town were increased, and a resolve was made to prepare Volume II, as a Memorial of the Church, to include an Appendix to the town history.

In the preparation of this work many family and town histories have been consulted ; professional genealogists have rallied to my aid ; and people in town and out have been earnest in extending words of encouragement and help. Nearly eight hundred letters have been sent to past and present members of the church and descendants, soliciting records, or to verify data, with the result that only three requests have remained unanswered. While a few members have asked that their ages be not recorded, and other persons have requested a brief mention, all have sent best wishes for the success of my undertaking.

But for this generous aid and kindly interest from pastors, members and friends of the church and society, my work would have been almost impossible, not being a member or connected with any church organization, and residing away from even the sound of the church bell.

I extend to all who have aided me by records, photographs or illustrations, or by cheering words of encouragement, my sincere thanks.

The memorial histories of the town and of the church were not prepared with the idea of pecuniary profit, but their publication has afforded the broader contribution of giving and receiving of knowledge and of pleasure.

The first volume has found a place in the homes of nine hundred residents, natives or friends of Hampstead, residing in nearly every State and Territory of the Union, and in England, France, and Germany, eliciting expressions complimentary to its value, as well as words of hearty approval.

Thomas Fuller, D. D., described as "a man of excellent learning and great benevolence," wrote more than two hundred and fifty years ago, "History is an interesting study, and a recreation work." I trust that this volume, the compiling of which has been a pleasurable recreation, may at least find friends who can view its possible errors with kindly discrimination.

"Whoever thinks a faultless piece to see; Thinks what ne'er was, nor is, nor ne'er will be."

With renewed feelings of friendship for you all, with affection for my native town, with great respect for the lives and character of the founders of the Congregational Church, and with becoming pride in its history and historical associations, I am,

Sincerely yours,

HARRIETTE E. NOYES.

THE OLD CHURCH.

The Old Church on the hilltop sleeps,
Through storms and sunny weather,
About its walls the wild wind sweeps,
The drifting rain its grey roof steeps,
Or mellowing sunbeam silent creeps,
In cold or heat together.

Around its tower that stately rears,
An ever warning finger,
Like Minaret whence the faithful hears
At morn and eve, the call to prayers,
The pale moon flings her silver spears,
And rosy sunsets linger.

Within are timbers brown and bare,
The pulpits high insistence,
And circling gallery rising fair,
O'er empty pews now silent there,
In sunlight that through windows bare
Streams in without resistance.

The Deacons' seat stands well in view,
With sounding board above it,
And just before their narrow pew
The table bare where they renew
From month to month their promise true
To church, and vow to love it.

On sunny summer day when long
We sit in idle dreaming,
We hear the strains of sacred song
From pew and gallery rising strong,
And stately parson drones along,
His words with terrors teeming.

Around, the circumjacent air
Is full of spirit faces,
The old, with visage lined with care,
The happy child, the maiden fair,
And tottering age with silver hair,
Filling their old time places.

Dear Old New England, proud and stern,
Thy old traditions keeping,
Thine ancient creed failed to discern
The love that made the Man Christ yearn
O'er sinful souls, nor could you learn
The Godhead, in them sleeping.

A broader faith for human need
To-day thy pulpit preaches,
The bulwarks of thy iron creed
Have sunk so low that all may read
The promise given, and claim the need
Thy heavenly message teaches.

But yet through all New England strong
Thy influence still we cherish,
The love for right, hatred of wrong,
Fair freedom's high and holy song,
Faith in that truth that suffered long
That naught that lives shall perish.

All praise to those who wisely laid
Foundations past upheaving,
Who through grim forests undismayed,
By sea and mountain lonely strayed,
And with their blood and labor made
The blessings we're receiving.

Their forms in lonely graveyards rest,
A mossy headstone telling,
Unlettered for the searcher's quest,
Nor heed they friend or stranger guest
No answers give to their request,
But yet they're with us dwelling.

We see them in the fertile land
Its richest harvests giving.
We feel them in each strong right hand,
The pulpit voices their command,
And public schools a record stand,
As tokens of their living.

What lessons do the rolling years,
Filled full of labor and of tears,
So swiftly waning day by day,
Leave with us as they glide away ?

Our fathers chose the better part,
In living near to Nature's heart,
Contented in their humble lot,
Though now in later years forgot.

What matters though their earthly name
Live not upon the roll of fame ?
They labored for each passing day,
Then silently they stole away.

They counted their life work well done
If they could say at set of sun,
To-day I've seen Thy power increase,
Lord, let Thy servant go in peace.

What though the narrow way they made
Still narrower for the feet that strayed,
The eye that saw a sparrow fall
A constant watch kept over all.

With ostentation, pomp and din,
We seek the way to enter in,
The weak ones crowding to the wall,
What wonder that so many fall.

What use in all this constant strain,
This toil and trouble, care and pain,
Unequal fighting with our lot,
Appearing to be what we're not ?

What matters when our work is done
 And we have reached life's setting sun,
 If sleep we 'neath the lowly sod,
 Forgotten by all else but God ?

Our need is for a simpler life,
 With more of Nature's teachings rife,
 The nearer we to Nature stand
 We surer feel God's guiding hand.

Beneath the rush of busy marts
 We lose the beat of suffering hearts,
 And where the flag of freedom waves
 We congregate, a race of slaves.

Slaves to the eager rush of gain,
 Slaves 'neath strenuous labor's strain,
 Slaves to ambition's stern command,
 Slaves e'en to pleasure's beckoning hand.

With many corded lash they smite,
 And ever urge us in the fight,
 Not that dread whip that scores the back,
 But want and greed and passions pack.

Their lashes take no bloody toll,
 But striking inward sear the soul,
 And while they leave no throbbing scar,
 Our whole eternal welfare mar.

We need less madness in the strife,
 More dignity in daily life,
 Remembering that the Father's gaze,
 Unruffled, sees our devious ways.

Well knowing, when the strife is past,
 His love will fold us safe at last,
 And close 'neath His protecting arms,
 No more we'll fear the world's alarms.

GEORGE ROBY BENNETTE, M. D.

EARLY HISTORY—1620-1733.

In 1640, it was said, "the events of history, in New England, are recorded with ever increasing rapidity, and give promise of surprising changes."

The emigration of the Puritans to New England, as shown by the historians of early days, began about ten years after the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth. Few attempts were made to form other settlements until seventeen ships, with more than a thousand persons, came in 1630. More and more the exodus increased, until 1640, when twenty-three thousand representatives of English blood settled on lands adjacent to Massachusetts Bay.

They were men and women who had left their homes, their friends, and their native land, for an abode in a bleak and lonely wilderness, that they might enjoy in peace an austere religion which they regarded more highly than all of the comforts and pleasures of the world.

At a session of the General Court held in Boston May 11, 1640, a petition was received from "Mr. Nathaniel Ward and Newberry men" for permission "to begin a settlement on the Merrimack." The right was granted them to consider Pentucket (Haverhill), or Cochichawick (Andover), provided they give answer in three weeks and build before the next Court." Mr. Ward and his associates chose Pentucket, and commenced a settlement before the following October.

The first company of settlers were William White, Samuel Gile, James Davis, Henry Palmer, John Robinson, John Williams, Christopher Hussey, and Richard Littlehale of Newbury, Abraham Tyler, Daniel Ladd, Joseph Merrie, and Job Clement of Ipswich, all of whom had come to America within a short time.

Rev. John Ward, son of Mr. Nathaniel Ward, the petitioner for the location, and grandson of Rev. John Ward, a worthy and distinguished minister of Haverhill, England, took up his residence with them as soon as they could break ground for the new settlement and prepare for the coming of a minister.

The settlers received the deed of the land of Pentucket Nov. 12, 1642, from the Indians Passaquo and Saggahew with the consent of Passaconaway, which they named Haverhill, in honor of Haverhill, England, the birthplace of Rev. John Ward, and as a token of respect and thankfulness for his settling with them in the work of the ministry. The deed of the land of Pentucket gives the bounds "eight miles in length westward, six miles northward, and six miles eastward, with ye Ileand in ye rivver, that ye Ileand stands in, that is fourteen miles in length, for and in consideration of sum of three pounds and ten shillings."

In the autumn of 1641 they gathered their first church, consisting of fourteen members, eight males and six females.

Tradition says "they assembled the first seven years for prayer and public worship beneath the branches of a large tree which stood in what is now the Old Pentucket burial ground, and at their homes, which were all in the immediate vicinity."

They erected in 1648 a rough one-story building of hewn logs. The house was twenty-six feet in length by twenty feet in width, as their meeting house, and in which also to execute all town and civic affairs, "at ye Lower End of ye Mill Lott," now occupied by the Pentucket and Linwood cemeteries.

During the winter of 1655 Thomas Davis was allowed three pounds by the town "to gound pin and daub it," on condition that he "provide the stone and clay for the underpinning," the town to be at their own expense to bring the clay into place, and "ye plaitering of ye walls up to ye beams."

The house was enlarged and repaired, seats and a gallery added a few years after. In 1672 a store house to secure the stock of powder and ammunition and a stockade of smooth poles sixteen feet tall were set close together for a more secure defence against the Indian attacks. The watch-house and whipping post were in front of the meeting house: the pound for cattle occupied a corner of the lot, and the "nooning house," with the big fireplace beside which the more distant families could eat their lunch during intermission. The burial ground was behind the meeting house.

In September, 1642, the town voted to give Mr. Ward, their teacher, a salary of £50, and in 1645 Richard Littlehale was selected to beat a drum to call the people together, but "in 1652 Abraham Tyler was chosen to blow his horn in the most convenient place, for the same purpose, every Lord's day, about one-half hour before meeting time, and also on lecture days, for which he was to have a peck of corn from every family for the year ensuing." In 1652 the herdsman, James George, was "not permitted to turn the flock of cattle into the common herd until after the second beating of the drum."

One of the duties of the Selectmen in 1674 was to have the meeting house "swept duly, decently, and orderly."

In 1681 the question of building a new meeting house was raised, and a compromise of erecting a new gallery on the east side was made.

Rev. John Ward, the first pastor of the church, became enfeebled with age, and Rev. Benjamin Rolfe, of Newbury, Mass., began to preach in the autumn of 1689 as an assistant of Mr. Ward. The town voted "to pay him forty pounds per annum, in wheat, rye, and Indian, and his diet and board," and "that Mr. Ward should have his full salary, provided he boarded Mr. Rolfe at his own cost." Mr. Ward died Dec. 27th, 1693, "just entering his eightieth eighth year," and his assistant for four years was ordained pastor, April 29, 1693, "at a salary of £60 in wheat, rye, and Indian, and he to find personal quarters for himself as he shall think good," and "there shall be paid him a sufficient quantity and stock of good sweet dry, and sound hay, for the keeping his horse through the winter, at such place in Haverhill as he shall appoint."

The question of repairing the old house, or building a new meeting house, came up in town meeting in 1694, and by a vote of thirty-five for the old place to fifty-three votes against it, and for a location on "the Commons."

It was voted in 1697 "to build a new meeting house, near the Watch house and school house, which had been built on what is now City Hall Park, July 28, 1697. The committee chosen reported that "they had been abroad at several places, taking dimensions, of several meeting houses, and having an account of the cost of them, and after bartering with several workmen, had found Sergeant John Haseltine the most inclinable to build of any one." He offered to "build a meeting house, fifty feet long and forty feet wide, and eighteen feet stud, finishing the same, within and without, with seats, pulpit, galleries, windows, doors, and stairs, after the pattern of the Beverly meeting house, and doing the sides after the styles of the Reading meeting house, finding all materials, for four hundred pounds money." even to "the turning of the key, and building a turret for a bell."

The town by a unanimous vote granted the acceptance of the new house Oct. 24, 1799, and to "dispose of ye old meeting house, for ye public benefit of ye said town for ye use of a school house, or a watch house, or a house of shelter, or a shed to keep horses in, or any other way as they can meet with chapmen."

The people were seated in the house Nov. 20, 1699, by a committee chosen "to place or seat the people in the new meeting house so that they may know where to sit & not disorderly to crowd upon one another, and be uncivil in the time of God's worship."

This house had a door in the end, six windows on each side, and a watch house and school house connected to it. A porch and steeple were built about 1760.

In 1709 several persons were given permission to "build seats for themselves to sit in, in the hind seat of the west gallery, if not built so high as to hinder or damnify the light of them windows in the west end."

Permission was given in 1713 to "build a women's pew in the meeting house."

The first church bell in Haverhill was purchased for this parish in London in 1748, and a belfry was built on the ridge of the meeting house, and the bell rope descended to the broad aisle, and it was voted "to Ring the bell, at one of ye clock, every day, and at nine every night, and on Sabbaths and Lectures," and one hundred pounds were raised (old tenor) towards defraying "the charges of building the steeple and Ringing ye bell."

The meeting house became too small for the parish, and as it was much decayed it was finally decided to build a new one in 1765, and an appropriation of three hundred pounds was granted, but more than one thousand pounds were used for the purpose.

The dimensions of the new house were not to exceed sixty-six feet in length and forty-eight feet in breadth. The whole of the ground floor (excepting the aisles) was occupied by pews, which were built by the parish, appraised by the committee, and sold at auction. The "men's seats" and "women's seats" were then confined to the galleries.

This meeting house, when built, was set "at the northerly side of the old meeting house, as near to it as may be convenient, and was on the Common, about midway between Main and Winter streets, a little north of the foot of Pleasant street, with the principal end to the northeast." This house remained standing till 1837, when it was taken down.

From 1765 to 1770 Baptists were continually asking for a release of their minister rates towards the First Parish Orthodox preacher. Denominational troubles were becoming numerous in the parish from time to time until 1828, which finally led to a separation and division, the Orthodox portion founding the Centre Congregational Church, and the Universalists and Unitarians, being in the majority by five votes, removed the old meeting house in 1837, and built their new house on the site of the present First Parish Unitarian Church, north of City Hall Park.

Rev. Benjamin Rolfe, their pastor, was slain, with his wife and daughter Mehitable, Sunday morning, August 20, 1708, by a desperate band of French and Indians, at the door of his house, which stood near the north corner of Main and Summer streets. They were buried in one grave near the south end of the old Pentucket burial ground, over which the ladies of Haverhill erected a neat and substantial monument in 1847.

“This worthy man was born in Newbury, Mass., in 1662, was graduated from Cambridge 1684. A pious and upright man, ardently devoting his time and talents to forward the cause of his Saviour.” “He was beloved and respected by his people.”

Sept. 15, 1708, a committee was chosen to “supply ye pulpit for ye present & for ye coming winter.”

Mr. Nicholas Seaver preached regularly till the next February, when he was thanked for his pains and labors among them, and a call for a continuation of the labor, which proposal was declined. He was succeeded by Rev. Richard Brown, and after he preached twenty-four Sabbaths, he was also given a call, but declined. They then purchased “the house for a parsonage where Mr. Rolfe was killed, and invited Mr. Joshua Gardner to settle with them, at a salary of £70 per annum, one-half in good passable money, one-half in merchantable corn at money price, and the use of all of the parsonage, and housing & lands, & meadows."

He was ordained Jan. 11, 1711, but died of consumption March 21, 1715, at the age of twenty-eight years.

During his ministry "he admitted 48 persons, baptized 150, and 17 owned the Covenant." He was eminently distinguished for piety in early life. He became a hopeful subject for divine grace at the age of thirteen years, and soon after began to prepare himself to preach the gospel. He entered Harvard College at the age of sixteen, and graduated at twenty; commenced preaching at the age of twenty-one, and was ordained at twenty-three.

Upon his stone the following epitaph is inscribed, "A good man, betimes, and full of the Holy Ghost and faith, of an excellent temper, of good integrity, having faithfully performed his talents, fell asleep in Jesus, and went triumphantly to receive his Reward in Heaven."

At his death the town voted "to pay the funeral expenses, amounting to thirty pounds and nine shillings and six pence. William White made a journey to Boston to get supplies for the funeral, and among the items of expense was "one Bbl. of Cyder."

After Mr. Gardner's death the church was supplied for four years by Mr. Jonathan Cushing, Robert Stanton, Rev. Joseph Parsons, and Mr. Samuel Chickley, all declining proposals to settle with them, until Mr. John Brown of Little Cambridge (now Brighton) was ordained as their minister, May 13, 1719, and served them until his death, of consumption, after twenty years of ill health, Dec. 2, 1742.

Rev. Edward Barnard, a graduate of Harvard College in 1736, son of Rev. John Barnard of Andover, Mass., and grandson of Rev. Thomas Barnard of Andover, all of whom were graduates of Harvard College, was ordained pastor April 17, 1743, having assisted Mr. Brown during his long illness. He served them successfully thirty-one years, during which time he baptized 908 persons, married 211 couples, 94 persons were admitted to church membership, 96 "owned the Covenant." He died in Haverhill January 26, 1774, aged 54 years.

Rev. Mr. Barnard has been spoken of as a man "of distinction and real worth, his sermons correct and finished, his compositions instructive, plain and practical, and as a watchful, affectionate, and unwearied pastor."

From the cessation of the Indian troubles, in 1709, settlements of land to the east, west or northward were rapidly taken, and in 1712 we find a vote on record, "to abate one-half of the ministry rates of several persons on account of the great distance they lived from the town."

The town of Methuen was set off from the First Parish in 1725, and fifty acres of land given to their first settled minister, Rev. Christopher Sargent, and Oct. 24, 1732, twenty-nine members were given permission to embody themselves into a church body in Salem, N. H., with Rev. Abner Bailey as pastor.

In 1734 the inhabitants of the East or "shad" parish petitioned for a new parish, with Rev. Benjamin Parker as pastor, and in the autumn of that same year Rev. Samuel Bachellor was given forty acres of land, and the West Parish given a parsonage of forty acres more, and seventy-seven members were dismissed to form the West Parish Congregational Church.

The northerly part of Haverhill was erected into a parish originally styled "Church of the North Precinct of Haverhill" in 1728, and a meeting house erected on the spot now occupied by the "North Parish and Plaistow Congregational Church."

The church was organized November 4, 1730, with Rev. James Cushing, a graduate of Harvard College in 1725, son of Rev. Caleb Cushing of Salisbury, Mass., as pastor, with fifty-nine members, and ten others soon after, from the First Parish church.

The church was granted on condition "that they should determine within one month where their meeting house should be erected, and settle an Orthodox minister as soon as possible." Many of the members favored the location near where the "Church of the Holy Angels" at Westville, N. H., now stands, as this parish was in the "Haverhill District" of New Hampshire in 1741, and included Plaistow, Atkinson, and Hampstead, and, when organized, two-thirds of the members resided north of the meeting house. Rev. Mr. Cushing was granted twenty-nine acres of land and rent from the parsonage farm, which was the farm now owned by Mr. James C. Merrill.

The meeting house in the North Parish was built in 1728 to 1730, and has been described "as built of very heavy timbers; one of the cross-beams was sufficiently large to be sawn into quarters to make the upright standards of the present steeple."

The house was not plastered for years, nor had it a steeple. "The bats and swallows mistook it for a barn," and, it was said that when Rev. Giles Merrill, successor to Rev. James Cushing, preached, his children saw the swallows build their nests on the rafters, and not improbable somewhat changed the 84th Psalm to suit the occasion, "Yea, the swallow hath built a nest for herself where she may lay her young, even thy rafters, O Lord of Hosts."

Rev. Mr. Cushing was ordained on "a day of fasting and prayer, especially appointed." His ministry continued thirty-three years, without disturbance to the harmony of the church, during which time one hundred and sixty-four persons were united with the church, two hundred "owned the covenant," and twelve hundred and seventy-five infants were baptized. He married two hundred and twenty-four couples.

He died May 13, 1764, aged fifty-nine years. "He was a solid and fervent preacher, prudent, steady, patient, condescending and candid, and preserved for thirty-four years the most unruffled tranquility, peace and harmony in the society."

HOUSES FOR PUBLIC WORSHIP, 1733-1902.

In the winter of 1733 a petition was sent to the church at the North Precinct, from twenty-five families who had moved to Timberlane, now Hampstead, "that by reason of the great distance of their dwellings from the meeting house they undergo many and great difficulties in attending the public worship of Almighty God," and asked permission to hold meetings by themselves in the winter season, in a log house probably patterned after the meeting houses of the early Puritans, with its thatched roof of hay or straw, and rough hewn logs for pulpit and seats.

It was built where Daniel Emerson's house now stands. They probably hired some neighboring minister to assist them in the service, or carried it on among themselves, until after 1746, when it seems that they laid plans for a more commodious meeting house, which was raised and covered before 1748.

Immediately after the incorporation of the town, in 1749, the building was made more comfortable, "the floors finished, the windows glazed, ends and back of the house clapboarded, the doors made and hung."

Notes as recorded on the town records concerning the finishing of the house, not given on pages 22, 23 and 24 in the Memorial History of Hampstead, Vol. 1, are as follows:—

Feb. 22, 1753, "To see if ye town will consent to paint ye pulpit and front of ye galleries in ye meeting house."

(Deed of the land on which the meeting house stands, see p. 25, Memorial History, Vol. 1.)

April 21, 1761, "to see if ye town will vote to plaister ye meeting house this year." It was voted "to plaister the meeting house over head and under the galleries and on the sides, & that John Muzzey, Dea. Benj. Kimball, John Webster, Wm. Marshall, and Col. Jacob Bailey be a Committee to plaister it." But in March, 1765, it was again voted "to see if ye town will allow the same com. to plaister it, or by a new Committee."

Again, January, 1768, "it was voted to plaister the meeting house this year." and voted to "call five feet from the side of the pews forward, when the hind seats are now on the men's and women's sides of the Body of the house and to let the highest bidder be the purchaser, and to take such materials of the men that purchase pews as is necessary for plaistering of said house, and that Esq. Webster, Nathan Goodwin, Benj. Little were chosen to be a Com. for the same."

Sales of pews were made as follows:—

March, 1767. "to see if the town will purchase of the proprietors or owners of the pews, and the privilege for a pew in the front gallery, in order to make a number of square pews."

"Know all men by these presents that I Jesse Johnson of Hampstead, in the province of New Hampshire, Gentleman, Do give up to the town of Hampstead all my right interest or property that I have for a privilege for a pue in the meeting house on the men's stairs that was bid of by me sometime past, and that the s'd town may have full power to Dispose of the same as they please as though I had not purchased the same "this 5th day of Dec. 1768."

Apr., 1761. Voted to sell ye pews over the two pairs of stairs."

The following pews were sold by auction March, 1794:—

"The pews below where the men's seats stand & woman's side."

"The pew at the right hand next to the broad alley before Col Emerson's & Dudley Kimball's to Dudley Kimball."

"Roberts Emerson's pew to John True."

Apr. 30, 1788, John Calfe, John Harriman & David Moulton, Selectmen, were authorized to "see if they will agree to purchase the privilege of a long pew in the gallery at the east end of the meeting house, of the present owners, and give up the hindermost seat in addition thereto for room to build square pews at said east end, also to see if they will agree to shorten the long seats so much as to make square pews at the end thereof next to the back side of the meeting house down to the front of the gallery, and if so agreed, to choose a committee to make the sale thereof."

Copy of Deed of Pew No. 3: "Know all men by these presents that I Jabez Hoyt of Hampstead, in the County of Rockingham and State of New Hampshire—Yeoman—for and in consideration of the sum of Five dollars paid me by Thomas Reed of said Hampstead, Gentleman, do hereby grant bargain and sell, unto him the said Thomas Reed, his heirs and executors, the privilege of a square pew in the east gallery in Hampstead meeting house No. 3, which was bid off by me at a vendue held in said Hampstead for the purpose of selling a number of pews in said meeting house. To have and to hold said granted privilege with all privileges and appurtenances to the same belonging to me."

In witness thereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 3d day of May, 1797.

JABEZ HOYT [Seal].

In presence of Micajah Little, Joseph Merrick,

Mr. Tristram Little and Mr. Job Tabor made a measurement of the timbers of the Town House (old meeting house) August 18, 1901, and found the building to be 50 feet long and 40 feet wide. The outside sills are of white oak and eight inches square. The posts are about ten inches square, of white oak: the braces are 7 feet long and 11 inches thick. The beams are of pine and 8 by 12 inches, and 9 1-2 feet in the lower story: the inner posts are twenty-eight feet high by twenty inches square.

About 1792 the meeting house, which "had become decayed and in a wasting condition, and almost without a covering, was repaired partly by subscription, but the arrears were in later years added to the minister's tax by the selectmen.

The porch and steeple were built by Abner Rogers and Col. Thomas Reed in 1793. It is eleven feet square, with posts eighteen inches. The distance from the ground to the bell is forty-eight feet, and from there to the top of the spire is fifty feet. The wooden weather vane which surmounted the top of the spire from 1793 to 1882 was made by Stephen Colby of Haverhill, Mass., under the direction of Daniel Nickols, Sen., and in 1882 was replaced by the present vane.

Moses Little, father of Mr. Tristram Little, went up a rod in 1793, drew up a ladder, confined it, and painted the weather vane after it was placed in position. The chimney was built about 1824.

1745 MEETING HOUSE 1837.

The inside of the house had originally, or in the early years, until 1856, a high pulpit on the north side of the room, a broad aisle leading from the front door directly to it. It was eleven feet from the floor, with winding stairs on the west side of it, and a broad step to the minister's seat. A sounding board eight feet in diameter, of octagon shape, overhanging the pulpit and about six feet above it.

The deacon's seat was underneath the pulpit and facing the people. A half round board hung from the deacons' seat on hinges to form a table, to be used at sacramental seasons and town meeting days.

There were three galleries, one in front, one on either end, with long rows of plank seats about fifteen or twenty feet in length, the seats in front lower than those near the sides of the room. In the east and west corners of the room was a winding stairway leading to the galleries. In the main floor were several long seats and others box shaped, six or eight feet square and "three feet stud," with a door fastened with a wooden hasp: some of the square pews had a plank seat on the sides of the pew, also, and would accommodate several persons in a seat.

The pews and galleries had a railing of turned work, about seven inches high, and set about four inches apart, and a narrow rail at the top of the little posts. The pews were deep, and the plank seats in them turned up against the back of the pews, while the people were standing in prayer time, and when "Amen" was said, and as the people were seating themselves again, "click, click, click," was heard for several seconds from all parts of the room until all of the seats fell in place for the worshippers.

There were six pillars, or columns, about twelve feet posts, two under each gallery. They were painted to imitate marble, as was also the front of the pulpit and galleries.

The doors were made of plank and double, with ten panels in each door. Hand-wrought rails were used in the building of both the inside and outside. There was an oval-shaped window at the top, behind the minister's seat, and the other windows were glassed with seven by nine inch glass, sixteen panes in the upper part and twelve in the lower part of the sash. The building was painted for the first time in 1793. The present windows were put in place in 1856.

Stoves were first known about 1790, but did not come into general use for several years. Box stoves for heating churches and school houses were first introduced in 1820. Before that time meeting houses were not heated at all, except such heat as the women carried in their foot stoves.

The following is a copy of the original subscription paper for the purchase of a stove in 1821. It was loaned the writer by the Foote Brothers, formerly of Salisbury, N. H., into whose possession the paper was received several years ago, and will henceforth be deposited in Hampstead Public Library:—

We, the subscribers, believing that a stove for the Meeting-House in this place would conduce to health, as well as the comfort of the community.

Therefore we severally promise to pay the sums affixed to our names for the above object.

N. B.—Should a sufficient sum be subscribed a meeting will be called to which a general invitation will be given to all who subscribe, by a notification at the meeting house and Mr. Isaac Smiths to determine how large a Stove will be necessary and apoint a Committee to purchase the same.

It would seem from the above paper that some of the people of Hampstead made an effort to procure a stove for their meeting house in 1820, but secured pledges of only two dollars and eighty-seven cents toward one. A stove was obtained early in 1822. Mr. Tristram Little and Joshua F. Noyes well remember the first stove as it stood in their childhood days, as they sat in the old box pews and tried to listen to Father Kelly in the high up pulpit. They inform the writer that the stove stood in front of the pulpit and of the deacons' seat. It was a rough, clumsy box stove, large enough to hold a good sized log. There was then no chimney, and the funnel passed up to the second story and branched in either direction and out of the east and west windows.

In the early days it was customary to place a pan of water holding about six quarts upon the stove. Presumably it was thought necessary to have it there to purify the air from the close heat, but the boys said "some were afraid the infernal thing would blow up."

For an account of the Paul Revere bell which to-day rings from the tower of the town hall, placed in position in 1809, see pages 34 and 162 of Mem. Hist., Vol. 1.

As other denominations claimed the use of the meeting house a part of the time, by right given them by the New Hampshire Legislature, the Congregational Church and Society began controlling their affairs aside from the town March 5, 1832, and soon after set about building their own house for public worship which they occupied for the first time October 15, 1837. The new church stood on the spot where the present church now stands. It was built by Capt. James Gibson at a cost of $3000. It was surmounted by a sort of square tower, instead of a tall steeple. It was built by shares, one hundred of them. It was the opinion of the majority of the shareholders to have the church located where Mr. Andrew M. Moulton's house now is, or on the opposite corner, where No. 2 school house stands, but as one of the shareholders now relates, "by a selfish purpose of one of the committee, the wishes of the majority was overruled, and it was located on the present stand," as the record says, "opposite Major Smith's store."

March 7, 1848, voted, "to secure subscriptions and receive donations to repair the new meeting house, and that Joseph Chase, R. K. Brickett and Benj. Sawyer be a Committee for that purpose."

Feb. 20, 1853, it was voted by the Society to "repair the meeting house in a manner that will be safe for public worship."

March 6, 1860, voted, "to ascertain the feelings of the people in regard to the erection of a new meeting house."

At an adjourned meeting, March 17th, voted, "to have a plank fastened to the beams of the meeting house so they will be passable from one end of the church to the other over the plaistering," and that "notice be given to all pew-holders in the house to meet April 21, 1860, to see on what terms they will relinquish their rights for the purpose of rebuilding or repairing the same."

April 1, 1861, about two weeks before the civil war was declared, "On motion of Benj. B. Garland it was voted that the Society consent to have their meeting house taken down or disposed of on consideration that a new and more substantial house be erected on the same site," and that "Joseph Chase, Jonathan Kent, William Sanborn, Nelson Ordway, and Hamilton C. Eastman be a committee to look after the interests of the Society in taking down or disposing of the building."

Dea. William Sanborn and Frederick A. Pike were the committee to move the building back of the present location, which was done while the new church was in progress of building, but later it was taken down and moved to Merrimackport, Mass., where it now is rebuilt in as a part of True's mill and factory. The same committee to build the new church, in 1861, by carpenters Richard K. Brickett, foreman, and William B. Yeaton of Haverhill, and other young assistants.

June 22, 1886, Albert H. Little, Charles W. Pressey, and William A. Emerson were chosen a committee, on motion of Dea. Wm. H. Davis, "to proceed to build a vestry according to the plans by the architect."

The chapel, or vestry, was built in 1886, at an expense of about $2000, and was dedicated, free from debt, Jan. 27, 1887, at 2 o'clock P. M., "in the presence of a large number of persons, filling the vestry to its utmost capacity." The exercises consisted of a report and address by the pastor, dedicatory prayer by Rev. Charles Tenney of Chester, N. H., and an address by Rev. Nehemiah Boynton of Haverhill, Mass. The exercises were interspersed throughout with music.

"Two interesting episodes of the occasion was the unveiling of a picture of our pastor, Rev. Albert Watson, the gift of Mrs. Mary A. Eastman and her daughter, Mrs. L. Ada Libbey of Exeter, N. H., and the presentation of a beautiful Bible from the North Church in Haverhill, Mass., for use in the vestry. A bountiful supper was provided and a pleasant time enjoyed by all." (Church records.)

INTERIOR 1894.

Jan. 4, 1887, "Voted, that the one hundred dollars from the estate of the late Dr. Isaac Tewksbury be used towards the expenses of the New Vestry." Voted, that "fifty dollars from the communion collections be used to furnish the New Vestry, and that Dea. Pressey proceed to furnish it at once." (Church records.)

The vestry has a neatly furnished audience room, with pulpit and organ, chandeliers, etc.: its walls handsomely frescoed and graced with pictures of several of the pastors: a pastor's study, ladies' parlor, dining room, kitchen, and cupboard well filled with dishes, and other conveniences, making the addition to the church appreciative to all.

rior, which necessitated repairs, and at that time the ceiling and walls were frescoed and painted, etc., taking away the panels at the sides of the pulpit as seen in the cut, etc.

The work done to the interior was not satisfactory to the church and society, and it was resolved to make more improvements, and to do so in connection with the organ committee, who asked and were granted leave Feb. 15, 1901, to make changes in the interior of the church property as will be necessary to place the new organ back of the pulpit, without expense to the Society."

The work was to begin early in July, 1901. We find recorded on the church records:—

"During a heavy thunder shower on the night of Saturday, June 22, 1901, about one thirty o'clock, the church steeple was struck by lightning, which tore away a portion of the steeple, demolished the south corner of the church, tearing out two or three windows, passing through the entire length of the church into the vestry, and doing considerable damage there.

DAMAGED CHURCH.

The next day we held our services in the town hall. During the following week the Supervisors of the Society were able to adjust the damage with the insurance company. They granted $1600 insurance on the building and $100 on furnishings. The church was then cleared of debris, and work begun on the repairs and changes to the interior."

A steel ceiling and newly frescoed walls by the Ladies' Social Circle, and new shades by the C. E. Society, at a cost of $130. The partitions were removed from between the pews so as to pass from one side of the church to the other without going round; repairs and improvements costing about $3500.

The steeple of the church was prepared for a bell, and during the last week of August, 1901, a very musical bell was placed in the steeple of the church and presented to the Congregational Church and Society in "the name of Mrs. Rufus P. Gardner." The gift is much appreciated by church and town people.

The rededication of the church occurred Sunday, Sept. 1, 1901, at 10.45 o'clock A. M.

The following order of exercises were rendered:—

- 1—Organ Voluntary. Mrs. Frank W. Emerson, organist.
 - 2—Doxology.
 - 3—Invocation, Lord's Prayer.
 - 4—Anthem, "Break forth into joy."
 - 5—Responsive reading.
 - 6—Gloria. Choir and congregation.
 - 7—Scripture reading.
 - 8—Prayer.
 - 9—Response, "I cannot do without the Lord," by the choir.
 - 10—Notices and Offering.
 - 11—Solo. Mrs. Albert H. Little, "New Hampshire Home Song."
 - 12—Hymn No. 61.
 - 13—Sermon by the pastor; text, "The Lord is in his sanctuary."
 - 14—Hymn No. 677.
 - 15—Leader—"To the glory of God our Father, to the honor of Jesus Christ our Saviour, to the praise of the Holy Ghost our Comforter and Guide,"

 For whatsoever things are lovely,
 For whatsoever things are of good report,"
- Con.—"We rededicate this church,"
- Leader—"In gratitude and love as an offering of thanksgiving and praise."

Choir and Congregation—"Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost. As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen."

16—Dedicatory Prayer, Rev. R. P. Gardner.

The choir, composed of William H. Davis, chorister; Mrs. Frank W. Emerson, organist; Mrs. Albert H. Little, Mrs. Henry W. Tabor, Miss Mary G. Davis, Prof. Forrest E. Merrill, C. Park Pressey and H. Clinton Davis, sang the Dedicatory Hymn, to the tune of Coronation, C. M.

“God of the Universe, to thee
This sacred fane we rear,
And now, with songs and bended knee,
Invoke thy presence here.
Long may this echoing dome resound
The praises of thy name;
These hallowed walls to all around
The triune God proclaim.
Here let thy love, thy presence dwell;
Thy glory here made known;
Thy people’s home, Oh come and fill,
And seal it as thine own.
When sad with care, by sin oppressed,
Here may the burdened soul
Beneath thy sheltering wing find rest;
Here make the wounded whole,
And when the last long Sabbath morn
Upon the just shall rise,
May all who own thee here be borne
To mansions in the skies.

The church property, valued at more than $10,000, is not excelled by any church in any New England town of equal inhabitants. Church attendants, as well as the entire people of the community, can look to it with pride and satisfaction.

THE CONGREGATIONAL SOCIETY.

The New Hampshire Observer, published at Portsmouth, N. H., in Vol. X., Nos. 27 and 28, on July 2d and 9th, 1828, printed the following:—

“We, the subscribers, inhabitants of Hampstead, and of the Congregational sect or denomination, do hereby associate and form ourselves into a Society assuming the name and style the Congregational Society in Hampstead, to be known and distinguished in law by that name, and do appoint Isaac Smith clerk of this association or society, and do hereby direct him to procure a book of records for the use of the Society, and to record therein this instrument and our names severally subscribed thereto, and to publish in the New Hampshire Observer, a newspaper published in this county, this instrument of association, in order that we may have the benefits, powers, privileges and immunities specified in an act of the Legislature of the State, passed the 3d day of July, 1827, empowering religious associations to assume and exercise co-operate powers, and in order that we, as a corporation, may provide for the support and maintenance of public worship and publick instruction in religion and morality, and for that purpose receive donations, devices, and bequeaths, and raise all necessary monies, and for the purpose, also, of managing any real estate now held by the Congregational Society in Hampstead, or held by any person or body politic for our benefits, or for the purpose of managing any property bequeathed to the Congregational Church and Society in said Hampstead, and that there may be a legal meeting of the Society hereby formed we do hereby authorize Jesse Gordon, Esq., Mr. James Calef and Dea. Jona. Kent, or either of them, to call the first meeting.”

PARSONAGES.

The proprietors of Haverhill gave the inhabitants of "Timberlane" a tract of land for "ye first settled minister in the place." This tract of land was situated on the road which leads from Andrew M. Moulton's to Wadleigh Corner. Troubles arose about the land. April 21, 1753, it was voted "to choose a committee to prosecute Thomas Haynes of Haverhill, to final judgment and Execution, for encroaching on ye parsonage land that was given by the proprietors of Haverhill to Timberlane, or any one who shall hereafter trespass on said parsonage land."

August 18, 1753, voted, "to see if ye town will choose a committee to join with Rev. Mr. True in making a division of ye parsonage, pursuant to ye vote of ye town."

Aug. 31, 1753, Voted, "that Mr. Hazzen, Nathaniel Heath, & John Webster be a committee to divide ye parsonage land, pursuant to ye vote of ye town."

Dec. 25, 1853, Voted, "that Lieut. Morse, Capt. Copp, & John Hunkins be a Committee to agree with Flavius Harris of Haverhill, with respect to ye parsonage land that belongs to ye town & the Rev. Mr. True, if they can agree on reasonable terms, or to leave the matter to Referees."

Rev. Mr. True sold his right in the parsonage land at that time for a small sum to Flavius Harris, who, it is said, "made a profitable investment for his money."

Tradition says that Rev. Mr. Phillips and Rev. Mr. Parker and other preachers, when they supplied the church in Hampstead before 1752, made their homes where Mr. Charles Damon now resides, as did also Rev. Henry True from June, 1752, to the spring of 1753, when he became owner of a piece of land where Francis Merrick's house stood, which was burned in 1879.

The Journal Almanac of Rev. Mr. True, in 1753, has recorded in the first line entry in Latin, on January 1st, "Trobes pro mea domo populi secabante," which may be translated to read, "The people cut the timbers for my house." It would seem that the people of Hampstead held a sort of a "Bee" for the purpose of preparing a house for the new minister, to be in readiness for his bride in the following season.

In 1767 Rev. Mr. True built the house now the residence of Francis H. Sawyer, where he lived until his death.

April 22, 1783, Voted, "to sell ye parsonage lands lying in Hampstead, and all other common lands in s'd town, and to choose a Committee to ascertain the bounds of ye parsonage meadow." Major Mooer, Capt. Hezekiah Hutchens and Benjamin Emerson, Jr., were the committee to expend the money arising from the sale aforesaid, and it was voted that "it be appropriated and laid out towards purchasing a place or building spot near the meeting house in Hampstead, suitable for a Gospel minister that may be settled over the church and people, as a parsonage for the use of said minister."

REV. MR. IRTEE'S HOUSE, 1797.

The town sold the parsonage lands and purchased the farm "of thirty-five acres, with house and barn on it," which is now the farm of Mr. Charles H. Ranlett.

In 1852 the town expended the money, six hundred dollars, arising from the sale of the farm above, for removing the old pulpit and pews in the old meeting house and making a more convenient room for town purposes, and in building the floor to the upper story and fitting up the room for the use of the Methodists and other denominations, and for social purposes.

"BRICK HOUSE" AS PARSONAGE.

The parsonage farm became out of repair and unfit for the use of Rev. Mr. Kelly and his family, and the town not agreeing to repair it, Rev. John Kelly built for his own use, with the help of two hundred and three dollars from friends of the church, in 1808, the house now occupied by Mrs. Emeline E. Moorer and A. Sydney Little. Here Rev. Mr. Kelly lived till his death in 1848. The income of the parsonage farm was given him "through his natural life."

Rev. J. M. C. Bartley resided during the first years of his pastorate where Mr. Orren B. Ranlett now resides, a short time where Andrew M. Moulton resides, and later in the brick house known as "Cogswell house," now owned by Dea. C. W. Pressey, houses hired for the use of the minister as a parsonage.

June 4, 1859, it was voted that "the committee chosen to see about a parsonage house report at the next meeting," and July 9, 1859, that "R. K. Brickett, William Sanborn, and Moody H. Brickett be a committee to circulate a paper which B. B. Garland has drawn up to see how much money can be raised towards building a parsonage House to be owned by the Society." Rev. Mr. Pratt at first resided at the present Jacob Townsend residence, which he purchased for himself; and later in the "Brick house."

June 3, 1870, it was voted "to choose a committee to see about procuring a parsonage. Joseph Chase, Nathaniel C. Smith and Amos Buek were the committee, and reported that they had looked at a number of places. June 24, 1870, the committee were empowered to build or purchase, as they thought best.

The committee purchased the farm now the residence of Dr. E. E. Lake, which was occupied by Rev. Mr. Bullard during his pastorate, and also by Rev. Mr. Watson.

The parsonage was then purchased, much through the liberality of Dea. Joseph Chase.

RESIDENCE OF DR. LAKE.—PARSONAGE, 1870 TO 1893.

Oct. 4, 1893, voted, "to purchase the 'Emerson lot' for a new parsonage, and that Dea. C. W. Pressey, John C. Sanborn and John H. Clark be a committee to act as building committee."

The present parsonage was built in 1893, and occupied by Rev. Mr. Gardner from the beginning of his pastorate.

RECORDS OF PASTORATES, COVENANTS, ETC.

The church was organized June 3, 1752, with sixty-eight members, who subscribed their names to the following:—

THE CHURCH COVENANT.

We, the subscribers, apprehending ourselves called to unite as Christian Brethren in a particular church in this Place, that we may be built as such on the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, J. Christ himself being the Corner Stone, do now profess in the Presence of God and his holy Angels his Ministers and People in this Assembly,

That we taking the holy Scriptures called the Bible, to be the rule of our Faith and Practice, believe as followeth; namely, That there is one God, the Maker of Heaven and Earth whose Name is Jehovah revealing himself under the Mysterious Relation of Father, Son and holy Ghost.

And as there is one God so there is one Minister between God and man, the man Christ Jesus, no other than the only begotten of the Father, made flesh, born of the Virgin Mary, who by his Life, Death, Resurrection and Ascension into Heaven, has made way for our Salvation, and from thence he shall come again to Judge the Quick and the Dead,

And that some of the Children of fallen Adam were in Christ chose to Salvation, from the foundation of the world, that they might be delivered from the miseries of the Apostacy, received to the favor of God forfeited thereby, through the everlasting righteousness of Christ, of Christ which is the sole meritorious cause of our Sanctification and acceptance in the sight of God, and preserved in their weak and infirm state by Almighty grace to the Kingdom of Heaven.

That the offers of this Salvation, containing the forgiveness of sin, the Resurrection of the Body and Life everlasting are made to all the members of the holy Catholic Church, that are within the Covenant of grace even Jews and Gentiles as many as are Called. The promise whereof is unto them and their children, and that in a union to Christ our Head, and surely there is a special Communion of Saints, both with God and one another, which is highly promoted in the fellowship of Particular Churches.

And that we may practice according to our holy Rule, we would now in the most devout manner adoring the Divine grace and Condesention in taking us into Covenant humbly lay hold on the great Promise thereof through Christ that God Almighty will be a God to every one of us, and to our Seed after us in their generations, and freely Comfort for ourselves and them to be his People forever. And as we have been Taught, and bound by the seals of this Covenant, we will sincerely endeavor to observe all things, whatsoever Christ has Commanded.

And whereas by this Covenant we are in fellowship with the Universal Church, we being all Baptized into one Body, and having been made all to drink unto one spirit, we profess with them to worship God in the Spirit, to rejoice in Christ Jesus, and to have no Confidence in the Flesh, and in our Personal Conduct and Communion with them in all relations, we would walk worthy of the vocation, wherewith we are Called, in all lowliness and in Love endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of Peace, for there is one Body and one spirit even as we are Called in one hope of our calling.

More particularly. In our personal conduct exercising ourselves we have always a confidence void of offence, towards God and towards man, walking circumspectly not as fools but as wise, and as he who has Called us holy, seeking to be holy in the manner of conversation, not rendering evil to any man, but as we have opportunity doing good unto all men, especially unto them that are of the household of faith.

And in all Political relations, whether domestical, civil or ecclesiastical, to adorn the Doctrine of God and Saviour in all things according as his Grace has appeared unto all men teaching us that designing ungodliness and worldly lusts we should Live soberly, righteously and godly, in the present world. Walking in our Houses agreeably to the Covenant of marriage and the Parental Covenant; resolving that as for us and our Houses we will serve the Lord, Praying together and also instructing and Commanding our children and household to keep the way of the Lord.

And under our civil rulers Living quiet and peaceable Lives in all godliness and Honesty, Rendering to all their dues, Tribute to whom tribute is due, Custom to whom Custom, fear to whom Fear, Honour to whom Honour, to owe no man anything, but to love one another, Praying for the peace of Jerusalem, because they shall prosper that love her. Looking not every man at his own things, but every man also at the things of others.

And in the House of our God, keeping the Ordinances of all things, as delivered to us by Christ and his Apostles, not forsaking the assembling ourselves together, but religiously attending on all Parts of Instituted Worship, whether in the ministry of the Word, or Prayer and praises or in Baptism and the Lord's Supper.

And whereas we are Called to fellowship in a particular Church, wherein we are now to be united, in one Body to maintain a special government within our assembly to which end they have chosen together with us a Pastor, to be over us in the Lord, and admonish us, we promise together as a Church as far as in us lies, that all things shall be done decently and in order with charity unto Edifying, that publick censures be inflicted on disorderly members, according to the Laws of Christ, for the Destruction of the Flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the Day of the Lord Jesus; And as Bretheren we promise each one for ourselves, that we will not any of us hate our Brother in our hearts, but in any wise rebuke our neighbor and not suffer sin upon him, yet if a man be overtaken in a fault we which are spiritual will restore him with a spirit of meekness, Considering himself lest he also be tempted,

Bearing one anothers Burden and so fulfilling the Law of Christ, even the Law of Charity which covereth a multitude of sins, and in faults that deserve reproof when our Brother trespasses against any one of us, he will go and tell him of his fault alone, that he may gain his Brother, but if he refuse to hear him then take with him one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established, and if he refuse to hear them tell the church, and if he hear not the church he shall be unto him as a Heathen and a Publican.

And if there be among us any wicked person polluting the Society we will not be wanting to cast out the old leaven that we may be a new Lump. We will not keep company if any man is Called a Brother, be a fornicator or Covetous, or an Idolitar, or a Railer, or a Drunkard, or an Extortioner, with such an one in our Assembly not to enter.

Shall we not Judge them that are within? and Cast out every wicked person and withdraw from every Brother that walketh disorderly as a busy Body, note that man has no Company with him that he may be ashamed, yet count him not as an enemy but admonish him as a Brother.

And on the other hand when such an offending person shall after censure be sorry unto repentance, then contrary wise we will one and all forgive and Comfort him because sufficient to such is this punishment inflicted of many.

Finally as members of the flock as we shall stand related to our Pastor, we will obey him as having the Rule, and submit ourselves because he shall watch for our souls, as one that must give an account that he may do it with joy and not with grief esteeming him very highly in Love for his works sake, counting an Elder that ruleth well to be worthy of double Honour, especially one that Laboreth with Word and Doctrine for the Scripture, sayeth the Labourer is worthy of his Reward.

To this Covenant we have set our Hands and thus binding ourselves to the Lord, we may keep his Covenant, remembering his Commands to do them that he may establish us a holy People to himself.

Rev. Henry True was ordained June 24, 1752. Rev. Edward Barnard of Haverhill preached the ordination sermon, which was printed as follows :—

“ Goodness consider’d as an eminent qualification of a Christian Minister.”

“ In a sermon preached at the ordination of the Rev. Henry True ”

“ To the pastorate of the church in Hampstead, in the Province of New Hampshire, June 24, 1752.”

“ By Edward Barnard, A. M., Pastor of the Church in Haverhill, Mass.”

ORDINATION SERMON.

Acts xi. 24: “ For he was a Good Man.”

The wisdom of God scarce in anything appears more than raising up persons peculiarly qualified to pronounce the special purposes of his grace. And men never act a juster part than when they engage themselves readily, or employ others in the particular business for which their talents seem most adapted. Such reflections naturally arise from the character of Barnabas in the text, in connection with the context.

The sacred historian in the preceding verses informs us of the happy effect of the fiery Tyral, which came on at Jerusalem, when Stephen was stoned. It tended to the furtherance of the Gospel, through the pious labors of some Christians and the supply of the Spirit of their ascended Lord. For as Christ advised his disciples, when they were persecuted in one city, to flee to another, so many who resided in this seat of blood retired to different places and preached the Gospel to the Jewish inhabitants. At length some natives of Cyprus and Cyrene, having (’tis probable) heard the story of Peter’s receiving Cornelius, though a Gentile, into the communion of the church, ventured to preach Jesus Christ to the heathen at Antioch, and to invite them to partake of the blessings of the purchase. This application was followed with a signal success: a great number believed and turned to the Lord. An event so remarkable in itself, and so favorable to the Christian cause, soon came to the ears of the church at Jerusalem, which seemed to have the care of Christians, particularly lying upon them while in a loose unincorporated state.

Full of grateful surprise at such an unexpected revolution on behalf of Christianity, they concerted measures to forward the good work, and immediately sent Barnabas, one of their body, as the most suitable.

In pursuance of this great end he journeyed for Antioch, and having reached the city he was abundantly rejoiced to see the grace of God in bringing them to the knowledge of Himself and Son, and exhorted them all, that with full purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord, for (says the text) he was a good Man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith.

He was possessed of a firm and unshaken belief in Christ and the new dispensation which was setting up, grounded upon clear and copious views of the excellency and evidence of both. He was endowed with the graces of the Holy Spirit, which was connected with faith, and the extraordinary gifts which in that day were communicated to believers. Being thus fully persuaded of the truth, and experiencing so largely the advantages of Christianity, he could not but earnestly press upon them steadfastness in their profession. He was a man of benignity, too: his disposition was very kind, and therefore he rejoiced in the prospect of their present and future happiness through the grace of God manifested to them.

Goodness oftentimes in Scripture signifies the special virtue of benevolence. Thus the good man is opposed to the righteous, and goodness is enumerated with righteousness and truth in original terms, the same with the text. So that we may well understand this description of Barnabas to denote, not so much his general moral qualities, as that he was one of a sweet and gentle disposition.

A celebrated writer upon this passage supposes that the Church of Jerusalem pitched upon Barnabas rather than another to repair to Antioch because they imagined the softness of his temper would indispose him to lay any unnecessary burdens of the malice law upon these new converts. Whether they had this particular thought or not, it is certain that in a more general view they consulted the happiest method to promote the interests of religion among those who were strangers to it, or had just embraced it, by sending one who would in the best manner recommend it.

Although the state of the gospel in that early age and the situation of affairs at Antioch might render it specially that a minister should shine in an eminency of goodness, yet it is a virtue of vast moment to a person in that office, in every age and past of the Christian church, and fit to be considered at all times, most of all upon such an occasion as that of this day. Here, then, I will attempt:—

I. To illustrate briefly the virtue pointed out in the text. And then,

II. To show the importance of it on the Christian minister.

In the first place, then, let me briefly illustrate the virtue pointed out in the text.

This is goodness, which imparts the propensity or inclination of the soul towards every being who can justly attract it, particularly mankind. It appears in a diversity of lights, agreeable to the different circumstances of the objects it regards and the modes of the operation in and upon the passions, and is accordingly variously denominated.

Does it respect the miserable? Then it flows in compassion. Are those who are the subjects of it happy? Then it issues in a generous satisfaction and delight. Does it meet with provocation? It allays a turbulent passion and becomes mildness and gentleness to the offender, or patience and forgiveness. Considered in relation to near societies is brotherly kindness, but a reaching forth on a larger extent it is charity.

Goodness is not merely a natural good humor, but a religious temper. It does not consist only in the original turn of the mind or a peculiar discipline of the animal frame, but arises from the principles of the reason and Christianity. The former being accidental, can scarce be called virtuous: the latter being matter of choice, is so.

As we are understanding beings, it is fitted that we should be actuated by the arguments of actual religion to this virtue: and as we are under the Christian dispensation that we should be influenced by the additional motives of that. Nor can we be justly deemed the true subjects of either if we have no regard to them.

Goodness is expressly denominated the fruit of the Spirit. It is a production of a divine agent suggesting to and impressing upon the mind such truths as are incentives thereto.

From this representation of it it is plain that it is not an unmanly softness, melting the soul and betraying it, a criminal easiness of conduct, nor blind, disproportionate affection towards all objects alike, or most towards the meanest, or preferring a lower measure of our neighbor's good, or that which is greatly superior. Nor is it a high flush of passion upon sudden good fortune, or an occasional sprightliness of spirit. In opposition to all this, it is a solid disposition exerting itself in an exact conformity to the dictates of judgment and a permanent habitual frame of mind.

But though we thus distinguish between a natural and moral goodness, yet the former is not an apt foundation for, and doubtless is very often connected with an eminency in the later. For it seems at least highly presumable that where God is pleased to set home divine truth upon a tender soul, there will be greater proficiency in goodness than the like operation on another more rigid. Falling into the natural track of the softer powers, it meets with less obstruction than in a more hard and selfish mind, and makes swifter conquest, while this same native temper is refined and sublimated into gracious.

But I hasten to the other general head.

II. To show the importance of this grace or virtue to a Christian minister.

This we may do by two or three considerations. As,

1. Goodness is peculiarly encumbent upon a Christian minister, in respect to his character as an ambassador of Jesus Christ and a preacher of his gospel.

As an ambassador of Christ it is the utmost propriety that he be a good man; yea, an absolute necessity, in order with any consistency with his profession.

Though our Lord Jesus was possessed with universal virtue, yet in none did he shine more illustrious than goodness. All the days of his public ministry were filled with a thousand instances of benevolence. What love and compassion did he breathe in all his discourses? How did he testify it in all his conduct? He went about doing good to the bodies of men by healing all manner of diseases: to their souls by preaching the doctrines of the kingdom of heaven: and in a variety of pungent addresses endeavoring to bring sinners under his wings. And to crown all, he poured out his soul unto death, and offered himself upon the cross an oblation for our offences. An amazing act of grace this! which was thought worthy by perfect wisdom of perpetual memorial by a standing ordinance in the church, and which is an endless source of the most elevated ascriptions to the Lamb from the various orders of glorified spirits throughout the immense regions of light.

Now Christ is a pattern for all Christians in all periods of time, for he has left us an example that we should follow his steps. But his ministers are under superior obligations to imitate him in this divine virtue, as they are brought nearer to him by relation and communion than others. Do they represent his person? how absurd is this without a remembrance of his temper. Are they his peculiar servants? how odious is the appellation without a conformity to his image. Agreeably we find our Lord exhorting his apostles to condescending goodness by his example. Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister, and whosoever will be chief among you let him be your servant: even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

From the character of Christ let us proceed to his gospel, and we shall find it a powerful argument for goodness in a minister as he is a preacher of it. This is a dispensation of grace, and it proclaims peace on earth, good will towards men. The glad tidings it brings by introducing joy and gratitude tends to calm every rougher passion and to put the whole soul into an easy, gracious temper: besides that, the love of God therein displayed is the strongest obligation upon us to love one another.

And then, further, it is the law of love, and presses upon us a new commandment, even that we exercise charity, much fuller and clearer and by more cogent measures than by any religious scheme before. So that upon all these accounts it is in a very singular and extraordinary manner calculated to promote goodness, and in the loudest and most peremptory language demands it.

A coldness and indifference, therefore, unto men, is a great and obvious incongruity in any professor of the gospel, most of all in the minister of it. Does he publish the news of salvation as master of great joy, yet does a sullen, uneasy temper deform his brow? Does he urge his hearers to look to the things of others, because of the kind aspect of the gospel upon them, yet is he of a stingy spirit; does he insist upon goodness as a necessary subjection to the Christian religion, yet is he impatient or vindictive? What a palpable contradiction is this! In what a monstrous light must such a minister appear!

II. Goodness is of vast consequence to a minister's usefulness. And this considered in a larger or more limited view.

I. Goodness renders a minister extensively serviceable. A contracted mind is fitted only for a narrow sphere, and is oftentimes confined within it. But the generous soul, like the sun, scatters blessings far and wide, and sends a copious influence.

A good minister adorns the doctrine of God, and proposes it in the most attractive light. His temper disinclines him to embrace the extreme of any controversy in religion, nor will he form his notions by the little rules of bigotry. Much less will he make the gospel an engine of contention, and be fond of bickering about such things as are hard to be understood, well remembering the apostle's instructions to Timothy, that the servant of the Lord must not needlessly strive, but be gentle towards all men. He abhors persecution even in the lowest forms, and maintains the least molestation for religious sentiments to be unwarrantable where they are not inconsistent with the rights of society. He persists not upon a precise uniformity in doctrine or manner of worship in order to his kind regards, but readily discharges the offices of humanity to such as differ most widely from him, and joins in sacred fellowship with those who profess and practice nothing incompatible with the being and happiness of a Christian, or the regular exercise of social acts of worship, endeavoring to keep the unity of spirit in the bonds of peace. In short, a generous temper runs through every branch of his conduct. He is given to hospitality, and his heart and house are open to every worthy guest so far as is consistent with his worldly circumstances and the duties of his station. He shows mercy to the distressed by his personal benefactions, according to his ability, and in stirring up others to be rich in good works: by this means upholding the fatherless, comforting the widow, clothing the naked, feeding the hungry, and becoming in a vast variety of respects a minister of God for good.

Hence he holds forth the Word of Life, in its original colors, as a system calculated to sweeten men's tempers and soften their manners. The religion of Jesus being thus delineated in its native attire, looks glorious and lovely, and can scarce fail of obtaining much influence over the heart of mankind. Such a clergyman must appear to the warmest unbeliever at least unworthy of the severe imputations cast upon the priesthood, and he will be ready to deem the religion which he inculcates and lives as worthy to be true, if it is not really, while those of weaker prejudices, not being able to resist so many charms, fully and cheerfully embrace Christianity, and give themselves up to its excellent dictates.

A good minister promotes the Kingdom of Christ in general by encouraging the hearts and strengthening the hands of those in the same order with himself.

He is so far from magnifying every small mistake in his brother to a fundamental and dangerous error, that though he wishes they might all think the same things, yet he willingly bears with a different judgment and embraces him as his fellow-laborer (finding in him a serious temper and godly life), and esteems him as acceptable to Christ, and worthy to be esteemed by man, and says with the apostle, Whereunto we have attained let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing.

As he indulges no unreasonable suspicions concerning his brother, so he insinuates none in the minds of his people, nor fulfils prejudice or heightens disaffection by exposing failings in private conduct, or exaggerating such as have been observed in public, which are reconcilable with integrity. Well knowing how dear every man's reputation is to him and what weight a minister's is to his usefulness, he studiously endeavors to confirm and increase it.

He will not invade another's charge to serve a cause of a party, or gratify a spirit of curiosity or malignity, but rather reprove such as are restless and uneasy under their pastor, who is faithful to his post, and assiduously labor to recover their affections to him, being conscious that this must tend much more to the good of those souls committed to his sacred care than any single ministration of his own under those disadvantageous circumstances.

In fine, the good minister is ready at all times to counsel and advise his brethren under difficulties, and assist in all exigencies.

Goodness multiplies a minister's opportunities of service by turning the eyes of societies upon him under embarrassments. He will be sought to for the repairing breaches, cementing parties, and restoring unity. Men even of impetuous tempers will find the necessity of calling in the mild and pacifick to heal the disorders which their wrath hath occasioned.

But I proceed to say, a goodness is of eminent advantage to a minister's usefulness among his own flock.

Here his chief business lies, and here his virtue is chiefly to be exerted. Let me be somewhat particular in the consideration of this head.

1. Goodness is a powerful incentive to continued diligence in his work. 'The soul, considered abstractively from its passions, is slow in its resolves, and languishing in its executions. But the passions stir it up to action in forcing the will and making the whole man more vigorous in the prosecution of his designs.' Now goodness being attended with a desire of the happiness of its object, must stimulate to go through the hardest duties, and to surmount the greatest obstacles to accomplish it, especially where nothing less than a blessed eternity depends upon its efforts. Many waters cannot quench this love, nor floods drown it; and a minister whose bosom glows with this flame will spend and be spent for souls. But it is further to be considered that goodness engrosses other passions in its cause, particularly fear and hope, two mighty springs of action. The former takes an alarm at every danger of a soul's miscarrying in the important affairs of salvation, the latter gives vivacity to the spirits in every prospect of refusing it from death, or carrying it on to sublimer heights of virtue. Both combine to waft the minister forward in his business and to prompt him to the discharge of his errand with unwearied ardor.

2. Goodness inclines the minister to the best methods of promoting religion.

Hereby will he be incited to treat chiefly upon such subjects in his publick preaching wherein the generality of Christians are agreed, and with which the salvation of souls is most intimately connected. The great and substantial things which are the most frequent subject of the Word of God will be oftenest insisted upon in his discourses. It will refrain him from making the pulpit a theatre of war. And when, in the course of his teaching, he handles such points as he judges subservient to godliness, but have been understood in a different sense, he will do it in so calm and rational a way as may enlighten, without exasperating. This will engage him to press the conditions of the gospel covenant and duties of the Christian religion with life and fervency. Being touched with the coal from the altar, and burning with love to souls, he will set the arguments of Revelation in the most moving light he is capable, and represent them in all the language of perfection, and speak with the tongue of a seraph, sent on an embassy from heaven.

As he is to go before his people in the administration of discipline, goodness will cause him solicitously to labor, that it be not attended with unnecessary rigor, and that nothing of a vindictive nature intermix itself therewith. He will be concerned that such a degree of tenderness be exercised with ecclesiastical censure as shall bid fair to impress it upon the heart of the offender, and recover him to a godly sorrow and amendment of life.

This virtue renders him easy of access at all times. It throws off anything haughty, severe, or any ways forbidding, and invites the burdened heart to open its nearest concern and discharge its grief.

This will not suffer him to become a party to civil broils where he can possibly escape ; yet will it put him upon the office of a peacemaker, from an abhorrence of contention and a prospect of its retarding the success of his ministry.

Do errors arise ? This will incline him to instruct in meekness those who oppose themselves, if peradventure God will give them repentance, in the acknowledgment of the truth, and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil who are led captive by him at his will.

This will not allow him to hate his brother in his heart by neglecting to reprove him ; yet where the fault and the temper require it, he will of choice discharge the duty with so much meekness of wisdom as to render the rebuke a real kindness and like an excellent oil.

In sum, this disposes the minister to speak a suitable word to weary souls. To encourage the despondent sinner to pursue his highest welfare, and wait upon God to fulfil the good pleasure of his goodness, “to revive the spirit of the contrite and heal the broken in heart,” to dispense needed support to the afflicted, the good minister is a son of consolation, and delights to give it to fit subjects. His tongue drops manna ; he can’t use harshness and severity with the trembling and bowed down ; he overlooks weakness, despises not the day of small things, but cultivates what is good, even as his Master brake not the bruised reed and quenched not the smoking flame.

3. Goodness conciliates the respect and affection of a people to their minister, which is an happy foundation for the success of his labor.

When this virtue is exercised with judgment it gives a dignity to a character, as well as beauty, and nothing in the whole circle of Christian graces yields so bright a lustre, or seizes or draws the mind with such irresistible power. A minister, therefore, who hath in this manner captivated his audience, is in the best condition to do them real service. Their ears are open to take the whole counsel of God ; their attention to it is doubled ; every word comes with its due emphasis. Then, if ever, may we expect they will give divine truths their proper weight, and receive into their souls the engrafted Word which is able to save them.

Thus largely have I considered the tendency of goodness to a minister's usefulness. I might now go on to show :

3. That a minister's comfort much depends upon and is promoted by goodness.

It secures him greatly from enemies and gains him friends. It keeps his mind serene under the difficulties of his post, and the opposition and reproach he may sometimes meet with in the conscientious discharge of his duty. It qualifies him to taste the true pleasures of society, while a consciousness of it in his course of ministerial action is a spring of continual high satisfaction. But I hasten to add :

4. Goodness is of great importance to the glorious rewards of a minister.

The exercise of the various offices of love is effectual to true religion. Nor are there any greater commandments than those which respect it. But it is those only who do the will of God from the heart that shall enter into the kingdom of heaven. This is not only necessary by the wise appointment of God, but in the nature of the thing, particularly with respect to the virtue before us.

For love is a constituent of the happiness of the kingdom of glory, which results very much from the blissful society there. So whoever has no affection to intelligent beings here cannot enjoy them there. Goodness, therefore, is absolutely requisite to a minister in his special work, in order to his giving up his account with joy and participating in the blessedness of the upper world, reserved for the peculiar servants of Christ. For this is an universal principle, and leads men to a diversity of duties agreeable to the calls of Providence and their character. In consequence it is as incumbent upon a minister that he performs the peculiar business assigned him under the habitual influence of goodness, in order to the rewards of grace, as that the private Christian discharge the more common duties of his station from a regard to the welfare of mankind. Nor otherwise does he fulfil his ministry, nor can he ever expect the approbation of his Master and an admission into his everlasting kingdom. But 'tis time that I proceed to some improvement of this subject.

And will the ministers of Christ here present, in the exercise of that goodness which I have been recommending, forgive me while, forgetful one moment of my age, I apply this discourse to them. It is very natural for you (my fathers and brethren) to compare the spirit and conduct which hath been considered with that, which your acquaintance with ecclesiastical history must suggest to you hath prevailed in the church of Christ. And it is a very melancholy reflection which you must make, that goodness has been almost as much neglected by the greater part of professing Christians as though it was no branch of our religion.

This in connection with the predictions of the Scriptures concerning the prosperous reign of Christ in the later days inclines you to expect and pray for a better state of things. But to prayers should not their attempts be added which bid fair for the hastening so delightful a scene.—particularly by the cultivation and exercise of moderation and charity, which will be grand ingredients in the glory of that illustrious period. For, as a great divine of the last age hath observed, “The true happiness of that season is not to be measured by formalities and opinions: unshaken devotion, purity of heart and innocence of life, by faithfulness, common charity, cheerful obedience to superiors, abundance of kindness and discreet condescension one to another, in unspotted righteousness and unshaken peace, in the removal of every unjust yoke, in mutual forbearance, and bearing up one another as living stones of that temple where there is not to be heard the noise of axe or hammer, no squabble or clamor about forms and opinions, but a peaceable study and endeavor of provoking one another to love and good works.”

But however strong the general argument to goodness is, yet there are others which come nearer home and more particularly urge us to it.

The present circumstances of the church in this land address us to act under the most lively influence of this heavenly disposition.

We have been greatly afflicted, tossed with tempest, and are comforted. The divisions and factions among us have been high and numerous, and though they are much abated, yet there some uneasiness and the voice of complaining, like the hoarse murmurs of the sea after a long storm. Goodness, guided by discretion, must hush the angry passions and calm the discontents which still remain.

Suffer me to remind you, my fathers, of the low ebb of vital virtue amongst us. A generous, kind treatment of one another is a rare thing. Now what shall we do to revive the primitive spirit and practice of Christianity? Is it enough that we preach its excellency and inculcate its necessity? Will this be likely to succeed without we go before our people in shining instances of benevolence and illustrate its beauty by our own example? And particularly as to that part of charity which goes under the denomination of alms (in which even professing Christians are very deficient, notwithstanding the solemn declaration of Scripture on this head). Of what consequence is it that we incite them to it by forwarding all publick schemes of this nature, as well as by our benefactions to particular persons in their exigencies? And could we, in the visitation to the poor of our flocks, under their distress in addition to the spiritual things which we dispense, communicate to them our carnal, it would be acting in character, and might be of eminent service to their souls, as well as bodies. How happy it would be for us, and our people, if our worldly circumstance would admit of large donations. But let even those in the meanest situation do what they can, being willing to deny themselves some pleasures of life for this end, that Christ may say to them, as to the angels of the church of Christ, "I know thy poverty, but thou art rich."

Let me hint to you that our lot has fallen in an age when revealed religion is looked upon by some in a very contemptible light, and the ministers of Christ as a publick nuisance. Is it not worthy of inquiry whether this hath not greatly arose from the narrow spirit of some ministers and the contentions amongst ourselves. And if so, nothing will tend so much to recover the credit of the gospel and the preachers of it as catholicism and love. This will do more than all the engines of craft or power.

Shall I renew your sorrow by mentioning the removal of sundry ministers of Christ as a quickening motive to goodness. The fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live forever? It is not long since the venerable Cushing was taken from our head, as it were, to lead the way to others who were younger. Peabody soon followed, with Jefferds, his contemporary. And must I add Peabody the son, in whom we hope to see the father long surviving? These were men who seemed to have imbibed much of the genius of the gospel. Their faces shone not more with wisdom than benignity; the law of kindness was upon their tongues, and their whole deportment was candor and generous. Their fellow-laborers in the gospel, by the loss of so much goodness to the church, are stimulated to exercise it more intensely themselves; while methinks these ascended servants of God, in the perfection of his grace and a fullness of joy, are loudly calling to us from the excellent glory to pursue their steps.

But I must hasten to address myself to you, sir, who are to presently take part in the gospel ministry with us.

The subject which hath been proposed as matter of our thoughts cannot be judged by you, who are acquainted with the gospel, either trifling in itself or impertinent to the tradition before you. May it sink deep into your heart, and have a happy influence upon your whole conduct. Your abilities to teach are well known and approved of by such as hear you. But the brightest talents, without goodness, constitute but a very low ministerial character. Though I speak with the tongues of men and angels (says the apostle), and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and have no charity, I am nothing. But we hope better things of you, sir, even that with gifts you have this grace, also, yet would I put you in remembrance that you stir it up. To this end you must converse much with the gospel, not only with a view to your people, but your personal virtue, and by incessant prayer be drawing down the influences of the divine spirit.

It was your happiness in your younger years to sit under the ministry of one remarkable for this amiable quality, the late Rev. Caleb Cushing of Salisbury. Should not you account your past situation a talent improvable to great proficiency in this virtue, inasmuch as the earliest impressions are generally deep and lasting, and the example of one who is looked upon as a father must be peculiarly striking.

The work you are engaging in is full of difficulties, but goodness will arm you with fortitude in meeting them, and even inspire you with alacrity in going through them. Nothing is like it to make your work easy.

May the spirit which descended on your Lord and Master, like a gentle dove, on the day of his inauguration into his public ministry, fall on you this day, that, being full of goodness, your life may be exceedingly fruitful in the acts of it. And may you at length reach the world above, where your charity shall exist to immortal ages, where your faith is expired in virtue, and your hope is swallowed up in enjoyment.

From the pastor elect of this people I may, by an easy transition, proceed to apply myself to them who are presently to be committed to his care.

Beloved Brethren: As this is the day of the gladness of your hearts, on account of your happy prospects, so do we rejoice in your behalf. A good minister is a rich blessing; and such we hope you are about to receive. As he is to labor among you in the offices of goodness, so in return show kindness to him. Your affections seem warm towards him now; let them continue so. Time is apt to cool the love of a people to their teacher: let yours grow warmer, as the longer he ministers to you in fidelity the more worthy he will be of it. Overlook his failings in the performance of his duty, for he pretends not to perfection. Comfort him under troubles: make the best of his services. There are some so abandoned as even to trample on goodness. God forbid it should be so here. Yet if such arise, and set themselves carelessly against your minister, take his part, and leave him not to combat the sons of darkness alone. Encourage him in perplexities.

Your beginning in this place, my brethren, was small, but your latter end hath heartily increased. And now you are honoring the Lord with your substance, by making a good provision for the support of his servant: yet let me ask it of you, superadd your private benefactions. Even the smallest presents from parishioners, as they are testimonials of respect and love, are exceedingly pleasant. Let him be always remembered in your prayers. This I dare say he judges the true goodness, and earnestly desires of you. Be solicitous to gladden his heart by profiting under his ministry. Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, in which ye are called in one body. Maintain that union in him which at present is so grateful to us all, and must be so advantageous to yourselves. Let me leave with you the words of the apostle to the Thessalonians: "We beseech you, brethren, to know them who labor among you and are over you in the Lord and admonish you: and to esteem them very highly in love for their works' sake, and be at peace among yourselves."

I will now conclude with a word to the people of various flocks convened on this occasion in this house.

You are very forward, my brethren, to attend such solemnities as this, I would hope from an aim of receiving some benefit yourselves. By the discourses at such seasons you cannot but perceive that we do not lay burdens upon you, which we think ourselves excused from touching with one of our fingers. Instead of this, although we affirm your obligations to virtue to be indispensable, yet we allow that there are additional ones lying upon us of peculiar force. Perhaps, therefore, you may the more readily hearken to the exhortation to goodness, after you have heard it dispensed to your minister.

Let me, then, repeat the charge that has been often given to you, to put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. Detest a little spirit, concerned for none but yourselves. Love not every man as his own things, but every man also at the things of others. Let the same mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus. Abound in a liberal distribution to the necessitous, even as Christ, who was rich, for our sakes became poor, that we, through his poverty, might be rich. Put on, as the cleft of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long suffering, forbearing one another in love if any man have a quarrel against any, even as Christ hath forgiven you, so also do ye. And walk in universal love, as Christ hath also loved you, and given himself for you, an offering to God, of a sweet smelling savor.

Were these evangelical precepts complied with, what a pleasant revolution there would be among us! All men would be as brethren, and all contiguous societies as one family. A continued series of good offices would make a life pass away in a rapture, and earth would resemble heaven.

And necessity is laid upon you thus to comply with these exhortations of the gospel, as ever you would be denominated or accepted as the true subjects of it.

Your faith is vain if it does not work by love; your devotion is hypocrisy if it is not attended with charity; your profession is a lie if you walk not in him who was full of grace. O, then, be concerned that your souls be purified in obeying the truth, through the spirit of unfeigned love of the brethren. See to it that ye love one another, with a pure heart, fervently. Then, being followers of God, who is love, and Jesus Christ, who is his express image, you shall at length arrive at the seat of the blessed, and associating with myriads of angels and saints, with all of the endearments of refined and perfect friendship, you shall with them ascribe blessing and honor, and glory and power, unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb, for ever and ever.

During the pastorate of Rev. Henry True, eighty-three members were received to the church. He died suddenly Tuesday morning, May 22, 1782, having preached the Sunday before.

From 1782 to 1792 the church called five ministers, who all declined the charge, as follows:—

July 9, 1786, voted, “to invite Mr. Tilly Howe to take the pastoral care and oversight of this church.”

Oct. 10, 1787, voted “unanimously to join with the Congregation to giving Mr. Joshua Langdon a call to settle with us in the work of the Ministry.”

Aug. 1, 1788, voted, “to make choice of Mr. Jacob Cram to be the pastor of this church.”

Feb. 19, 1789, voted, “to make choice of Rev'd John Wilbur as pastor of this church.”

Nov. 24, 1789, voted, “Invited Rev. Ashabi Allen to settle in the work of the ministry and to take the oversight of this church.”

SECOND PASTORATE.

Sept. 21, 1792, voted and unanimously made choice of Rev. John Kelly as pastor of the church. (The letters of acceptance of Rev. Henry True and Rev. John Kelly are given on pages 208, 209, Memorial History, Vol. 1.)

November 14th, 1792, at a church meeting held at the house of Major Moses Little, "Voted, that John Calfe be moderator."

2d. "Voted, to join in the following council in the ordination of Mr. John Kelly, viz: The church in Chester, E. Flagg, pastor; the church in Salem, A. Bayley, P.; the 1st chh. in Wells, M. Hemmenway, D. D., P.; the North chh. in Haverhill & Plaistow, Giles Merrill, pastor; the chh. in Southampton, N. Noyes, P.; the chh. in Haverhill, West Parish, P. Adams, P.; the chh. in Kingston, E. Thayer, P.; the 1st chh. in Haverhill, J. Shaw, P.; the chh. in Atkinson, S. Peabody, P.; the 1st chh. in Bradford, J. Allen, P.; the 1st chh. in Boxford, P. Eaton, pastor; the 2d chh. in Amesbury, F. Welch, pastor."

"The ordination appointed to be on Wednesday, the 5th day of December, 1792."

"On the 5th day of December, 1792, all of the churches who had received letters from the church sent their pastors and delegates, except the church in Southampton and the church in Kingston. (These two were called to dismiss the Rev'd Mr. Tappan.) The council then convened, chose the Rev'd Ebenezer Flagg, moderator, the Rev'd Jonathan Allen, scribe, and the Rev'd Abner Bayley made a prayer preceding any further transaction of the council.

And then, after the usual business of such ecclesiastical councils was attended to, they proceeded to the meeting house, and there the Rev. Mr. Flagg, as moderator, desired the church to renew the call and the pastor elect to renew his answer, which was accordingly done.

Rev. Mr. Shaw introduced the solemnity of prayer. Rev.

Mr. Hemmenway preached the sermon, Rev. Mr. Adams made the ordaining prayer, Rev. Mr. Merrill gave the charge, Rev. Mr. Peabody gave the right hand of fellowship, and the Rev. Mr. Allen concluded with prayer."

"The sermon preached by Moses Hemmenway, D. D., pastor of the First Church in Wells, Mass. (now Maine), MDCXCIII., at the ordination of Rev. John Kelly, which was printed in Dover by Eliphalet Ladd, at his printing house near the Court House."

PREFACE.

The author hopes that the candid reader will excuse the liberty he has taken in inserting some passages in this discourse, which, for want of time, were not delivered.

AN ORDINATION SERMON.

"Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord."—Philippians iii. 8.

The father of spirits has not only given us an understanding superior to the beasts and fowls, but has also implanted within us a strong desire of knowledge. The knowledge of truth is indeed the end of our intellectual faculties, and the common sense of mankind accords with that ancient and divine maxim, "That the heart be without knowledge it is not good."

But is it unhappiness of many, that while they imagine themselves pursuing knowledge with success, they are only chasing a phantom? The treasures of wisdom with which they imagine themselves enriched are indeed nuisances, encumbering and debasing their minds. A great part of what passes for valuable knowledge is false or useless notions, and even that which might be useful, if rightly improved, often becomes useless and even hurtful, for want of that governing and directing wisdom which is the principal thing.

It is, then, a capital point of true wisdom to understand that knowledge is the most excellent and of greatest importance to us—a point on which mankind have been much divided in judgment.

And if it now be asked to which of the saints or sages we now shall turn that we may consult them on this great question, methinks the judgment of our apostle Paul is highly worthy of our attention. A man so well acquainted not only with the Christian doctrine, but also with the learning which was most esteemed and cultivated, but who was besides enlightened and moved by divine inspiration. We have his judgment plainly expressed in our text—"I count all things but lost for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus our Lord."

It was not from ignorance of the nature and value of those accomplishments which men are wont to esteem that he speaks of them in such disparaging terms, for he was bold to declare that if any thought they had whereof they might glory in the flesh he would vie with them. But when he became acquainted with the character of Christ, and the manifold wisdom and glory of God as displayed in the gospel, those things which before were gain to him and matter of glory, he then counted but lost for Christ. "He held them in vile esteem."

For a man of such accomplishments to thus undervalue as dross and dung as soon as he obtained the knowledge of Christ, willing to suffer the loss of all things that he might win him, is something so remarkable that it seems worthy to be inquired into and examined. May I not then rely upon your attention while I shall, First, endeavor to explain and state the true meaning of the assertion in the text, and then.

Secondly, Examine the grounds of it whether it appears the apostle had reason on his side, and wherein spake the words of truth and soberness. And,

Finally, Offer some reflections which may be pertinent to the argument and adapted to the present occasion.

That we may rightly apprehend the spirit and meaning of the apostle's words, it is to be observed that the knowledge of Christ, in the sense here intended, comprehended the whole gospel-doctrine. As Christ is the Author, so is he the great subject of the Gospel. All its doctrine and precepts have respect to him and serve to display the excellent glory of his person, character, operations and achievements. It is from Christ, the Son of righteousness as exhibited in the Gospel, that light shines in upon this dark world.

We may further note that though the truths exhibited to our view in the Gospel are matters of truth, our assent to them being grounded upon the testimony of God, yet a divine thing is knowledge in the account of the apostles. The distinction which some make between knowledge and faith is not admitted in the sacred writings. The knowledge of Christ and the faith of Christ signify the same. True Christians are described as those who believe and know the truth. And Peter, professing his faith, says we believe and are sure or know that thou art the Christ. The testament of God affirming the truth of the Gospel is assured a foundation of assent as any demonstration. The apostle's faith in Christ was not a wavering, doubtful opinion. It was knowledge. And they who have obtained precious faith who believe in Christ and the truth of the Gospel on proper evidence, no longer being in sceptical suspense, but may say say with the apostle, "I know whom I have believed."

It was not then a dead, inefficient faith, which has no sanctifying influence upon the heart and life, but it was such a knowledge of the true God and of Jesus Christ, as is eternal life, as which the worth of our text are to be understood—such a knowledge as is the effect of a special illumination and teaching of the spirit of God, enabling believers to discern spiritual things in a spiritual manner: to discern the excellency, as well as the certainty, of the great truths of the Gospel.

This, then, I conceive was that knowledge of Christ of which the apostle is speaking, and which he esteemed so excellent that in comparison with it he despised all things in which men are wont to glory, accounting them but as dross and dung.

Such were the sentiments of the apostles: such the sentiments of every true Christian. Very different indeed from the apprehensions of some, who have no mean opinion of their own understanding. Give me leave now to examine a little as was proposed in the second place, what reasons the apostles had in the sentiments here expressed, and whether reason, being judge, he spoke the words of truth and soberness.

Reason must appear that that knowledge is the most excellent which has the most excellent, important, and joyful truths for its object, which is sufficient to direct and enable us to attain the highest end and perfection of our natures, that is to be wise to salvation, which is conveyed to us in such a way and with such evidences as are best adapted to answer the most excellent and desirable purposes, and which has been most effective to deliver mankind from sin and misery and make them good and happy.

In the knowledge of Christ and those truths which are brought to light by the Gospel appear to have all the excellencies meeting and concentrating in us the apostle has had reason to set a low value on all other knowledge and accomplishments in comparison with this. And not to be ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, in which are hidden all treasures of wisdom and knowledge, and which is the power of God to salvation, to every one that believeth: but on the contrary, determine not to know anything but Jesus Christ and him crucified.

1. The knowledge of Christ has for its object the most excellent and important truths, an acquaintance with which yields more benefit and comfort to us than any other about which our minds can be occupied. This knowledge is indeed the one thing needful which crowns and perfects all other knowledge and renders it really valuable and useful and a matter of joy to us. He who is ignorant of the great truths contained in the Gospel has no knowledge of the sake of which it were desirable to have the understanding of a man.

Every man of reason and reflection will agree that the knowledge of God and ourselves is the most excellent and important and necessary that our minds are capable of. Our rational faculties were given to us chiefly to this end, that we might acquaint ourselves with God, glorify and delight ourselves in him. And it is impossible for us to know ourselves while ignorant of God. For our relations to and concerns with him give us all of our importance. Unless we view ourselves as the creatures of God, under his moral government, we cannot understand the end of which our distinguishing faculties and capacities are designed—our natures, our very existence must appear utterly vain, unaccountable, of no importance.

Now it is from the Gospel alone that we derive all that knowledge of God and ourselves which can give us true comfort or benefit.

It is from the manifestation which God has made of himself in the gospel that we obtain the true knowledge of him; such a knowledge I mean as is needful to direct and encourage us to render to him an acceptable worship and service and be happy in his favor. If we know more concerning God than the light of nature discovers, we are ignorant of the most glorious part of the divine character; ignorant of his grandest and most beautiful works, in which he has abounded in all wisdom and prudence; ignorant of that revelation of his will which alone furnishes us with a solid foundation of comfort in this life and hope beyond the grave, and directs us in what way eternal blessedness is to be sought and may be obtained by the children of men.

It is true the heavens declare the glory of God. His eternal power and God-head are clearly to be seen from the works of creation. The light of nature furnishes us with certain evidence that there is a God, a great first cause of all things, who is eternal, independent, powerful, intelligent and wise, and that he is also righteous and good; that he exercises all moral government over mankind, who have the work of moral law written in their hearts. The dictates of natural conscience are the voice of God declaring what is the duty which he requires of us, and what we are to expect as a reward of our obedience or disobedience to his laws thus notified to us. This is for substance what reason discovers concerning the perfections, character and will of God. And if mankind were perfectly righteous this character of the deity might be a proper object, or delightful contemplation, worship and communion to them.

But it is a plain, stubborn fact, that mankind are in a state of moral depravity. All have sinned and come short of the glory of God. And whatever some pretend of the sufficiency of the light of reason to direct men to virtue and happiness, they have been generally so stupidly blind and inattentive that if the knowledge of God and the principles of natural religion had not been preserved by means of supernatural revelation, it would seem as if there was danger of its being quite lost out of the world. But however this may be, if a sinner knows no more concerning God than what nature teaches, his knowledge will yield him no comfort or benefit. To know that he is in the hands of a holy and just God, of whose righteous law he is a transgressor, whose nature and will are in the strongest opposition to sin, who upholds a sinner with great displeasure, and judges him worthy of death, and has condemned him by the sentence of his conscience, this must be so far from being a matter of comfort to him that it must make him extremely miserable. Reason teaches that there is a just God, who is very angry with the wicked, able and ready to punish them according to their deserts, but it makes no discovery of pardoning mercy. Now such a view of God must not only fill a sinner with most fearful and tormenting apprehensions, but it carries no invitations and encouragements to repentance, to hopes of pardon, and a recovering of a divine favor. It would rather tend to increase the sinner's aversion to him as an enemy, and to dispose him to shun all acquaintance with him.

The light of nature indeed teaches us that God is good and merciful, as well as just, and some are ready to presume that they have nothing to fear from a good and merciful God. But goodness stands in the strongest opposition to sin, as inimical to the happiness of the universe. It burns with resentment and abhorrence against it, and its sword is no less terrible and flaming than the sword of justice; and though we see that God is merciful to sinners, and is long suffering towards them, yet whether it be consistent with honor of his moral character, and the interest of his kingdom, that sinners be forgiven and to escape that punishment which they deserve, reason cannot determine. If men imagine to themselves a God of such goodness and mercy as not to be displeased at sin, or punish it with all of that severity with which his honor and the general good requires, it is not right reason, but vain presumption that has suggested such a notion.

That view of the perfection and character of God which the light of reason exhibits is indeed exceeding glorious and majestic. But this glory and majesty appears so terrible to a guilty creature that he cannot bear to behold it. It is death and hell to such a one to know that there is a holy and just God, who is highly and justly displeased with the wicked, and that to him belong vengeance and recompense. So that though reason in discovering the being and perfection of God, discovers a most glorious and excellent object, yet that knowledge of God which a sinner has answerable to these discoveries, if he knows not that there is forgiveness with him, which most important and amiable art of the divine character is brought to light only by the gospel. The sinner's mere natural knowledge of God, I say, could be no comfort and benefit to him, but rather fill him with tormenting remorse, anguish, dread and aversion.

How far the light of nature can help us to the knowledge of God has been considered. Let us now inquire how far it can help us to know ourselves. It discovers, indeed, very clearly that we are moral agents, under the moral government of God, capable of happiness, or misery, sinful mortals, etc. But without giving a detail of the observation which philosophers have made on the nature and state of mankind, the knowledge of these things can afford us no substantial comfort or benefit unless we could find good reason to hope that we may be delivered from that state of sin, guilt and misery in which we find ourselves, and attain to a state of true righteousness and blessedness in the favor of God. But such a ground of hope, reason discovers not—whatever presumptions and probabilities it may suggest in favor of a future life after death, it gives no information of a state of happiness for a sinner beyond the grave, but rather suggests the justest grounds for most anxious and fearful apprehensions to a guilty conscience. The more we know of ourselves by the mere light of nature the more our fears and sorrows must naturally increase.

How much reason have we, then, to highly prize the gospel, which alone furnishes sinners with such knowledge of God and themselves as not only most excellent and important in itself, but quite changes that sad and alarming aspect of things exhibited. The gospel not only contains plainer and more distinct revelation and perfections of the will of God than reason can discern by the light of nature, but has also brought to view a most glorious and amiable part of the divine character which nature's light did not reveal, the knowledge of which was necessary in order to our taking true comfort or deriving substantial benefit from all our other knowledge necessary to relieve a sinner under anguish, arising from a sense of guilt, necessary to his drawing near to God, beholding his glory, contemplating his perfections, and having delightful acquaintance and communion with him. And that is that there is forgiveness with him, that he retaineth not his anger forever, for he delighteth in mercy, that he is in Christ the father of mercies, reconciling the world to himself, not imputing their trespasses to them. It is the gospel only that teaches us that the just God is the Saviour. Here only we find the gracious, inviting name of God, which holds forth encouragement to us to return to him by repentance, to rejoice in the hope of his favor, to trust in him, and fly to the shadow of his wings for protection. To the gospel, then, we are beholden for our most glorious and amiable views of the divine character, and indeed for all of that knowledge of God which can give comfort and joy, that knowledge which throws light on the dark side of things. In the gospel we see light breaking forth and shining out of darkness, and that God is light and no darkness at all. Well, then, may the believer say with exalting joy, "This God is our God forever, our God, our glory." That knowledge which is the only true God, the eternal life, includes in it the knowledge of Jesus Christ, whom he has sent, and in whom he alone he has truly revealed himself as the object of our faith, worship and happiness. Unbelievers are accordingly described in Scripture as those who know not God and have not seen him.

The gospel opens to view the scheme of Providence in which the divine perfection and character appear in the general majesty, glory and beauty. If we consider the work of our redemption by Christ in its distinct parts, and these parts in the connection and relation to each other and to the whole scheme, and forming one grand system. If we contemplate the glory of the divine redeemer, his person, character, offices, performances, with the issue and results of the whole, the great salvation which he has effected, the way and means by which he has procured and in which it is applied, how effectually the son of God is destroying the work of the devil, and has opened a way in which the richest of divine grace and beauty are flowing down on the guilty and miserable, raising them from the abyss of wretchedness and death to glory, honor and immortality, raising a new and more glorious creation from the confusion and chaos of a ruined world, and all to the glory of God the Father, what sublime, glorious, and important discoveries are these! With the knowledge of these the soul of the believer is fed, is feasted, is exalted and ennobled.

Every one of right state must be greatly delighted with the knowledge of such excellent and sublime truths. If our private interest had been less concerned in them we should have reason to highly esteem the knowledge of Christ as furnishing us with the matter of a most noble and delightful contemplation. The angels desire to look into these things, but we have the more reason to value their knowledge above all others since the great work of redemption was planned for the salvation of man. The great Immanuel is our redeemer, and the Saviour assumed our nature: labored and suffered for us, was delivered for our offences, and ruled again for our justification. The gospel shows us the way in which alone we can be delivered from a state of sin and misery and obtain true righteousness and felicity. In precepts are the law of our lives, its promises and doctrines the foundation of our joy and hopes beyond death—in a word, it is a charter of our privileges. It is the instrument in the mind of the holy spirit by which the divine life is generated and maintained and we are prepared for heaven.

By the help of that light which the gospel holds forth a Christian may also know himself to his comfort and advantage, but though by sin he is a child of death, yet through faith in the righteousness of Christ he is so united to him as to receive righteousness and life from him, and so is pardoned and restored to the favor of God, and as an adopted child is a joint heir with Christ to the heavenly inheritance. That the mortal wound which by sin he has given himself is healing,—that sin and death will at length be abolished in him and swallowed up in victory,—by a gospel, too, as a rule and faithful mirror, we may be informed by our true character and state by looking into this law of liberty and comparing ourselves with it we may learn what manner of persons we are.

might obtain by the light of gospel truth would be for their comfort and improvement cannot now be further insisted on.

II. The excellency of the gospel and the knowledge of Christ therein exhibited therein appears, in that it is sufficient to direct, is how we may escape from the misery and wretchedness of a state of sin and attain to a state of complete, everlasting holiness and blessedness. If we have this knowledge it will make us truly wise. It will guide and enable us to obtain the highest good, perfection, and end of our nature. Other knowledge, however useful it may be to subserve the lower purposes and occupations of life, yet will eventually be of no substantial advantage to those who miss of salvation, and to perish miserably. Without this wisdom, which is the principal thing, all our knowledge and accomplishments become vain and worthless to us, and must soon perish with us. The insufficiency of the light of nature to guide a sinner to true virtue and happiness has been noticed. And therefore, though the knowledge of the principles of natural religion is of great importance and use, when joined with the knowledge of Christ and the truths of the gospel, and since it gives a sinner no assurance that salvation is obtainable, or in what way he has encouragement to seek or hope for acceptance with God, natural religion is therefore insufficient, as a rule, to direct us how we may have peace with God and be happy in his favor, without a well grounded persuasion of the pardoning mercy of God, of which the gospel only assures us of our knowledge of the principles of natural religion, instead of showing how we may obtain happiness, can only discover our sin and misery, and so increase our sorrow. But the gospel is a complete and sufficient rule of faith and practice. It contains all the instruction we need in order to our salvation. It assures us that there is salvation for the chief of sinners through Christ. It teaches us how God is just in justifying them for the sake of the Redeemer's merits, that it is by faith in him that we have access to his grace. Our obligations and encouragements to repent of sin and turn to God, to deny ungodliness and every worldly lust, and live soberly, righteously and godly in the world, are fully and plainly and most forcibly represented. The manner in which we may worship God acceptably, the ordinances and instrumental duties in which we are to seek him, and in which he will draw near to us and bless us, are here fully declared. In a word, the doctrines, precepts, promises and threatenings of the gospel are sufficient to instruct a Christian fully in his religious and spiritual discernments, and furnish him with all of the duties and enjoyments of his heavenly calling. In this respect the knowledge of Christ and the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven far surpasses in excellence all the wisdom of the children of men.

III. It is a further argument or evidence of the excellency in the gospel that the truths it reveals are proposed to us in such a manner, confirmed with such evidence, and accompanied with such divine influence on the minds and hearts of the children of men.

It may be counted an excellency of the gospel revelation that God, in his goodness and wisdom, has proposed and delivered his will in writing, moving and inspiring holy men to record divine oracles as a rule of faith and practice for all succeeding ages. This is much better adapted than oral tradition to preserve a divine revelation and transmit it, uncorrupt, to remote nations and successive generations: and if men expected immediate revelations, impostures and enthusiasts would have a great advantage to deceive mankind with vain pretences. The plainness with which those things are delivered which are of the greatest and most general importance is also to be noticed as an excellency of the Christian revelation, whereby it is fitted to convey that instruction to persons of weak understanding which is most necessary for them.

And though some truths which are also of great use are more darkly proposed, but plain truths are sometimes expressed in a way not easy to our understanding, this does not lessen the excellence and usefulness of the gospel revelation. But several important advantages arise from this very circumstance which some are ready to complain of.

I say this is no objection to the divine excellency and divine original, unless it be, though an objection against the divine wisdom and goodness of providence, that many points of knowledge for the great use and improvement, comfort, and even preservation of life, are not acquired without much attention and diligence. And unless reason, principles of and the natural religion be objected to, because many important truths in morality will not be discovered or understood without careful and close attention. It must indeed be difficult for low, stupid, gross minds to understand sublime, heavenly and spiritual doctrines, however plainly they are expressed. Nor will it be easy for those who are children of knowledge, and have scarce learned the rudiments of Christianity, to digest the strong meat which is provided for men of full age: the forms of expression in ancient writings will also seem hard to those who are not acquainted with them. And we all know how prejudice darkens the mind. But we may also suppose that some truths are more darkly expressed to exercise our diligence in searching them out, for it is the will of God that we seek for wisdom as for silver, and dig for it as for hidden treasures. And this leads me to observe that the more obscure passages are productive of important advantages beyond what a revelation plain in all of its parts to a meanest capacity could have afforded. For by searching the Scriptures we find out what we do not understand, we become better acquainted and furnished with what we do understand.

And besides, we find that the knowledge acquired by close and painful attention is ordinarily more firmly fixed and thoroughly wrought into our minds, and further, it was fit that suitable instruction be adapted to different capacities. It may be added that some things, particularly in the prophecies which are yet to be fulfilled, seem to have been obscurely expressed, because it was not designed that they should be distinctly understood till they should be explained by the events of Providence. The sublime majesty and force of language which distinguishes many parts of the inspired writings might also be mentioned as an excellency in the manner in which divine truths are proposed to us, and a mark of the heavenly original. Which leads us to observe that the evidence confirming the truth of the gospel which conveys to us the knowledge of Christ is a great argument of its excellency. This evidence is the testimony of God himself to the truth of it. No argument can be plainer, none more convincing and conclusive. A child can understand and feel the force of it, and the greatest master of reasoning can propose no stronger or more perfect demonstration. The testimony God has given in the clearest and most striking manner, by a visible descent of the Holy Ghost upon Christ, by a voice from heaven, "This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased: hear him." By the miracles wrought by Christ, by raising him from the dead, by receiving him up into heaven by the light of many spectators, by enabling the apostles to speak all manner of tongues and work the most astonishing miracles in the name of Jesus, by giving the gospel a miraculous propagation, without any external compulsion or worldly allurements or advantages, and by instruments weak, mean and contemptible in the eyes of the world, and that in opposition to all of the vices, lusts, prejudices, false philosophy, superstition, witchcraft, and state policy in the world, supported by the civil authority with all of the terrors of penal and sanguinary laws executed upon the Christians in numberless influences, with unexampled severity and cruelty.

These it is to be remembered are facts which, upon the severest examinations, are found to be supported with accumulated evidence. They are reflected by many eye witnesses, whose writings exhibit the marks of a sound, good understanding, strict integrity, sincere and fervent piety, who at last sealed their testimony with their blood. They are facts which the ancient adversaries of Christianity never, that we can find, undertook to confute, or even ventured to deny many of the most important of them, though they had every advantage and inducement to have done this if they had not been incontestibly true, and some of the most intelligent of them did even acknowledge the miracles wrought in confirmation of Christianity, as their writing declare.

I might add that the efficacy which the gospel has upon the temper and lives by whom it has been received in faith and love is a most important evidence that it is from God. A divine power has attended it, working a great and divine change in the hearts of men, turning them from the darkness to light, and from the power of satan to God, making them new creatures, raising the most wretched slaves of sin to a heavenly temper and conversation, filling them with the fruits of the Spirit, in all goodness, righteousness and truth. A true Christian has a witness in himself that the gospel is divine truth. The blessed change which he finds in himself leaves no room to doubt that the gospel, by means that has been effected, is the power of God to salvation to every one that believeth, to conversion of a sinner to God, is a glorious work of divine power, by which he gives testimony to the truth of Christianity. But this will hereafter be further considered.

Besides the eternal proofs of the truths of the Christian doctrine, the gospel carries in and upon itself the evidences of its divine original. The consistency of the Christian scheme with itself and with every other known truth is a strong presumption that it is true and divine, for by certain fatality the reveries of enthusiasts and the devices of impostors will run crooked and inconsistent. That the gospel is not calculated to serve the selfish views of pride, covetousness and sensuality, but is utterly opposed to them, is a strong evidence that it is no contrivance of worldly craft, which is a further and great presumption in its favor; the purity and the holiness of its precepts and practical rules, which teach us to deny all ungodliness and every worldly lust, and live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, shows that it is worthy of God according to the clearest and surest of notions which we can form of him, and is calculated to form mankind to such a right temper and behavior as the reason and conscience of every man must approve. Whence then could such a religion be thought to derive its original but from God, the stamp of whose moral perfections is so plainly visible upon it, but the transcendently generous and amiable character of God, which is displayed and demonstrated by the doctrines and facts exhibited in the gospel, a character in which infinite wisdom, power, holiness and goodness are joined with grace and mercy, which grants pardon and salvation to the most guilty and miserable—a character which right reason must acknowledge surpasses in glory all that is called God, all that the light of nature can discover, which is such an evidence of the divinity of the gospel as must carry conviction to every rational mind that duly attends to it. For what can be more absurd than to imagine that imposture or enthusiasm can draw a more amiable and perfect character of God than reason itself? Finally, the prophecies of future events, which are utterly beyond the discernments of human sagacity, and which the history and present state of the world shows to have been exactly fulfilled, these are such a seal of the divine inspiration of the Scriptures as cannot be counterfeited, for it is as impossible for an inspired man to be the author of these prophecies as it is for chance to create a world.

So that if we will but duly attend to the contents of the Christian revelation we need be at no loss who is its author. Like the creation, it is a work that fathers itself, and the blindness of infidels who see not these evidences of divinity no more prove that they are not real and visible than the blindness of atheists proves that the power and wisdom of God are not seen in the works of creation.

But though the evidences of the truth and divinity of the gospel are so clear and strong, yet they are not apprehended so as to force conviction upon the minds of all to whom they are proposed, for the minds of men are so blinded and their hearts so hardened in sin that there must be a special influence of grace and spirit of God to give them a saving knowledge of Christ and the truth as is in him. An honest heart, a right spirit, a fair mind, is the effect of this divine influence: without the truth will not be embraced with faith and love. But when the mind is opened, and the heart reconciled to the light of the truth, its evidence will no longer appear dim and doubtful—it will shine like the oracle of Urim and Thummim. And how excellent must that knowledge be which is conveyed to the mind by the enlightening influence of the Holy Spirit. But for those who hate the light which reproves their evil deeds, and to harden themselves against conviction and resist the Holy Ghost, the evidence of the truth will answer an important and even against them—it will show what they are, and leave them without a reasonable excuse as unreasonable men. If it does not work conviction in them, it will serve, however, as a touchstone to discover their character.

IV. The influence and effect which by the divine blessing the gospel and knowledge which it conveys has had upon the hearts and lives of men, is a further argument of its appalling excellency. This influence and efficacy has been mentioned before as an evidence of the truth and divinity of the gospel, but it is again called up to view as manifesting the excellency thereof. Other knowledge, however it may civilize and polish the minds and manners of men, yet leave them under the guilt and power of sin and in a most miserable condition. But the gospel has brought to light a righteousness of the knowledge of faith, of which sinners are justified with a knowledge of God, are received into his favor and adopted as his children, and so are the heirs of eternal life. The gospel is also the instrument of delivering a sinner from the power and dominion of sin, and quickening those who were in a state of spiritual death. It is by the word of truth, by the gospel and by the knowledge of Christ which it conveys, that we are begotten and sanctified and made wise for eternity. The power of the Holy Spirit goes with it, changing the soul into the image of God from glory to glory, to deliver the mind from the darkness in which it was bewildered with respect to the change of its everlasting peace—a spiritual view of the excellency of Christ and the glorious objects which the gospel reveals as simulates the believer to the image of Christ. Our souls, by beholding, contemplating, and being conversant with such glorious truths, take a heavenly aspect and bias, and our lives esteemed in love by Christians, for their works' sake, according to an apostolic canon for that purpose.

Will my reverend fathers and brethren suffer a word of address from one, however unworthy, who has heartily cast in a lot with them. The excellency of the gospel, the dispensation of which is committed to us, has been in some manner represented, indeed in a very imperfect manner, but your more exact, comprehensive and penetrating views will easily supply what is amiss and correct what is wanting in the representation. Should it not be then our desire, prayer and endeavor that we may be yet more fully acquainted with those mysteries of divine wisdom and grace which are exhibited in the gospel? that we may grow in grace and in the knowledge of Christ, and have our minds more illuminated, our hearts more affected and transformed by it into the image of Christ, and cast in the mould of evangelical truth, wisdom, holiness and joy?

The ministers of the gospel undertake a trust of very great importance, of no small difficulty. They are entrusted with the dispensation and are set for the defence of the gospel, and who is sufficient for these things? How rich a treasure is put into these earthen vessels. But then, the vessels containing such a sacred treasure should be clean ones, sanctified and meet for the Master's use. They should be such as have been sweetened and consecrated by the unctions of the Holy One—the stewards of the house of God, who are to feed his household with knowledge and understanding, should be both wise and faithful. They only are qualified, as they ought, have grace as well as gifts, who receive the truth not only in the notion and form, but also in the power and love of it, and experience the sanctifying influence of the knowledge of Christ upon their hearts, though we should cover the best gifts and seek to excel in them for the purposes of edification, yet, unless we are sanctified through the truth, we are not sanctified thoroughly for this great work to which we have been separated. Be it then our care to have our graces in lively exercise, and while we deal out the bread of life to others, not neglect to partake thereof ourselves.

Grace, indeed, is absolutely necessary to one's having a divine call and mission to the evangelical ministry. Nor does the validity or efficacy of divine administration depend on the good attentions of the administrator. This popish error has been constantly rejected by the Protestants. If true saints can have a valid call or mission, then such only are authorized by Christ, and consequently the administration of such only are valid. How, then, could a church know whether they have a valid ministry or ordinance, as since they cannot know the heart or state of another? However, though Christ may send his messages of grace by whomsoever he will, yet without grace his call and mission will not be sincerely or faithfully obeyed, and whatever good such may be instrumental of doing to others, no real benefit or comfort will thence accrue to the unworthy instruments, nor does it seem likely that the work of God should prosper in an unfaithful hand.

If we should hope to have our ministry comfortable to ourselves or profitable to others, our aim must be to cultivate in ourselves that most excellent knowledge which has been spoken of and hold forth to others in the plainest and most affecting view we can, the pure, unadulterated truths of the gospel, not shunning to declare all the counsel of God, but still insisting chiefly on faith and repentance, those practical truths and duties by which the Christians live, and endeavor to promote the holiness of the truth, without which no man shall see the Lord. Though our work is difficult, and we are insufficient, yet it is very good work and pleasant to a Christian, and our great encouragement is that we have a good and kind Master, who had a feeling of our infirmities, and has promised to be with his faithful ministers to the end of the world.

It is upon this, our encouragement, that this, our brother, who is about to be separated to the ministerial office and pastoral care of the church in this place, now offers himself willingly to this service, and we cannot but rejoice, dear sir, that the great Head of the Church, who has, we trust, furnished you with needful graces and gifts for the work, has also opened an inviting door for you to enter upon it, and inclined you to accept the invitation which has been tendered to you with so much unanimity.

The step you are taking and the prospect which lies before you must strike you with a serious awe. You are about to be an ambassador of Christ to men, in his name to beseech them to be reconciled to God, and administer his holy ordinances. You are about to take a commission under the captain of our salvation, the duties of which will require diligent care, patience, condescension, as well as courage and firmness. You are to stand as a light in a golden candlestick, yea, as a star in the firmament of the church, to diffuse the light of knowledge and holiness before men to the glory of God, and as the star which went before the wise men in the east, you are to lead them to Christ, once more. You are to be an angel of the church—so gospel ministers are styled. And as the angels which appeared to the shepherds, you are to be a messenger of glad tidings concerning Christ the Saviour. Like the angel who appeared in the vision flying through the midst of heaven, you are to preach the everlasting gospel to them who dwell on the earth, and your views, temper and deportment must be angelical, answerable to the sublime and dignified title, and I must also add you must be the servant of all, and in this, too, your business is to be like that of the angels, who are ministering spirits to the heirs of salvation.

The work you are entering upon, whatever the world may think of it, is noble and excellent—a work that carries a rich reward in it to those who engage in it and pursue it with the true spirit of Christianity. Your business will be to search out, contemplate, enjoy and communicate to most excellent knowledge, to drink abundantly of that fountain the streams thereof make glad the city of God, to feel the light and truth break in with increasing brightness and energy, to make many rich by dealing out to them those treasures of heavenly wisdom which are more precious than fine gold. Nor need you fear that your distributions in this way will impoverish you. This is a way of scattering which greatly increaseth; your gifts and graces will, like the widow's oil, multiply and increase by being drawn and poured out for the benefit of others, and by profiting them you will profit yourself, for to him that hath shall be given.

As to the hardships and difficulties in the warfare upon which you are entering I shall not say much. You know these things are to be expected and prepared for. And I trust you have counted the cost and are so much of a Christian hero that you can say deliberately and firmly, "None of these things move me." The greatest difficulty we find is to keep our hearts always in frame for the duties of our sacred calling. But for this our dependence is on Christ, whose grace is sufficient for us. If the prospect of straightened worldly circumstances should arise to view, "seek first the kingdom of heaven and his righteousness," and all of these things shall be added to you. If the messengers of Satan should buffet you with the scourge of the tongue, I trust you will find yourself so well armed and mounted that a little barking (pardon the expression) will rather enliven than intimidate you.

Go forth boldly, then, in the strength of Christ, your leader:

go forth and war a good warfare, put on the whole armor of God and fear not. Heaven is on the side of truth and righteousness, and Christianity; it will be supported; it will prevail; it will triumph over all opposition; be faithful unto death in promoting this glorious cause, and you shall enjoy and share the triumph and receive a crown of life and immortality.

It has given concern to those who have the cause of Christianity at heart that so many societies of professed Christians amongst us should remain so long without a settled ministry among them, but it gives us much joy that so many laborers have lately been sent into the harvest, and this society, which (since the sorrowful breach it suffered in the death of the late worthy pastor, whose memory is blessed), has been so long as a flock without a shepherd, will allow us to express our joy in meeting you here to-day, on so happy an occasion, and that God has at length disposed you with so much unanimity to elect one for your pastor in whose ordination we can so heartily concur and assist.

From present agreeable facts we are encouraged to hope that the important transactions of this day will be remembered by you and him with much satisfaction and thankfulness: that he and you will be a comfort and blessing to each other, and that by your devout and increasing prayers for him, by concurring with and assisting him in his endeavors to maintain the faith, holiness, worship and discipline of the gospel, by taking in good part his labors for your spiritual edification and profiting by them, and contributing freely for his temporal support and comfort, and treating him with Christian candor, kindness, and respect, suitable to his character, you will encourage his heart and strengthen his hands in his great and difficult work, and so be fellow-helpers to the truth.

As this is the first time, and possibly may be the last, in which I shall have an occasion to address for the greater part this large assembly, give me leave before we part to suggest one thing for your serious consideration.

Since the knowledge of Christ and his glorious gospel is, as you have heard, so excellent, ought not Christians to profess their faith without fear or shame? My brethren, is not our gospel the foundation of all our joy and hope? Shall any who hope for salvation through the merits of the Redeemer, be of so base a spirit as to dissemble their faith and religion for the sake of humoring or courting the favor of infidels, and act as if they would steal into heaven in disguise?

Let us show that we are not ashamed of Christ and the gospel by making an open profession of our faith and attending the holy ordinances, and above all, by a holy life. By thus causing our light to shine before man, we shall most commend our holy religion to their consciences. That we may all thus adorn the doctrine of God, our Saviour, may God in his infinite mercy grant. To him I commend you, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up and give you an inheritance among them that are sanctified.

Amen.

Charge by the Rev. Mr. Merrill, minister of Plaistow and a part of Haverhill.

In the name and by the authority of Jesus Christ, the great head of the church we his ministers, who now lay our hands upon your head, do by this solemn rite, and in virtue of our office separate and adorn you, Mr. John Kelly, to the office and work of the gospel ministry.

And as you are called of God in the course of his providence to the pastoral care of this Christian society, the church and congregation of Hampstead, we therefore commit unto you the oversight of this flock in particular, declaring you to be invested with all of the distinguishing powers, of the evangelical ministry, to preach the word, to pray with and for the people, and to bless them in the name of the Lord, or administer the holy institutions of the new testament, to bind and loose in the house of God, according to the laws of his kingdom, and, when regularly called and fit occasions arise, to ordain others to the same great and important work.

Take thou then the oversight of this flock, not my constraint, but willingly, not by sordid ends for filthy lucre, or vain ambition, but of a ready mind, a mind sincerely disposed to promote the glory of God, the kingdom of Christ, and the great spiritual interest of immortal souls.

And permit us dear sir, to lay our solemn exhortations and charges upon you before God, who seeth all things, and the Lord Jesus Christ who shall judge the quick and the dead before the elect angels, and this whole assembly that thou take heed to thyself, and to the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord to fulfil it.

Take good heed to thyself, imbibe and exhibit largely, the spirit and genius of the excellent religion which you are to recommend to others, be solicitous to feel its transforming power and to transcribe its amiable virtues, watch in all things—keep under thy body, be sober, just, holy and temperate, lest having preached to others you yourself should be a castaway.

Take heed unto the ministry, which thou hast received in the Lord to fulfil it.

In this view study the sacred scriptures, give thyself to reading and meditation, make the word of God the man of your counsel, the standard of your faith, practice and standard of your preaching, the invariable rule of your administration in the whole compass of your duty.

Preach the word. Be instant in season, and out of season and reprove, rebuke and exhort with all long suffering and doctrine.

Preach not yourself but Christ Jesus the Lord, Preach the truth as it is in Jesus. Testify repentance towards God, the faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ. Represent the necessity of a temper formed on evangelical principles, and regularly operating into a life of obedience and submission to the great Lord and lawgiver of the church. Shun not to declare the whole counsel of God—keep back nothing that is profitable—keep thyself pure from the blood of all men. Do thy diligence to instruct the ignorant, to refute the erroneous, to establish the wavering, to convince the gain sayers, to warn the unruly, to awaken the secure, to direct the awakened into the path of safety. In one word preach the unsearchable riches of Christ, and in connection therewith affirm constantly, that they who believe in God, be careful to maintain good works.

Feed the sheep, and feed the lambs, with the sincere milk of the word, that they may grow thereby. Study to approve thyself to God, a workman who needed not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth, and giving to every one his portion of meat in due season.

Let your preaching be enforced by a corresponding practice, Go before the flock in a amiable and attractive example, be an example unto believers in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith and in purity.

Administer the sacrament of the new testament, baptism and the Lord's supper to the proper subjects of them.

Let all of your addresses to heaven be adapted to assist to the devotion of those, who join with you in social worship.

As a ruler in the house of God, preside with dignity, integrity and discretion.

Exhibit a benevolent spirit, aim an extensive usefulness, endeavor to serve the interest of the churches at large, to preserve their purity, their stability, their order, their renown, their peace and their prosperity.

When to call to introduce others into the sacred ministry, act with fidelity, prudence and caution, lay hands suddenly on no man, but the things which thou hath received before many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall also be able to teach others. To sum up the whole as a watchman fail not to give faithful and seasonable warning of approaching dangers: as an ambassador let all your wisdom, fidelity and address be exerted in negotiating a treaty of reconciliation between God and men: as a bishop take heed to yourself, and all of the flock over which the Holy Ghost has made you an overseer: as a shepherd or pastor, feed the church of God which he hast purchased, with his own blood and lead them to the green pastures, and the salutary waters of the sanctuary; as an householder give to every one his portion of meat in due season, as an angel to be like a flame of fire, all alive in delivering the messages of the Lord of hosts; as a star be not eccentric, cross not the spheres but move on and shine in your proper orbit, diffusing the salutary rays of gospel light, and as a good soldier of Jesus Christ, endure hardiness, take to yourself the whole armour of God, fight the good fight of faith, let not the weapons of your warfare be carnal, but spiritual that they may be mighty, through God to pull down the strongholds of sin and satan.

Thus we have presented before you a summary of your duties annexed to your office and station and which in the gospel, are enjoined in its ministrations.

As motives to perform them, need we any more at this time than to suggest, that the honour of God, and the success of the gospel, the salvation of souls for whom Christ died, and your own present, future and everlasting happiness are all interested in your fidelity. let the consideration of the awful solemnities of death, judgment, heaven, hell and eternity, serve strongly to enforce on you and every minister discharge of our duty, and may God add the effectual energy of his grace.

In prospect of these arduous, official duties you are doubtless ready to exclaim, who is sufficient for these things? Your work is great, your difficulties probably will be too. But be strong dear sir, in the grace which is in Christ Jesus. Look by faith and prayer to the everlasting hills, to the rock that is higher than you, for direction and assistance, for support and success in your great undertaking. He will be with you, while you be with Him. He will never leave or forsake you. If you obtain mercy of the Lord to be faithful, if you keep this good thing committed unto you, by the Holy Ghost which dwelleth in us, when the chief shepherd shall appear, then shall thou receive a crown of life which passeth not away. And this may God, in his infinite mercy grant you, through our Lord Jesus Christ, to whom be glory, in his church throughout all ages, world without end. Amen.

However a careless world may neglect and despise the blessed gospel, the glorious salvation, it offers to men the regular means of grace enjoyed in a land of light: yet the happy effects of those distinguished blessings have been so conspicuous as to strike conviction into the minds of every serious, judicious observer.

These being acknowledged privileges, every effort to preserve and increase them cannot fail of giving satisfaction and pleasure to such as are well wishers to the religion of Jesus, and to every friend of society.

The present prospects in this place, after a long interruption of the regularly stated means of religious instruction, are agreeable and encouraging. They produce sensations of joy, my Christian brethren of this church and society, in the hearts of all of your friends and in the minds of all who are the true friends of gospel order.

We would now most heartily congratulate you upon the present occasion upon your union and harmony, and your having a pastor, who, we trust, is faithful, solemnly set over you, to minister unto you on the things pertaining to God and godliness, and to assist you in your most important interests, that you may no longer remain as a sheep without a shepherd.

May the Great Head of the Church, who walks in the midst of his golden candlesticks, increase your love, increase your union, and enrich you with all of the special and excellent graces of the gospel.

Friendship and brotherly affections are such necessary ingredients in a true Christian character that an exhibition of them should not be omitted by sister churches, in regular standing, upon all proper occasions. Giving the right hand of fellowship, apostolic example, and the universal custom of the churches in the States of America, has been rendered familiar upon all ordination solemnities.

As this part of the public exercises devolves upon me, I now, dear sir, in the name and by the direction of this venerable council, give you my right hand, hereby publicly testifying our entire approbation of you, as one regularly introduced into the work of the gospel ministry, and manifesting our most ardent desires that mutual love, friendship and communion may ever be found subsisting between us.

We rejoice with you upon your happy settlement in this place, and that you are engaged to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ. We most cheerfully leave with you the divine presence and direction in all the labors to which you have been called.

January 16, 1793, the church met to fix upon a receptive covenant, and accordingly the following was fixed upon.

"You do now, in the presence of God, of the elect angels, and of this assembly, devoutly and solemnly devote yourself to the eternal God, who is the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, receiving him as your God and portion, desiring by his special aid to live to his glory.

You do likewise give up yourself to the Lord Jesus Christ, and as God manifest in the flesh, who is the Head of the Church.

And you receive him as made of God into you wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption.

You do also own your baptismal covenant. You do likewise give yourself to the Church of Christ in this place, engaging with this help to attend upon the ordinances of the Gospel, and watchfully to avoid every sinful course and everything which shall have a tendency to bring a scandal upon the holy religion which we profess.

You engage also to worship God in your family, to devote your children to God, and to bring them up in the nurture and admonishing of the Lord.

This you promise.

We, then, the Church of Christ in this place, do receive you into our fellowship, and promise, by His assistance, to watch over you, and to treat you with that affection which our sacred relation requires.

This we do, imploring of our Lord that both we and you together may obtain mercy to be faithful in His Covenant, and to glorify Him with that holiness which becomes his house forever."

"At a church meeting at the meeting house, September 29, 1796, unanimously voted the following to be the receptive Covenant of this Church, instead of the one adopted in 1793, and confirmed the same by a unanimous voice again May 3d, 1804."

FORM OF THE COVENANT.

"You do here, in the presence of God and this assembly, own and profess your serious belief of the Christian religion as it is contained in the Holy Scriptures.

And professing your repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ, you do give up yourself to the Lord Jehovah, who is the Father, Son, and the Holy Ghost, and receive him as your God and portion.

You do give up yourself to the Lord Jesus Christ and put your whole trust and confidence in him alone for salvation, and receive him as your all-sufficient Saviour, and rely upon him as the Great Head of the Church in the Covenant of grace, and as your Prophet, Priest and King forever.

You do also own your baptismal covenant and your engagements thereby to be the Lord's.

You submit to the laws of his kingdom as they are administered among his people.

You do also give yourself in solemn covenant to this church of Christ, engaging with his help to submit to all of the ordinances of the Gospel."

"To this you submit."

"I, then, as a minister of Jesus Christ, do in his name and in behalf of the Church, acknowledge you to be a member of the Church of Christ, to be admitted to all the special ordinances and privileges for the communion of saints, and do promise that we will receive you and watch over you as such in the Lord.

This we do, imploring of our divine Lord that both we and you may obtain mercy, to be faithful in the Covenant, and glorify him in that holiness which becometh his house forever."

"And now unto him, who is able to keep you from falling," etc.—
Jude 24: 25.

Rev. Mr. Kelly was pastor of the church forty-four years, "lacking eight weeks." He was dismissed Oct. 12, 1836, when seventy-three years of age. For a sketch of his life and other facts see pages 27 to 55 of Memorial History, Vol. I, or sketch of church members.

February 10th 1837.
John Kelly of Hamptstead N.H.

Rev. Mr. Kelly preached the following sermon on the occasion of leaving the old meeting house for the new church, as printed at the time:—

“UNION AND COMMUNION OF SAINTS.”

A SERMON DELIVERED AT HAMPSTEAD, N. H., OCT. 13, 1837, TO THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH AND SOCIETY ON LEAVING THE OLD MEETING HOUSE AND REPAIRING TO THE NEW ONE, BY JOHN KELLY, A. M., LATE PASTOR OF THE CHURCH AND SOCIETY ABOUT FORTY-FOUR YEARS.

“This Sermon is Dedicated to the Inhabitants of Hampstead, in grateful remembrance of the uniform respect and kindness shown to the Author for a long series of years.”

“Fulfill ye my joy, that ye be like-minded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind; let nothing be done through strife or vain glory; but in loveliness of mind, let each esteem the other better than themselves.”—Philippians 11: 2, 3.

These words of the great apostle to the Gentiles were addressed in the most affectionate manner to the church at Philippi, which was one of the most endeared to his heart, on account of their exemplary faith and patience, and their affectionate regard to his own person, in ministering to his necessities, while some others have been neglectful of supplying his wants.

About twelve years before this epistle was written at Rome, the apostle had preached the Gospel at Philippi, and was driven from thence by the hand of persecution. But he could not forget to edify and comfort those precious souls who had been brought to believe and obey the gospel by his ministrations.

So does the faithful minister love and cherish the souls of those to whom he has for years ministered in holy things, even though the more he has loved them the less he is loved by them.

And now, my hearers, since I have constantly preached the Gospel in this house, with the exception of a few days, thirteen years longer than St. Paul preached the Gospel in the whole of his ministry, which continued only thirty-one years, you will bear with me to speak to you once more.

And with a view of improving the words of the text, it is proposed:

1. To show how all professors of religion ought to have the same love and to be of one accord, of one mind.

2. To consider some of the urgent reasons why all of God's people ought to comply to the exhortation in the text.

3. To consider the unreasonableness of doing anything through strife or vain glory.

4. To consider the duty of esteeming others better than ourselves, and the happy consequences of a lovely mind.

1. I am first to show how all professors of religion ought to have the same love and to be of the same accord and one mind.

In the first place, doubtless the apostle himself and the spirit of God by which he wrote, intended that we should have the same love to God, and toward our neighbor as the law of God demands.

And it is required that we should all be agreed in the cordial belief of all of the doctrines which are according to godliness. Because, as every science has its first principles, without which it cannot subsist, and upon which its faith and practice its votaries are founded, so in a special manner there must be certain first principles or doctrines of religion which all must admit and hold, or be chargeable of having no religion.

These doctrines, or first principles, are both the foundation and criterion of every man's character, in a religious point of view. If he has no religious principles it has decidedly no religion. If he has false principles, it has a false religion: if he has false ideas of the divine character, he worships a false God, or is an idolator, or an atheist. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so he is." So it is important that we should have correct views of the doctrines of religion.

Here it may not be amiss briefly to state some of the essential doctrines of the Gospel in the belief of which all the true disciples of Christ are agreed.

These are the following:—

That there is one eternal and unchangeable God, revealed to us under the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, to each of whom there is ascribed a peculiar agency in the work of creation and redemption. And yet these are united in one God-head, whose name alone is Jehovah, which means the sum and source of being. Accordingly Moses said, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord, our God, is one Lord," that is, as in the original Hebrews, "The Jehovah, our Aluchinow, is one Jehovah." One of these words is in the plural number and the other in the singular. And this corresponds with the divine nature as more clearly revealed in the New Testament, where the Father, the Son or Word, and the Holy Ghost are declared to be mixed in One in the work of creation and redemption.

For while it is revealed that he who built all things is God, it is also declared that, "By the word of the Lord were the Heavens made, and all the hosts of them by the breath of his mouth." And all things are declared to have been made by Jesus Christ, the Word or Son of God. So, then, according to the Scriptures, God is one in three or three in One.

This God created, upholds and governs all worlds in the most wise, righteous, and most holy manner, according to his most holy and eternal purpose.

He made man at first upright, in his own image and favor, but man soon fell into a state of depravity and alienation from God, and so became justly exposed to the wrath of God forever.

But God, foreknowing this defection, did from eternity constitute his own Son to be a Mediator between God and man.

And God the Father did stipulate to give his Son a seed to serve him from among the human race, as a reward for his sufferings and dying for our sins, that we might be redeemed from all iniquity and become a peculiar people zealous of all good works.

This Saviour was sent to men as lost creatures, wholly depraved and wholly condemned by the righteous sentence of the Divine law. Hence Christ first demanded that men should repent or change their minds, and turn to God through faith in his atoning blood for the remission of their sins.

But though men have all the natural powers of understanding, reason and conscience sufficient to serve God, if they would, yet such is the wickedness of their hearts that nothing of duty will be complied with till a change is wrought in them by the spirit of God, first convincing the soul of its depravity, and then giving a new heart, new desires and affection of heart towards God, by faith in Jesus Christ, the way, the truth, and the life.

In connection with the above doctrines the following truths may be adduced, and are expressly revealed in the word of God.

The election of grace, according to the foreknowledge in which the people of God were chosen in Christ Jesus, before the foundation of the world, that they should become holy and without blame before him in love. Eph. 4.

The doctrine of the perseverance of the saints is also revealed and made certain.

For the gifts and calling of God are things of which he does not repent.

And Christ says, "My sheep hear my voice, and they follow me, and I give unto them eternal life, and no man shall pluck them out of my hands. John 10.

The doctrine of justification, sanctification and adoption, also are true and certain, for the Scripture says, "Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called, and when he called them he also justified, and when he justified them he also glorified. Romans 8 : 30.

It is also made certain that all who believe and obey the gospel shall be saved, and all who believe not shall be forever lost.

These are the doctrines according to godliness, which all must and will admit who are taught by the word and spirit of God to feel our entire dependence on the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ.

And be it remembered, as Luther says, every minister, and every other man who would be a Christian, must be certain of his doctrine that it is exactly according to God's word.

2. We may notice again, in the second place, that the disciples of Christ must be united as of one accord, of one mind, in the affections of their hearts.

They should love God according to his true character as it is revealed in the Holy Scripture: they should love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, and love one another fervently.

"By this," says Christ, "shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye love one to another."

And "if we love not our brother whom we have seen, how can we love God whom we have not seen?"

"We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren."

The heathen said of the primitive Christians, "Behold, how these Christians love one another."

3. In the third place, all Christians should be of one accord and one mind in design.

This design should be to the glory of God and the good of immortal souls.

This is the badge of distinction to know who are true Christians and who are not, without any regard to denominations or professions.

4. In the fourth place all Christians should have the same love and be of one accord, of one mind in the communion of Divine ordinances.

It does not seem necessary that they should have the same mode or manner of performance. For instance, it is not absolutely necessary that all should stand or kneel in prayer, but it is necessary that all should pray to God and that all should have the spirit of Christ. If we have evidence that any soul has communion and fellowship with the Father and His Son Jesus Christ, we ought also to receive him to our fellowship; for otherwise we cannot expect to commune with the saints in heaven.

II. We proceed now, secondly, to consider some of the urgent reasons why all of God's people ought to comply with the exhortation of the apostle in the text.

A general reason may be grounded on the nature of the relation of true believers to God and one another.

By faith in Christ, which implies the regeneration of the heart, all true Christians became the children of God and fellow heirs to the Kingdom of Heaven,—partakers of the Divine nature—and have an earnest of the inheritance of saints in light.

"And by one spirit they have all been baptized into one body, whether bond or free, Jews or Gentiles, and they have all been made to drink into one spirit." 1 Cor. 12: 13.

Hence it is according to their very natures as new creatures to be united into one body, and to worship and commune together as the time and place may make it convenient, to the comfort and edification of their souls, in love to Christ and one another.

In the first place, the prayer of Christ, as recorded in the 17th chapter of John, should urge every new born soul to have communion with those who have the same spirit.

Another reason is the command of Christ to love one another. He was so intent upon this important subject that he made this the criterion by which others might know whether we are his disciples or not.

Another argument to urge the duty of Christians to be united in love and to be of one accord of one mind, is what their inspired apostles have said and written on this subject.

To the Romans the apostle says, "Be of the same mind one towards another." Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be like minded one towards another, according to Christ Jesus, that ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even the father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Wherefore receive ye one another, as Christ also received us to the glory of God.

To the Corinthians he writes, "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, that there be no division among you; but be ye perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."

Another argument for the union and communion of saints is the example of the primitive Christians in the days of the apostles and martyrs of Jesus.

"These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication with the women, and Mary, the mother of Jesus, and the brethren."

"And the multitude of them that believed, after the day of Pentecost, were of one heart and one soul."

And it appears that the more they were persecuted, as the children of Israel were in Egypt, the more they increased in love and good works.

III. We now come, thirdly, to consider the unreasonableness of doing anything through strife and vain glory.

In the first place this course is unreasonable because it originates from an unreasonable, wicked, and proud heart.

Strife, contention and malignity come from the dark regions of sin and misery, where no good thing dwells, but only evil, and that continually.

In the next place, strife and vain glory are no manner of benefit to those who are so base and wicked as to practice them. The gainers in this enterprise are always the greatest losers, for though they may seem to gain their point in the first outset, yet at the best their glory is only vain glory still, and in the end there is nothing gained but guilt, shame and confusion forever.

We may once more observe that strife and vain glory are unreasonable because no good is done to the agent or object, but great damage to both, and especially to the agents of this work of confusion and ruin. A swelling always indicates some disease, and climbing always endangers the life by a fall.

In any case pride must have a fall, and he who demands more honors than others are willing to bestow upon him must suffer disappointment and disgrace. God and man will frown upon him.

IV. We come now, fourthly, to consider the duty of esteeming others better than ourselves, and the happy consequences of a lowly mind.

Esteeming others better than ourselves does not imply that we should deny any favor, spiritual or temporal, which God has of his mercy and goodness bestowed upon us more than he has upon some others; but it implies that we should think so much more of our own faults than of the faults of others that we should be so much humbled before God as to think better of others, of whose sins we do not know so much as we do our own. For we never ought to judge more unfavorably of any man than we have evidence against him. Charity thinketh no evil where there is no evidence of evil.

This lowliness of mind we owe to God, to ourselves, and to our fellow-creatures, for we have sinned against all these, and especially we have sinned against our Maker and Redeemer, and ought to prostrate ourselves in the dust before him. Because, first, we have made ourselves vile and mean, poor and wretched, blind and naked by sinning against God.

And so we are wholly dependent on God for every good thing, for soul and body, for time and eternity.

We have also the example of the Lord Jesus Christ and of all of the saints from the beginning of the world to urge us to be of a lowly mind, that we may find rest to our souls.

We are now prepared more directly to consider the happy consequences of a lowly mind.

This may be a settled and universal truth, that it is impossible for a man to be happy without a humble and lowly mind. There is no heaven without humility.

So soon as some of the angels entertained the spirit of pride they were cast down from heaven and reserved under chains of darkness unto the great day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.

And as soon as man aspired to be good he was cast out of Paradise, and a flaming sword was placed, which was pointed every way to keep him from the tree of life.

And even now, since the Saviour has come into the world to seek and to save that which was lost, no man can enter into heaven unless he is converted and becomes penitent and humble as a little child.

It is a happy thing to be of a lowly mind, or to walk humbly with God, because it is a safe way. It is more safe to walk on the ground than to rise into an airy region, or upon the top of a mast, or upon the crag of a mountain that hangs over an abyss below.

It is a happy thing to be of a meek and lowly mind, because those who are of this spirit are free from any affronts and disappointments of which proud and wicked men are heirs.

How miserable was proud and malicious Haman, who could neither eat nor sleep with any comfort as long as Mordecai would not bow to him.

But how happy was Moses, the meekest of men, and David, who was one of the humblest of men that ever lived upon earth.

St. Paul, too, was joyful in all his tribulations, because he esteemed himself less than the least of all saints.

And to crown the whole, it is a happy thing to be of a lowly mind because God has made all his promises of grace and glory to the humble souls.

“Blessed are the poor in spirit, for their’s is the kingdom of heaven.”

“He that humbleth himself shall be exalted.”

“And thus said the High and Lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is holy, I dwell in the High and Holy place, with him also that is of a humble and contrite spirit, to revive the heart of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones."

IMPROVEMENT.

In the application of this subject we remark: First, That there is no greater evidence of the Christian spirit and temper in professors of religion than to unite in the doctrines, duties, and affections which are peculiar to the gospel, and which are expressly commanded and interceded for by our blessed Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. For as only by pride cometh contention, so it is only by humiliation, meekness and love, that true Christians are united by faith and fellowship of the gospel.

2. It may also be remarked, secondly, in application to the brethren and sisters of this church, that the proof and comfort of this union under God will greatly depend on your temper towards one another and towards those who are without.

Your whole heart and soul and life must be to endeavor to keep the unity of spirit in the bond of peace. And as much as in you lies to live peaceably with all men, follow peace with all and holiness. Without this no man can see the Lord.

The remaining part of this discourse will chiefly consist in addresses to the several classes of this assembly upon leaving the house to repair to the new one.

I would say, then, that though there is no record to be found in regard to the erection of this house, yet, in comparing the dates of other events, that it was raised in the year 1748, eighty-nine years ago this summer, and it was long in finishing; I believe it was not plastered till twenty years after it was erected.

In the year 1792, when the second minister was ordained, its surface was all out of repair, and the "minister people," as the Congregational Church and Society were then called, repaired the house and built the steeple and porch, and painted all of them at their own cost the first time.

The first minister settled in this place was Rev. Henry True, from Salisbury, Mass., on the twenty-fourth day of June, 1752.

He continued thirty years, lacking a few days, and died suddenly on Tuesday morning, May 22, 1782, aged fifty-six years and two months. He had preached the Sabbath before, as well as usual.

According with the text (Acts 11: 24), preached upon at his ordination by Rev. Edward Barnard of Haverhill, "he was a good man."

After Mr. True's decease this church and society were destitute more than ten years. No attempt was made to settle a minister for four years. In the next six years calls were extended to five different candidates, but none of them would accept, for fear of infidels and poverty.

At last he who is now speaking to you was urged to come here, when he was under a request to go to another place: but not having promised to go, he came here, and he soon had a call to settle, without a dissenting voice. And as he could not make money his leading object, he could not deny the request of a depressed and almost discouraged people. He was accordingly ordained in this house (the first he preached in alone), on the fifth day of December, 1792. Here he remained pastor forty-four years, lacking eight weeks.

But he was dismissed one year and three days ago: but for what reason I cannot say, though some have asked me in other places why was this man dismissed!

I know the causes, but not the reasons. And though I might dwell upon grievances, I will dismiss them all, and rejoice that the Lord reigneth, remembering that my Saviour, who never said nor did anything amiss, only said, "Why smitest thou me?" and "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

To the Church and Society usually worshipping in this house, from the days of your fathers, eighty-five years, who are about to leave this house and repair to the new one, I would say, do not leave this house because you have no rights here.

If any people have any rights to this house certainly you have. For your Puritan Congregational fathers built it, and they and you have mostly kept it in repair and added to it. And most of the pews belong to you by inheritance or by purchase. It will be asked, then, why do you leave it?

The answer is, like the Congregational Puritan Orthodox people of England, who first settled New England, you wish to have a place to worship God in peace, where you have no temptation to disturb others, nor be intruded upon by them.

If this be not your motive I am sorry; for otherwise you cannot expect to prosper. I beseech you, let no unhallowed feelings arise in your hearts against other denominations or individuals living in the world. Fulfil ye my joy, that ye be like-minded with Christ and all the saints, having the same love, being of one accord and one mind; let nothing be done through strife or vain glory, but in lowliness of mind let each esteem others better than themselves.

To the young men and women I would say, that on your character in some sense depends mine own honor or disgrace. For it is agreed that among the most accurate observers of human society that the character of the rising generation is, in a great measure, formed by the influence which the minister of the place has upon them.

And now, beloved young men, be ye sober-minded, devout, humble and fervent, serving the Lord. Let not the pleasant village or town of Hampstead be anything like a scene of coarse ribaldry, noise or strife. Fall not in with the clownish or illiberal manners of the times. Avoid all stimulating aliment. Touch not, taste not, handle not the poisonous cup nor noxious plant of the south.

To the respected young women, I would say, that if you are delicate, modest and amiable, you will need no better ornaments than a meek and quiet spirit, which is of great price in the sight of the Lord.

To both classes, I would say, it is very important that you should become acquainted with the doctrines and duties of the word of God. And the way to learn these is to read the Scriptures more diligently and prayerfully than you have ever done. And to help you to a more accurate knowledge of the gospel I advise you to procure a Doctrinal Tract, written by Rev. Dr. Thayer, late of Kingston, N. H., or one more recently and well written by Dr. William Cogswell of Boston.

Towards the children of this assembly I cannot find language to express, in any adequate degree, the feeling of my heart. When I think of these precious and immortal souls, that will never cease to exist, and yet are liable to be lost forever, I cannot endure the thought. Oh, then, my dearly beloved children, the sons and daughters of these parents, and especially dear to me as the offspring of those grandparents, who were my best friends, now in the grave, and I hope in heaven, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth," and hear the voice of him who says, "I love them that love me, and those who seek me early shall find me." Whatever you forget, forget not your souls.

This whole assembly and this whole town, could they or would they hear my voice, I would ask them to accept my thanks for all the kindness and candor shown me by almost every man, woman and child for the space of forty-five years.

But one to my knowledge has spoken to my character, and that will do me more good than his praise.

Let me once more lift my warning voice before it is lost in death to entreat and beseech every one of you, old and young, great and small, rich and poor, to secure the one thing needful: for everything else will elude your grasp and disappoint your hopes, and turn to your everlasting ruin, if you do not lay hold on the hope set before you in the gospel and so escape the wrath to come.

You may be glad to leave this house and go to the new one; but think, oh think, that you must go one step further, and you will be glad to leave that and go to the house appointed for all of the living. To be prepared for this, see that you seek a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

THIRD PASTORATE.

Voted Aug. 11, 1836, "to extend a call to the Rev. John M. C. Bartley to be the pastor of this church," and that "James Calef, James Brickett and Nathaniel Little be a committee to unite with the Congregational Society in extending the call."

The installation of Rev. Mr. Bartley was holden on Wednesday, Oct. 12, 1836. "Rev. John Kelly, Dea. John Emerson and Dea. Kent were a committee to call a council by letters missive."

"Voted, that the following churches and ministers compose the council to dismiss and recommend the pastor now in office and to install the pastor-elect. Atkinson, Brentwood, Candia, Chester, E. Chester, W. Derry, Londonderry, Newburyport 2d Pres. Chh., Pelham, Plaistow, Raymond, Windham, and Rev'd Leonard Wood, D. D., Rev'd John W. Church, D. D., Rev'd John Kelly of the Chh. in Hampstead."

"The following ministers and churches only were sent to attend the installation of Rev. John M. C. Bartley, viz.: John W. Church of Pelham, churches in Atkinson, Brentwood, Candia, Chester, East Derry, Londonderry, 2d Pres. Chh. in Newburyport, Pelham, Plaistow, and Windham, and Rev'd John Kelly, the pastor to be dismissed. Hampstead, Oct. 8th, 1836."

Pursuant to letters missive sent from Rev'd John Kelly and the Congregational Church in Hampstead, an ecclesiastical council convened at the house of Mr. Joshua Eastman, in Hampstead, Oct. 12th, 1836.

Present from Second Presbyterian Church in Newburyport, Rev'd Daniel Dana, D. D., pastor: Brother Isaac Stone, delegate: Rev'd John W. Church, D. D. Pelham Church in Derry, Rev. E. L. Parker, pastor: Elder John Humphrey, delegate. Church in Atkinson, Rev'd Samuel H. Tolman, acting pastor: Brother Franklin Gilbert, delegate. Church in Londonderry, Rev'd John R. Adams, pastor: Elder John Holmes, delegate. Church in Brentwood, Rev'd Francis Welch, pastor. Church in Plaistow, Rev'd S. N. Peckham, pastor. Church in Chester, Rev'd Jonathan Clement, pastor: Brother William Tenney, delegate. Church in Candia, Brother Coffin M. French, delegate.

The following parts at the installation were assigned:

“Introductory prayer, by Rev. Sam^l H. Tolman : sermon, by Rev. Dr. Daniel Dana : installing prayer, Rev. Mr. Peckham : charge to the pastor, Rev. Mr. Church : right hand of fellowship, Rev. Mr. Adams : address to the church and people, Rev. E. L. Parker : concluding prayer, Rev. Mr. Clement : benediction, Rev. J. M. C. Bartley, pastor.”

Jan. 20, 1848. “At a church meeting of the male members of the church previously appointed notifies that Rev. Mr. Bartley made a request, mainly on the state of his health, that the pastoral relations be dissolved, but after much mutual exchange of views and feelings, it was voted to defer the action for a time.”

March, 1848, it was voted “that in consequence of the improved state of health of the pastor, to ask the pastor to withdraw his resignation.”

Oct. 17, 1859, Rev. Mr. Bartley asked for a dismissal, which was accepted.

FOURTH PASTORATE.

June 2, 1859. The church met with Benj. B. Garland, moderator, and voted “to extend a call to Rev. Theodore C. Pratt, and chose Dea. Jona Kent, Dea. William Sanborn and Joseph Chase a committee.” His letter of acceptance was received June 11, 1859, and the installation service was voted to occur Tuesday, June 21, 1859.

HAMPSTEAD, June 21, 1859.

In pursuance of letters missive from the Congregational Church and Society in this place, an Ecclesiastical Council assembled, composed as follows: From Atkinson, Rev. Jesse Page, pastor; Bro. Jesse Little, Dele. Winter St. Chh., Haverhill, Rev. Leonard S. Parker, Pastor, and Bro. Francis Butters, Dele. 2d Cong. Chh., Weymouth, Mass., Rev. J. P. Terry, Pastor, Union Chh., Braintree, Mass., and Weymouth, Rev. Jonas Perkins, Pastor; Dea. John P. Nash, Dele. Chester, Rev. H. O. Howland, Pastor; Dea. William Tenney, Dele. Derry 1st Chh., Rev. E. N. Hidden, Pastor; Dea. Benj. Poore, Dele. Windham Pres. Chh., Rev. Loren Thayer, Pastor. Auburn, Rev. James Holmes, Pastor; Dea. J. Bussell, Dele.

Council organized by the choice of Rev. Mr. Hidden, moderator; James Holmes, Scribe.

The usual papers were presented, and it was voted to proceed to the examination of the candidate, Mr. Theodore C. Pratt, for ordination as pastor of this Church and Society.

Mr. Pratt read a brief statement of his doctrinal belief. After a full examination and a statement of his religious experience and reasons for entering the ministry, it was unanimously voted that the examination be considered satisfactory, and that we proceed to assign the parts for the public exercises, which were as follows:—

Invocation and reading of the Scriptures—Rev. H. O. Howland.

Prayer—Rev. Loren Thayer.

Sermon—Rev. J. P. Terry. Text, Acts 19. Theme, "The Christian Pulpit."

Ordaining Prayer—Rev. Jonas Perkins.

Charge to the Pastor—Rev. L. S. Parker.

Fellowship of Churches—Rev. Jesse Page.

Concluding Prayer—Rev. James Holmes.

Benediction by the Pastor.

Jan. 1, 1861, Rev. Mr. Pratt compiled the Articles of Faith and Covenant, as follows:—

ARTICLES OF FAITH.

I. We believe there is one God, the Creator, Preserver, and Moral Governor of the Universe; a Being of infinite power, knowledge, wisdom, justice, goodness and truth; the self-existent, independent, and immutable Fountain of Good.

References—Deut. 6: 4; Rev. 4: 8; Is. 42: 8; I John 5: 7; Heb. 3: 4; John 1: 3; Neh. 9: 6; Heb. 3: 4; Prov. 16: 33; Is. 9: 6; Phil. 2: 13; Eph. 1: 11; Rom. 10: 27; Col. 2: 3; Ex. 34, 6: 7; Ps. 90: 2; Ps. 1: 3, 6; John 3: 27; James 1: 17.

II. We believe that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments were given by inspiration of God; that they are profitable for doctrine, for correction, for reproof, and for instruction in righteousness, and that they are our only rule of doctrinal belief and religious practice.

Ref.—II Tim. 3: 16; II Pet. 1: 21; Heb. 1: 1; I Pet. 1: 11; Is. 8: 20; Acts 17: 11; Ps. 19: 7, 8; Matt. 22: 29; Mark 7: 7, 8; Gal. 1: 8, 9; Rev. 22: 18, 19.

III. We believe that the mode of divine existence is such as lays a foundation for a distinction into three persons, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; and that these three are one in essence, and equal in power and glory.

Ref.—Matt. 28: 19; John 1: 1-3; I John 5: 7; John 8: 19; Heb. 1: 3, 8; Acts 5: 3, 4; Rom. 8: 26, 27.

IV. We believe that God has made all things for himself; that known unto him are all his works from the beginning; and that he governs all things according to the counsel of his own will.

Ref.—Prov. 16: 4; Acts 15: 18; Dan. 4: 35; Is. 43: 6, 7; Rom. 11: 36; Col. 1: 16; Acts 2: 23; Col. 2: 3; Eph. 1: 11; Ps. 33: 11; Rev. 17: 17.

V. We believe that the divine law and the principle and administration of the divine government are perfectly holy, just and good; and that all rational beings are bound to approve of them as such.

Ref.—Rom. 7: 12; Gen. 18: 25; Matt. 22: 37-40; Deut. 32: 4; Job 8: 3; Ps. 89: 14, and 145: 17; Rev. 19: 2.

VI. We believe that God at first created man in his own image, in a state of rectitude and holiness, and that he fell from that state by transgressing the divine command in the article of forbidden fruit.

Ref.—Gen. 1: 17; Eccl. 7: 29; Gen. 3: 3 and 6.

VII. We believe that in consequence of the first apostasy the heart of man in his natural state is destitute of all holiness, and in a state of positive disaffection with the law, character and government of God; and that all men, previous to regeneration, are dead in trespasses and sins.

Ref.—Rom. 5: 12; Rom. 8: 7; Eph. 2: 1; Gen. 6: 5; II Cor. 3: 14; Ec. 8: 11; Is. 1: 3; John 1: 42; Col. 2: 13.

VIII. We believe that Christ, the Son of God, has, by his obedience, sufferings and death, made atonement for sins; that he is the only Redeemer of sinners; and that all who are saved will be altogether indebted to the grace and mercy of God for their salvation.

Ref.—Matt. 26: 28; I Cor. 7: 23; Titus 3: 7; Rom. 8: 32; I Cor. 6: 20; I Pet. 1: 18, 19; Gal. 3: 13; Rom. 3: 24; Phil. 2: 8; Eph. 2: 5, 8; Heb. 2: 9; John 1: 16; Tim. 1: 9; I Pet. 5: 10; Titus 2: 11.

IX. We believe that, although the invitation of the Gospel is such that whosoever will may come and take of the water of life freely, yet the depravity of the human heart is such that no man will come to Christ, except the Father, by the special and efficacious influence of his Spirit, draw him, Ref.—Rev. 22: 17; John 6: 41; John 4: 10, 14; Rev. 21: 6; II Cor. 5: 14; Heb. 2: 3, 9; John 5: 6; Rom. 8: 30; Gal. 5: 15; Eph. 1: 19; II Pet. 1: 20; Ezek. 11: 19.

X. We believe that those who embrace the Gospel were chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world, that they should be holy and without blame before him in love, and that they are saved not by works of righteousness which they have done, but according to the distinguishing mercy of God, through sanctification of the spirit and belief of the truth.

Ref.—Eph. 1: 4, 5; Luke 18: 7; Acts 13: 48; Rom. 8: 28, 30; Matt. 24: 22, 24; Col. 3: 12; I Thes. 1: 4; Titus 1: 1; I Pet. 1: 2; Rev. 13: 8; Rom. 3: 20; Gal. 2: 16.

XI. We believe that those who cordially embrace Christ, although they may be left to fall into sin, never will be left finally to fall away and perish; but will be kept by the mighty power of God through faith unto salvation.

Ref.—John 4: 14; 6: 37; 10: 27, 28; Rom. 8: 1; I Pet. 1: 5; I Thes. 5: 9, 10; Phil. 1: 6; I Cor. 1: 8, 9, 10; Job 17: 9; Ps. 125: 2; Matt. 1: 14; Col. 3: 3; Heb. 10: 30.

XII. We believe that there will be a general resurrection of the bodies, both of the just and unjust.

Ref.—I Cor. 15: 21, 22; Job 19: 20; Is. 26: 19; Hos. 13: 14; Matt. 22: 29-33; John 11: 23-25; Matt. 16: 21; John 5: 28, 29; Acts 4: 2; Rev. 20: 12.

XIII. We believe that all mankind must one day stand before the judgment seat of Christ to receive a just and final sentence of retribution, according to the deeds done in the body; and that, at the day of judgment, the state of all will be unalterably fixed, and that the punishment of the wicked and the happiness of the righteous will be endless.

Ref.—Ec. 12: 14; Matt. 25: 34, 41; Ps. 50: 6; Ec. 11: 9; John 5: 22; Acts 10: 42; Matt. 8: 1; 13: 40; 24: 50; Luke 13: 23-28; Rev. 22: 14; II Tim. 4: 7; Rom. 6: 23; I Cor. 2: 9; Rev. 2: 10; Dan. 12: 2, 3.

XIV. We believe that Christ has a visible church in the world into which none in the sight of God but real believers, and none in the sight of men but visible believers, have right of admission.

Ref.—Matt. 16: 18; 18: 17; Acts 2: 47; Cor. 6: 14-18; Cor. 1: 2; I Cor. 1: 1; I Thes. 1: 1, 2, 3; Ps. 50: 16.

XV. We believe that the sacraments of the New Testament are baptism and the Lord's Supper; that believers in regular church standing only can consistently partake of the Lord's Supper; and that visible believers and their households only can consistently be admitted to the ordinance of Baptism.

Ref.—Matt. 28: 19; Acts 2: 39; 16: 15. Matt. 26: 26-30; Gen. 17: 10; Rom. 4: 11; 11: 17-24; Acts 15: 1, 24-29; Gal. 5: 1-2; 1 Pet. 3: 21; Luke 18: 15, 16; 1 Cor. 1: 16; Heb. 9: 10.

COVENANT.

You do now, in the presence of God and men, avouch the Lord Jehovah, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, to be your God, the supreme object of your affection, and your chosen portion forever.

You humbly and cheerfully devote yourself to God in his gracious covenant, you consecrate all your powers and faculties in his service, and you promise by the aid of His Spirit to cleave to him as your chief good.

You do now cordially join yourself to this as a church of Christ, covenanting to walk with its members in Christian fellowship and in due attendance on all the institutions of Christ.

Thus, in the presence of God, you solemnly covenant and promise.

In consequence of these professions and promises (the church rise), we do now receive you into our communion, and promise to watch over you with Christian affection and tenderness, ever treating you in love as a member of the body of Christ, who is Head over all things to the Church.

And now, beloved in the Lord, let it be impressed upon your mind that you have entered into solemn circumstance, from which you can never escape. Wherever you go these vows will be with you. They will follow you to the bar of God, and in whatever world you may be fixed, will abide upon you to eternity. You can never again be as you have been. You have unalterably committed yourself, and henceforth you must be the servant of God. The eyes of the world will be upon you; and as you demean yourself so religion will be honored or disgraced. Yet be not overwhelmed. Jesus Christ is your helper. May he guide and preserve you till death, and at last receive you and us to that blessed world where our love and joy shall be forever perfect. Amen.

From Church Records

June 26, 1860, voted, "to devote the entire afternoon to the communion service, commencing September next." The vote was "cordial, neither brother or sister voting in the negative."

Sept. 2, 1860. "The communion service took the place of the afternoon service. The congregation were present and gave attention."

May 2, 1862. Voted, "that the church stand during prayer in church and request the people to do the same."

Dec. 12, 1869. "Rev. Mr. Pratt sent a letter of resignation to the church and society, which was accepted, and a council met June 4, 1870. The churches represented were Free Church of Andover, Mass., Rev. James P. Lane, Pastor, Dea. Thomas Clark, Dele. First Parish Church of Methuen, Mass., Thomas J. Grassie, Pastor, Joseph Howe, Dele. Pres. Ch., Windham, N. H., Joseph Lannan, Pastor, Joseph Park, Dele."

The pastoral relations were dissolved, and took effect Jan. 9, 1870.

FIFTH PASTORATE.

Rev. E. W. Bullard had supplied the pulpit for several weeks, and Nov. 23, 1870, on motion of Dea. Sanborn, it was voted "to extend a call to him to become the pastor."

The committee chosen to make necessary arrangements for his installation were William H. Davis, Dea. William Sanborn and John C. Little.

The installation occurred Dec. 14, 1870, "and an Ecclesiastical Council convened in the Congregational meeting house to examine, and, if advisable, to install Rev. E. W. Bullard, consisting of Rev. Jesse Page of Atkinson, N. H., Dele.; Rev. Calvin M. Terry, Pastor, No. Plaistow and Haverhill, Wm. B. Carlton, Dele. Rev. S. Bixby, Pastor, Dea. E. S. Judkins of Kingston. Rev. M. A. Gates, Pastor, Moses Kelly, Dele., of Salem, N. H. Rev. R. Seeley, D. D., Pastor, and B. F. Brickett, Dele., North Church, Haverhill, Mass. Rev. J. C. Paine, Pastor, B. E. Merrill, Dele., Groveland, Mass. Isaac W. Smith, Dele., Franklin St. church, Manchester, N. H. Rev. Thomas J. Grassie, Pastor, Wm. C. Sleeper, Dele., Methuen, Mass. Rev. Joseph Lamman, Pastor, Rev. James P. Lane, without charge.

The following exercises were given: Reading Scripture and prayer, by Rev. Joseph Lamman; sermon, Rev. R. H. Seeley, D. D.; installation prayer, Rev. Calvin Terry; charge to the pastor, Rev. Thos. J. Grassie; right hand of fellowship, Rev. J. C. Paine; address to the people, Rev. J. P. Lane; concluding prayer, Rev. S. Bixby; benediction, Rev. E. W. Bullard, pastor elect.

Failing health compelled Rev. E. W. Bullard to send a letter of resignation to the church and society, Oct. 9, 1875, which, under the circumstances, was accepted, and Oct. 25, 1875, Rev. Jesse Page of Atkinson, N.H., Rev. Charles Tenney of Chester, Rev. William Page of Windham, Rev. E. W. Haskins of Derry, N. H., Dea. Wm. Ambrose, delegate, united in the council for dismissal at that time. Rev. E. W. Bullard gave utterance to his friendly feelings toward his people, and the hope that he had ever cherished of "dying in the harness" seemed destined of God to fail of fulfilment.

SIXTH PASTORATE.

Feb. 21, 1876, Dea. William Sanborn, Dea. Caleb Williams and Bro. Jacob Irving were chosen a committee to unite with the Society Committee in extending a call to Rev. Albert Watson to become their pastor.

Feb. 29, 1876, Rev. Albert Watson sent a letter of acceptance. The council convened at the meeting house Thursday, March 23, 1876, for his installation. Rev. Charles Tenney, Pastor, and John A. Hasleton, Dele., Chester, N. H. Atkinson, Rev. C. T. Melvin, Pastor; Dea. Bailey Knight, Dele. Derry, Rev. R. W. Haskins, Pastor; Bro. H. R. Underhill, Dele. East Derry, Rev. E. S. Huntress, Pastor; Bro. Jonas Herrick, Dele. Salem, N. H., Rev. Samuel Bowker, Pastor; Albert Robinson, Dele. So. Lawrence, Mass., Rev. Clark Carter, Pastor, Olive St. Church, Nashua, N. H., Bro. T. W. H. Hussey, Dele.

Rev. David Bremmer, Rev. Mr. Winslow, and Rev. Joseph Kimball were invited to sit with the council.

Rev. E. W. Bullard of Stockbridge, Mass., was invited, but was unable to be present.

The installation exercises were: Introductory service, Rev. David Bremmer; sermon, Rev. Clark Carter; prayer installing, Rev. Samuel Bowker; charge to the pastor, Rev. E. W. Huntress; right hand of fellowship, Rev. R. W. Haskins; charge to the people, Rev. Charles Tenney; benediction, by Rev. Albert Watson, pastor elect."

July 1, 1876, voted, "to accept the report of the church committee, Bros. Sanborn, Williams, Irving, Watson, Titcomb and Davis, and strike out the 10th article of the creed." (See Articles of Faith, 1861.)

"July 1, 1876, voted, "to discontinue the use of fermented wine at the communion table and use unfermented wine instead."

Sept. 5, 1879, "the committee chosen to consider the advisability of adopting some new methods of discipline, made the report, after careful deliberation, your committee feel that it would not be advisable to make any new law or adopt any new methods of discipline at present, but would recommend:

1st. That all of the officers and members of the church do their best, with a loving spirit, to restore such as may have been overtaken with a fault.

2d. That the present rules of discipline, as laid down in Matthew 18: 15-17, be faithfully enforced with those who persist in an evil course."

Apr. 29, 1880, "The committee on absent members made the following report, which it was voted to print and present a copy to every member of the church:--

HAMPSTEAD, N. H., May 1, 1880.

By-Laws in Relation to Resident Members who Neglect the Meetings of the Church:—

1st. "All resident members of the church who neglect two communion services in succession, except in cases of sickness or other circumstances wholly beyond their control, shall be deemed worthy of discipline."

2d. "All resident members who shall wilfully neglect the prayer meetings or the preaching service of the church for three months in succession, shall also be deemed worthy of discipline; unless a satisfactory explanation is made to the church, action shall be taken at once, according with Matthew 18: 15-17."

"No Christian can wilfully neglect any of the meetings of the church without violating a direct scriptural injunction. See Hebrews 10: 25."

NOTE.—It should be distinctly understood that while these by-laws have reference only to those who neglect the meetings of the church, the rule of discipline is still in force in relation to those who fail to fulfil their vows, and especially to those who are guilty of immoral conduct."

By-Laws in Relation to Church Members:—

1st. Any absent member who neglects to communicate with the church, or attend any of its meetings for twelve months, shall be temporarily suspended from the church by a vote of the church."

2d. "If the address of such negligent absent member is known, the clerk shall immediately notify him of the action of the church in relation to his case."

3d. "If a satisfactory explanation is made, the church shall at once restore him to membership."

4th. But in case no such explanation is made in six months, his name shall be dropped from the record, and he shall no longer be considered as a member of the church."

Feb. 24, 1884, the following resolutions were adopted:—

"Whereas, gambling, lotteries and gift entertainments have become very prevalent throughout our land, to the great detriment of good morals and the well being of society, we hereby Resolve 1st. That we, as a Christian church, consider it our doing to resist all evil and do everything in our power to promote righteousness and the best interests of society at large. We therefore,

Resolve 2d. That we will steadfastly oppose the above-named evils with precept and example.

Resolve 3d. That we are in hearty sympathy with all societies and organizations which have for their object the uplifting of man and the relieving of distress, and will co-operate to the extent of our ability and all legitimate means for the promotion of their welfare."

Oct. 30, 1884, voted, "to grant the request of Dea. Sanborn to resign at the expiration of his twenty-five years of service as deacon, and that hereafter all deacons should be chosen for a term of three years."

July 2, 1885, "A motion was made to discontinue the afternoon service for the rest of the church year," but July 9, voted, "to discontinue the afternoon service for an indefinite time."

Nov. 17, 1887, voted, "to accept the report of the church committee and have 300 copies of the church manual printed."

ARTICLES OF FAITH, 1887.

As a church of Jesus Christ, associated in accordance with the teachings of the New Testament for the public worship of God, for the observances of Gospel sacraments and ordinances, for mutual edification and encouragement in the Christian life, and for the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom, we declare our union in faith and love with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ.

I. We receive the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament as the Word of God and the only infallible rule of religious faith and practice. Tim. 3: 16; Heb. 1: 1; John 5: 39.

II. We confess our faith in the one living and true God, revealed as the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost. Deut. 4: 4; James 1: 17; Matt. 28: 19.

III. We believe in the universal sinfulness and ruin of our race, since "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed unto all men for that all have sinned," Heb. 3: 23; Rom. 6: 23; Eph. 2: 1.

IV. We believe that the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, having taken upon himself our nature, has, by his obedience, sufferings and death, provided a way of salvation for all mankind, and that, through faith in his name, whosoever will may be saved. John 3: 16; Acts 4: 12; Rev. 12: 17.

V. We believe that Christ established a visible church in the world, that the sacraments are Baptism and the Lord's Supper, and that professed believers only can consistently partake of the Lord's Supper while they and their children are proper subjects for baptism, Luke 22: 14-20; Acts 11: 14, 47; Acts 14: 15.

VI. We believe that there will be a general resurrection of the dead, and that all mankind must one day stand before the judgment seat of Christ to receive a just and final sentence of retribution, according to the deeds done in the body; that at the day of judgment the state of all will be unalterably fixed, and that the wicked "shall go away into everlasting punishment, and the righteous into life eternal." Dan. 12: 2; John 5: 28, 29; Rev. 20: 12-15.

COVENANT.

Dearlly Belored :—In the presence of God and this assembly, you do now freely and cordially enter into the everlasting covenant of grace. You acknowledge the Lord Jehovah, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost to be your God, the supreme object of your affection and your portion forever.

You humbly and heartily consecrate yourself (selves) to God in this Covenant, promising that by divine help you will cleave to him as your chief good, devote your life to his service, hearken to his word, observe his ordinances, and keep his Sabbath; and that henceforth, denying all ungodliness and every worldly lust, you will abstain from the use of all intoxicating drinks as a beverage, discountenance in every appropriate way their sale and use, and endeavor in every respect to live soberly, righteously and godly in the world.

You do cordially join yourself (selves) to this church, and engage to submit to its rules of government and discipline, to do all you can to promote its interests, to strive for its purity, peace and prosperity, and to work with its members in faithfulness and love.

You thus covenant and promise.

We, then, the members of this church (here the members will rise), affectionately receive you to our Christian fellowship. We welcome you in the name of our Lord and Master to a share in the duties, privileges and glories of his church. We pledge to you our love, our sympathy, our counsel, and our prayers. And now, beloved, remember that you are fellow-citizens with the saints and of the household of God. Let your constant prayer be that Christ may dwell in your hearts, and that you may be rooted and grounded in love. The Lord bless you and keep you. The Lord make his face to shine upon you and be gracious unto you. The Lord lift up his countenance upon you and give you peace.

Now unto Him who is able to keep you from falling and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy to the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and peace, both now and forever. Amen.

Sept. 29, 1890. A letter was publicly read presenting the new pulpit furniture to the Congregational Church and Society from Albert L. Eastman and wife.

Oct. 9, 1891, Dea. Caleb W. Williams sent the following request: "Having served you as deacon for nineteen years, and having removed from town, it becomes me to resign my office, praying that you may be led by a true spirit and make a wise choice." His resignation was accepted, and Dea. Sanborn invited to serve out the remainder of the year.

June 26, 1890, voted, "to close the church during the making of some repairs on the church and hold meetings in the vestry."

Oct. 14, 1891, Rev. Albert Watson having received a call to a larger field of labor, sent a letter of resignation, which was voted upon, a council called, and all parties concluded that no justification could be found to admit of the pastoral relations being dissolved, and Rev. Mr. Watson advised to withdraw his resignation, which was happily done, all singing, "Blest be the tie that binds."

May 25, 1893, a communication was received by the church and society asking that the pastoral relations be dissolved, in view of his being called to Mystic Side Congregational Church at Everett, Mass., where his duty called him.

Forrest E. Merrill, Dea. C. Pressey, and Dea. J. W. Garland were chosen a committee to call a council to advise in the matter. The council was composed of J. M. Goodridge, delegate, of Atkinson, N. H.; Rev. J. G. Robertson, pastor, S. O. Morse, delegate, of Chester, N. H.; Rev. H. B. Putnam, pastor, G. M. Barker, delegate, Derry, N. H.; Rev. R. C. Drisko, pastor, Dea. J. Montgomery, delegate, East Derry, N. H.; Rev. Philip Easterbrook, pastor, Dea. Giles Merrill, delegate, No. Parish, Haverhill, Mass.; Rev. J. B. Moore, pastor, Charles H. Webster, delegate, Salem, N. H.; Rev. S. L. Gerrold, pastor, Hollis, N. H.; and Rev. Albert Watson was released as pastor.

SEVENTH PASTORATE.

Oct. 28, 1893, the committee of the church and society extended to Rev. Rufus P. Gardner of Marion, Mass., a unanimous call to become their pastor, subject to the following conditions: "That the pastor's salary shall be $1000 annually and the use of the parsonage, with three Sundays vacation each year, the call to date from Nov. 1, 1893."

Rev. Rufus P. Gardner accepted the call, and an ecclesiastical council convened at the church at 2 o'clock, Dec. 5, 1893, with the following roll of the council: Atkinson, N. H., Rev. George H. Scott, pastor, Prof. T. B. Rice, delegate; Chester, N. H., Rev. J. G. Robertson, pastor, J. A. Hasleton, delegate; East Derry, N. H., Rev. E. C. Drisko, pastor; No. Parish, Plaistow and Haverhill, Rev. P. Easterbrook, pastor, Charles H. Haseltine, delegate; West Parish, Haverhill, Mass., Rev. J. N. Lowell, pastor, Fred W. Stickney, delegate; Mystic Side Congregational Church, Rev. Albert Watson, pastor; Congregational Church, Marion, Mass., Rev. C. Dryer and W. C. Gibbs, delegates; Congregational Church, Hampstead, Forrest E. Merrill, delegate; Salem, N. H., Rev. S. Sherman Gove, pastor, J. H. Hall, delegate; with invited ministers, Rev. T. C. Pratt, Candia, N. H.; Rev. A. J. McKeon, Amherst, N. H.; and Rev. Dr. George H. Reed of Haverhill, Mass.

Organ Voluntary.

Anthem.

Minutes of the Council, by Rev. R. C. Drisko, scribe.

Invocation, by Rev. P. Easterbrook.

Scripture Reading, Rev. J. G. Robertson.

Hymn.

Sermon, Rev. Dr. Geo. H. Reed of North Church, Haverhill, Mass.

Anthem.

Prayer of installation, Rev. T. C. Pratt.

Response, "Hear my prayer."

Charge to the pastor, Rev. A. J. McKeon.
 Right hand of fellowship, Rev. R. C. Drisko.
 Anthem.
 Address to the people, Rev. Albert Watson.
 Hymn and benediction by pastor elect, Rev. R. P. Gardner.

At the communion service held June 3, 1898, Rev. R. P. Gardner, in behalf of Mrs. Mary J. Fellows, presented to the church a new individual communion service, in memory of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Brickett, which was accepted by the church with grateful appreciation.

Sunday, August 4, 1901, Rev. Rufus P. Gardner read his letter of resignation to the people, having been elected to assume the duties of superintendent, and Mrs. Gardner as matron of the New Hampshire State Orphans' Home at Franklin, N. H., his resignation to take effect Sept. 16, 1901.

August 8, 1901, the resignation was regretfully accepted, a council of dismissal not to be called until a successor was installed as pastor of the church.

The clerk read the following letter:—

*"Dear People:—*Will you allow us to present to you a new communion table to take the place of the table that has been used.

Sincerely yours,

REV. and MRS. RUFUS P. GARDNER,

MISS ADDIE B. and MASTER HAROLD P. GARDNER.

The gift was kindly acknowledged.

EIGHTH PASTORATE.

A call by the church and society was extended to Rev. Walter H. Woodsum of Bath, N. H., to become the eighth pastor, January 24, 1902, to date from the following April 1.

Invitations were sent, April 15, requesting the attendance of the reverend pastor or acting pastor, with a delegate, to meet at the church, 29th inst., to act in respect to the dismissal of Rev. Rufus P. Gardner and to assist in the installation of Rev. W. H. Woodsum. The churches and individuals invited were as follows: The Congregational churches of Chester, Candia, East Derry, Atkinson, Kingston, Salem, Bath, First of Nashua, Union of East Hampstead, Congregational of Plaistow and North Haverhill, and North Church in Haverhill, Mass., with the Rev. Albert Watson of Windham, Rev. T. C. Pratt of Candia, Rev. Andrew Gibson of Boscawen, Rev. A. B. Howard of Danville, Rev. L. N. Fogg of West Hampstead, and Rev. Myron P. Dickey of Milton.

The council convened at 10 o'clock, April 29, 1902. Rev. R. P. Gardner was dismissed from the pastorate. At one o'clock the following programme was enjoyed, and Rev. Walter H. Woodsum installed as pastor:—

1. Organ voluntary, by Mrs. Frank W. Emerson.
2. Anthem, by the choir, William H. Davis, leader.
3. Preliminary statement, by the moderator.
4. Reading of the minutes of the Council, by the scribe.
5. Invocation, by Theodore C. Pratt, Candia.
6. Reading of the Scriptures.
7. Anthem, by the choir.
8. Sermon, by Rev. Cyrus Richardson, D. D., Nashua, whose text was from Gal. 5: 1, and Heb. 13: 7, the last clause from Revised Version; topic, "A Congregational Esprit de Corps," treated under two heads, 1. How is this spirit acquired? 2. How is it manifested? Especial emphasis was put upon the importance of getting and maintaining our historical bearings, and upon the necessity of keeping our churches in vital touch with each other.
9. Prayer of installation, by Rev. James G. Robertson, Chester.
10. Response, by the choir.
11. Charge to the pastor, by Rev. Albert Watson, Windham.
12. Right hand of fellowship, by Rev. William T. Bartley, Salem.
13. Hymn 679, by the congregation.
14. Charge to the people, by Rev. Rufus P. Gardner, Franklin.
15. Greeting to the people, by Rev. A. B. Howard, Danville.
16. Greeting to the pastor, by Rev. Lewis N. Fogg, West Hampstead.
17. Reception into the fellowship of the church, Rev. and Mrs. Walter H. Woodsum and Mrs. Mary W. Thomas, by the moderator, by vote of the church.
18. Duet, Mrs. Albert H. Little and Miss Mary G. Davis.
19. Concluding prayer, by Rev. John S. Curtis, Candia.
20. Hymn 425, by the congregation.
21. Benediction, by the pastor.

The following manual was approved Oct. 2, 1902:—

I.

We believe in the One Living and Personal God, the Father Almighty, the Creator of all things and Preserver of same.

II.

We believe in Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, in whom dwells all the fullness of the Godhead bodily, who became flesh and dwelt among us, taking upon Himself our nature, suffered and died for our sins, He rose again from the dead and ascended into heaven, where He sitteth an Intercessor at the right hand of God, until He shall come again to judge the world in righteousness.

III.

We believe in the Holy Ghost or Spirit, the Lord and giver of life, who is our Comforter, Guide, and Instructor, who operates on men, dead in trespasses and sin, to quicken them to repentance and faith; who witnesses to our hearts that we are the sons of God, and empowers us to rise into the full stature of men in Christ Jesus.

IV.

We believe that the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments were given by inspiration of God, and are the only authoritative revelation of God, and the only sufficient rule for our faith and practice.

V.

We believe that, according to the Scriptures, God made man upright and in His own image, but that he voluntarily departed from his Maker by transgression, and consequently plunged, not only himself, but all his progeny, into a state of sin and alienation from God.

VI.

We believe that the depravity of man argues the necessity of regeneration in order to become a fit subject for the kingdom of God, that when he is born again, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, but of God, he is viewed righteous before God only on account of the merit of our Lord Jesus Christ.

VII.

We believe that Christ has a church militant, and for its benefits hath appointed the ordinances of baptism and the Lord's supper, to be observed in His church, in remembrance of Him, till He comes the second time without sin unto salvation.

VIII.

Finally we believe there will be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust, the righteous to life eternal, but the wicked to everlasting punishment.

THE COVENANT.

In the presence of God, angels and men, we avouch the Lord Jehovah to be our God, the object of our supreme affection and our protection forever. We cordially acknowledge the Lord Jesus Christ in all His mediatorial offices, Prophet, Priest and King, as our only Lord and Saviour and final Judge; and the Holy Spirit as our Sanctifier, Comforter and Guide. We humbly and cheerfully devote ourselves to God in the everlasting covenant of His grace, cleaving to Him as our chief good, consecrating our faculties and powers to His service and glory. We unreservedly covenant and promise through the help of divine grace, without which we can do nothing, that we will give diligent attention to the word and ordinances of God and to prayer; that we will seek the honor of His name and the interests of His kingdom; and that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we will live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world. We cordially join ourselves to this church as a true church of Jesus Christ, promising subjection to its rules and discipline, and solemnly covenanting to strive, as much as in us lies, to promote its peace, purity, edification and prosperity, and to walk with its members in christian love, faithfulness, watchfulness, meekness and sobriety.

Trusting in the grace of God, do you thus covenant and engage with us?

FORM OF ADMISSION INTO THE FELLOWSHIP OF THE CHURCH.

The candidates rise, and are addressed by the pastor as follows, or to similar purport:—

Beloved—You present yourselves, in this public manner, to confess Jesus Christ before men, and to unite with His Visible Church. The confession you now make, and the engagements into which you now enter, are of the most solemn moment. May the God of all grace, who hath called you unto His eternal glory, by Christ Jesus, strengthen you, and give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him, that you may know what is the hope of His calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of His power to us-ward who believe.

Ye are not come unto the mount that burned with fire. But ye are come unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem; and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first-born which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to Jesus Christ, the Mediator of the new covenant.

Faithful is He that calleth you, who also will do it.

[The Confession of Faith of the church is now read.]

Do you heartily join with us in the substance of this confession, and profess your belief of these things?

You will now enter into covenant with God and with this church.

[The covenant of the church is now read.]

Trusting in the grace of God, do you thus covenant and engage?

In consequence of these confessions and engagements we, the members of this church [here the members of the church rise] affectionately receive you into our holy fellowship in full communion, and promise, in the strength of divine grace, to watch over you and seek your edification with Christian affection and tenderness as long as you shall continue with us.

And now, beloved in the Lord, the vows of God are upon you. Having put on Christ, let it be your care to walk in Him, henceforth, in newness of life. There are given unto you exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature. Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of His might. Take unto you the whole armor of God, that you may be able to stand in the evil day. Be faithful unto death, and you shall receive a crown of life.

Now unto Him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.

FORM OF PUBLIC CONSECRATION OF CHILDREN.

The name of the child is to be given to the pastor in writing, with the date of birth, and also the names of its parents.

The children are presented, while some of the following, or similar, selections of Scriptures are read:—

The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear Him, and His righteousness unto children's children; to such as keep His covenant, and to those that remember His commandments to do them.—Ps. ciii : 17, 18.

The children of Thy servants shall continue, and their seed shall be established before Thee.—Ps. cii : 28.

I will pour My spirit upon thy seed, and My blessing upon thine offspring.—Isa. xlii : 3.

For the promise is unto you and to your children.—Acts ii : 39.

Jesus said, suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.—Matt. xix : 14.

Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved and thy house.—Acts xvi : 31.

And when she had weaned him, she took him and brought him to the house of the Lord. And she said, for this child I prayed; and the Lord hath given me my petition which I asked of Him; therefore, also, I have returned him whom I have obtained (marginal rendering) to the Lord. And he worshipped the Lord. And the child did minister unto the Lord, and grew before the Lord.—I Sam. i : 24, 27, 28, and ii : 11, 21.

Fathers bring your children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.—Eph. vi : 4.

Catechise a child in his way (marginal rendering), and when he is old he will not depart from it.—Prov. xiii : 6.

I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day.—II Tim. i : 12.

[To the child.] God grant that, from a child you may know the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.—II Tim. iii : 15.

Then follows prayer.

Administration of the rite—addressing the parents—Do you hereby honestly and sincerely, believing that you are thus commanded to do by the Lord, consecrate this, your child, unto God, to be His eternally, believing that he accepts this, your gift, which is holy and acceptable in His sight, and considering your child as a holy trust committed unto you of the Lord, you do here promise to lead them in the ways of righteousness, and that they are the Lord's, bringing them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord?

Then the minister places his hands, moistened in clean water from the font (a symbol of cleansing), upon the head of the child, and makes presentation of the child unto the Lord by consecrating it in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost—Amen.

Following with the concluding prayer.

PRINCIPLES AND RULES OF ORDER.

OF THE CHURCH.

I.

This church desires to be conformed as far as possible to the order and discipline of the Apostolic churches, as set forth in the New Testament.

II.

We believe that Congregationalism is that system of church government in which the Scriptures are recognized as the only authoritative guide respecting church order and discipline, and which maintains that, according to the Scriptures, a church is a company of confessed Christians, who, having covenanted and associated together to worship God and to celebrate religious ordinances, are authorized to elect necessary officers, to make by-laws, to discipline offending members, and to act authoritatively and conclusively upon all appropriate business, independently of the control of any person or persons whatever; at the same time we appreciate the privileges and recognize the duties which belong to the communion of the several congregations of believers. We extend to other churches holding the common faith and maintaining the common order, and receive from them the fellowship and counsel which the New Testament requires; and we seek the promotion of peace and charity with all churches of our Lord, Jesus Christ.

OF THE OFFICERS OF THE CHURCH.

III.

The officers of this church shall consist of a pastor, deacons, clerk, treasurer, and superintendent of the Sunday school, who, together with so many other members, not less than two, as may be determined at each annual meeting for the year ensuing, shall constitute the standing committee.

IV.

1. The pastor of this church shall be a member of it and its standing moderator.

2. In the absence of the pastor, or when church action respecting him is to be taken, the deacon senior in office, who is present, shall preside, unless three members request a moderator be chosen by ballot, when it shall be done.

3. When a pastor is to be chosen, the name of the person proposed shall be presented at least one week before he can be voted for.

4. The vote shall be by ballot.

5. The votes of two-thirds of the members qualified to vote, present and voting at a meeting duly notified for this purpose, shall be necessary to constitute an election.

6. No one shall become pastor of this church who does not assent to its confession of faith and covenant.

V.

1. To the deacons, according to seniority in office, pertains the office of moderator, when necessary; that of assisting in the administration of the Lord's supper, and of aiding the pastor generally in the spiritual care of the church.

2. The number of deacons shall be determined from time to time.

3. Their term of office shall be the number of years that they are deacons, so elected that the term of office of one shall expire each year and a new one be elected each year for the full term.

4. When a deacon is to be chosen to fill a vacancy, the standing committee shall give notice of the proposed election at least one week before the vote shall be taken.

5. The vote shall be by ballot.

6. The votes of two-thirds of the members qualified to vote, present and voting, at a meeting duly notified for this purpose, shall be necessary to constitute an election.

VII.

The standing committee shall examine all applicants for admission to the fellowship of the church and present to it a report of the names of such as they approve, candidates whom they may not approve having the right to appeal to the whole church.

This committee shall also act as a committee of preliminary inquiry in all cases of discipline, and the church will listen to no such case not presented to it by them, except in the way of appeal from their decision. This committee shall also have a general oversight of the affairs of the church, and shall present a report of the conditions of the church and the doings of the committee at each annual meeting.

VIII.

The clerk shall keep the records of the church and shall present his records of each church meeting for approval to the standing committee, at their meeting next succeeding that church meeting, whose approval, entered by the chairman on its face, shall validate the records.

IX.

The treasurer shall have charge of all moneys of the church, and make report at each annual meeting.

X.

The superintendent of the Sunday school shall have the general oversight of the affairs of the school, and make report of its conditions, doings and prospects at each annual meeting.

XI.

The superintendent, assistant superintendent and the superintendents of the various departments of the Sunday school, together with the pastor, shall appoint the secretary, the treasurer, the librarian, and any other necessary officers of the Sunday school, who, together with the superintendents and the pastor, shall constitute a board of government for the school. Plans for raising money and all expenditure of same shall first be submitted to the board of government for their approval. They shall also seek to promote the good and well-being of the Sunday school generally.

XII.

Other officers and committees may be chosen for the convenient ordering of affairs, as the church may see fit.

OF THE MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH.

XII.

1. The qualifications for membership are: First, evidence of repentance and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ; and, second, assent in substance to the confession of faith and covenant of the church; and all persons uniting with the church shall sign its confession of faith, covenant, and rules and by-laws, with their full name, in a book kept for that purpose.

2. All candidates for admission into the church shall be examined by the standing committee.

3. If approved, they shall be propounded to the church at least one week before the vote is to be taken on their reception.

4. Such as have been approved by vote of the church and have been publicly admitted into membership, shall be "members in good and regular standing."

XIII.

1. Members of this church removing from its neighborhood will be expected to take letters of dismission and recommendation to the church with which they worship within one year, or render satisfactory excuse for not doing so, and communicate annually to the church their desire to retain their membership and those who neither take their letters within one year, nor yet communicate once a year their desire to retain their membership, shall have letters of dismission and recommendation as "members in good and regular standing" only to the date of their departure from this place, and their names shall be placed on the "retired list," under the direction of the standing committee.

2. Letters of dismission and recommendation are valid for six months only from their date; dismission shall take effect when notice is received of the reception of the applicant by another church.

3. No letter of dismission and recommendation shall be given by this church except to an individual church of evangelical faith, to be specified in the letter.

XIV.

1. Members of this church who have absented themselves from its worship or ordinances for one year without rendering satisfactory excuse, shall not be considered "members in good and regular standing," and their names shall be placed on the "retired list," under the direction of the standing committee, as long as such habitual absence continues.

2. Members whose names are on the "retired list" shall not vote in business meetings of the church.

3. The church censures are: admonition, suspension from church privileges, and excommunication.

4. As this church regards the object of its discipline and censures to be two-fold, as much for the restoration of the offender as for the justification of the body, it hereby declares its judgment that the acts of "suspension from church privileges," or "excommunication," while they cut off their subject from all church privileges, do not cut him off from any church duty, or from all church relation, leaving him not a member, but a disfranchised member of the spiritual body corporate, as such it will always pray and labor for his return; and the clerk shall keep a record of the names of all from whom the church has withdrawn its communion.

5. This church regards the rule laid down by our Lord in Matthew xviii: 15-17, to be the regular course of procedure in all cases of discipline.

OF THE ORDINANCES OF WORSHIP.

XV.

1. The meetings for public worship shall be at such times, and the order of service shall be so arranged as the church may direct.

2. The sacrament of the Lord's supper shall be administered usually on the first Sabbath of every other month, commencing with January.

3. The admission of members and public consecration of children shall ordinarily be at the same season.

4. A prayer meeting shall be held ordinarily on Thursday evening of each week.

5. The meeting next previous to the Lord's supper shall be preparatory to that sacrament.

6. Other meetings may be appointed from time to time by the church.

BUSINESS AND ANNUAL MEETINGS, ELECTIONS, ETC.

XVI.

1. Business may be legally done at the close of any regular meeting of the church.

2. A special business meeting may be called at any time, when in the opinion of the standing committee it is expedient, or shall be called on the written application to the pastor, or in his absence or refusal, to the deacon senior in office, of five members.

3. Special business shall always be notified from the pulpit the Sabbath previous, or in exigencies where greater haste is expedient, by written or personal notice served upon every resident member and the object of the meeting specified.

4. Members of the church only are entitled to vote upon business before it.

5. All business meetings should be opened with prayer.

XVII.

1. The annual meeting of the church shall be held just previous to the first Sunday in January, on such day as the standing committee may appoint.

2. At the annual meeting the church shall elect necessary officers, vote on the collections for the ensuing year for missionary and benevolent purposes, and act on any other business that may be presented to it at that time.

3. The order of business at the annual meeting shall be as follows:—

1. Reading of the Scriptures and prayer.
2. Roll call.
3. Reading of records of last annual meeting.
4. Choice of deacon for full term by ballot.
5. Choice of clerk for ensuing year by ballot.
6. Report of treasurer and auditor.
7. Action thereon.
8. Choice of treasurer for ensuing year by ballot.
9. Choice of auditor for ensuing year by ballot.
10. Report of standing committee.
11. Action thereon—when necessary.
12. Fixing the number of standing committee for the ensuing year.
13. Choice of standing committee by ballot.
14. Report of the superintendents of the Sunday school.
15. Choice of superintendents by ballot.
16. Unfinished business.
17. New business.
18. Prayer and adjournment.

IN GENERAL.

XVIII.

No alteration shall be made in these rules except at a regular meeting of the church, after notice of the exact nature of the proposed change at a regular meeting of the church at least one week previous, and by vote of three-fourths of the members qualified to vote, present and voting. This rule shall not, however, be so construed as to forbid the suspension of any rule for a single meeting, provided the church shall see fit unanimously to order such suspension.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

In all ages we find the teacher and the taught. The earliest people, as well as the savages, must have been taught by observation or by painful experience. In ancient Hebrew times the rabbi, or wise men, taught the people how to live, how to act, and how to keep well, but not especially of death. Antoninus, Plutarch, Confucius, Demosthenes, Seneca, Socrates, and other learned men of the times, taught the ethical life, the orderly society, and the essentials of happiness. In the so-called mediæval times the teaching was of ignorance, darkness, and of death. Such teachers as Bacon,

Newton, Kepler, and Humboldt, and in later years Darwin, Spencer, Huxley and Heckel have taught that the ethical and natural life was the only rational life.

All subjects that have engaged the attention of mankind have had teachers and pupils.

Classes have been formed for the study of the Bible since the days of Abraham and Moses, as shown in the book of Nehemiah, which tells of a church school. We read that "Jesus, when twelve years of age, was an earnest scholar within the courts of the Temple."

It is, therefore, probable that a class or school was formed in Hampstead by the earnest band of Christian workers who gathered in the log meeting house fifteen years before the Church of Christ was organized, although we find no authentic account of an organized Sunday school before 1818, and even then, and later to 1875, the records are very imperfect.

The past twenty-five years or more a flourishing Sunday school has been carried on by a corps of faithful teachers and interested pupils.

The officers of the Sunday school are elected annually at the church meeting. The school remembers the Sunday before Christmas with sacred observance, Christmas eve with a tree, Easter and Children's Day with appropriate exercises.

They have a library of 500 volumes. The school has three grades, senior, intermediate, junior or primary, and uses "The Pilgrim Series" of lessons, by M. C. Hazard, Ph. D., and the hymn book, "Heavenly Sunlight," in their service of song.

The school was the first in Rockingham county to observe "Rally Day," in 1898, and annually in October the scholars take special pleasure in their "rallying service."

July, 1902, the officers, teachers and scholars were as follows:—

Superintendent—Forrest E. Merrill.
 Assistant Superintendent—John C. Sanborn.
 Superintendent Home Department—Miss Mary E. Spollett.
 Superintendent Cradle Roll—Mrs. John S. Corson.
 Secretary and Treasurer—Miss Myrta A. Little.
 Librarians—Fred S. C. Grover and C. Park Pressey.

The ladies have, without doubt, added their efforts and aid to every good work through all of the years of the growth of the church, but in attempting to write a history covering a period of years in which no official record seems to have been kept, we can only give a few facts as told by old people, which they had heard from their elders, concerning the work done by the women of the Hampstead church in the early part of the past century. We are told that the ladies in 1830 took great delight in their sewing circle, that they made dickies, both ruffled and plain, stocks, collars and wristbands, which they sold to the gentlemen who joined them at the substantial supper and the social hours of the evening; that donation parties were an interesting feature of the work of the ladies, and many a sick and needy family in Hampstead was relieved by their kind offerings.

We find no written record of an organization until 1852, when they subscribed their names to the following constitution:—

ARTICLE 1. The name of this association shall be the Hampstead Ladies' Charitable Society.

ART. 2. The object of this society shall be to create funds, by work or other approved means, to be appropriated to such objects of charity as shall be agreeable to a majority of the members at any regular meeting.

ART. 3. Any lady contributing annually twenty-five cents to the funds of the association shall be a member.

ART. 4. The officers of the society shall be a superintendent, two assistant superintendents, and secretary, who shall be the treasurer. These shall appoint as many collectors as they shall deem expedient, and shall constitute a board of managers.

ART. 5. There shall be an annual meeting of the association at such time and place as the board of managers shall designate, when a report shall be presented by the secretary, officers elected for the ensuing year, and such other business transacted to promote the objects of the association.

ART. 6. The society shall meet at least once a month, together or in sections, as may be agreed upon by its members.

ART. 7. This constitution shall be subject to an alteration at only a regular meeting, and upon the recommendation of the board of managers.

The names of the signers of this constitution were :—

Mrs. Susan Bartley,	Betsey E. Eastman,
Susan R. Eastman,	Susan E. M. Stevens,
Nabby K. Brickett,	Elizabeth Calef,
Adeline H. Eastman,	Martha Jane Adolphus,
Sally Harriman,	Judith S. Eastman,
Elizabeth Emerson,	Sally Heath,
Clarissa Kent,	Eliza Jane Nichols,
Susan C. Eastman,	Lois Sanborn,
Polly Ayer,	Clara Ann Kent,
Mary Jane Kimball,	Elizabeth Ann Smith,
Eliza S. Ordway,	Abigail R. Heath,

Emma E. Ordway,	Martha B. Marble,
Louisa M. Ordway,	Sabra F. Tewksbury,
Nancy Ordway,	Emily J. Davis,
Hannah H. Chase,	Priscilla Sawyer.
Elizabeth M. Chase,

The proceeds during that year, 1852, were $13.62, of which $6.53 were expended as follows by the society : One piece of cotton cloth, $2.30 ; two spools of cotton and buttons, 14c. : needles, 9c. : chimneys, 25c. : oil, 35c. : one piece of cotton cloth, $2.20 ; a blank book, 20c. : and the remainder of their money was given to the "Seaman's Friend Society" at Portsmouth.

The officers chosen for the year 1852 were : Mrs. Susan Bartley, superintendent ; Mrs. Susan Eastman and Mrs. Nabby Brickett, assistants ; Mrs. Adeline H. Eastman, secretary and treasurer.

In 1853 additional members were Esther Bartley, Hannah

Drew, Mary Griffin, Mary J. Heath, Mary S. Kent, Ruth G. Merrill, Mrs. Pillsbury, Angeline Simpson, Ann E. Sawyer, Mary P. Eastman.

June 7, 1852, they met at Mrs. Tappan Eastman's, with fourteen members present, and reorganized by the choice of Miss Esther Bartley as superintendent; Mrs. Tappan Eastman and Miss Mary P. Eastman, assistants; Mrs. Adeline H. Eastman, secretary and treasurer; and they also voted to meet at the different houses and take tea, two kinds of food only to be served, and that the proceeds for the year should go to the Home Missionary Society.

Aug. 6, 1853, they met at the house of Mrs. Marble, with thirty-six members present. The meeting was opened by prayer by Mrs. Elizabeth Emerson. Then they cut a piece of cloth into sheets and pillow cases. Mrs. Mount gave them one dollar, and they received from a member who brought her own work, three cents.

Sept. 7, 1853, forty members were present at Mrs. Joseph Chase's. The ladies finished the piece of cloth cut at the last meeting and bound a half set of shoes.

Oct. 5, they met at Mrs. John Heath's, and with thirty-five present made fifteen pairs of overalls, they being cut and fitted by the superintendent previous to the meeting, and shoes were bound amounting to $2.12.

Nov. 8, at Mrs. John D. Ordway's, some of the time was devoted to reading from the Memoirs of Mrs. Greenleaf. Thirty-five ladies made sixteen pairs of overalls, and ladies who brought their own work paid 49 cents.

Dec. 13, forty-five met at Mrs. Kimball Brickett's and bound shoes.

January, 1854, forty-seven present made overalls and bound shoes; singing and prayers.

Jan. 31, fifty-six met at Mrs. Nelson Ordway's and bound shoes amounting to $2.20.

Feb. 14, seventy-five met at Mrs. N. C. Smith's, where they sold confections and had many contributions from the gentlemen, and remarks by Mr. Bartley, their pastor.

Feb. 28, eighty met at Mrs. Tristram Little's and bound shoes, etc.

March 8, forty met at Mrs. Drew's and bound shoes.

April, fifty met at Mrs. Bartley's.

May, forty met at Mrs. Silas Griffin's.

June 29, 1854, twenty met at Mrs. Benj. Pillsbury's. The secretary reported as follows of the year's work: The society has met thirteen times, besides the annual meeting. List of articles made by the society and presented to the "Seaman's Friend Society," Boston: Two and one-half pairs of sheets, $2.65; six pillow cases, $2.10; two pairs shirts, $2.26. Cotton cloth remaining, $2.33; yarn and knitting, 50c.; quilt, $2; money received for work, $47.16, and remaining as avails for the year $50.13, which was appropriated in the following manner: Thirty dollars was given to constitute Rev. Mr. Bartley a life member of the American Home Missionary Society: fifteen dollars to the Mission among the Chinese in California, receipts for which have been received, and also a bundle valued at $6.91 to the Seaman's Home in Boston.

Sept. 6, 1854, sixteen ladies met at the meeting house and listened to a reading by Mrs. Bartley upon being "ready for every good work," after which a new constitution was adopted and a new force of officers elected: Mrs. Esther Bartley, president; Mrs. Hannah J. Drew, vice-president; Miss Judith S. Eastman, secretary; Miss Emma E. Ordway, treasurer; and Mrs. Elizabeth P. Ordway, Mrs. Louisa M. Ordway, Mrs. Nabby K. Brickett, Mrs. Phebe L. Sawyer, Miss Abby R. Heath, were chosen directresses. They adopted as a preamble, "Believing that union is strength, and that voluntary associations for benevolent purposes have a direct tendency to promote and strengthen the kindred feelings we ought to cherish towards each other, the subscribers propose to form themselves into a society, the object of which shall be the extension of the knowledge and influence of the gospel and mutual improvement, and for this purpose we adopt the new constitution."

The new constitution was not materially different from the one formed in 1852, except they were to be governed by a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer, and five directresses. "That one-half hour of each meeting should be devoted to reading," and that "any gentleman who sustains a good moral character may become a member of this society by paying twenty-five cents annually." The only new members of the forty ladies who signed the constitution were: Marietta Buck, Mary J. Drew, Annette Colby, Julia A. Colby, Betsey P. Little, Mary A. Pike, Lydia A. Ring, Mary J. Titcomb, Sophia A. Greenleaf, Abby B. Spollett.

The work was carried on as in 1853, and Mrs. Susan Bartley was made a life member of the American Home Missionary Society by the payment of thirty dollars from their proceeds for the year 1854.

It was in these years that the society was very dear to its members. (See No. 423, "Sketches of Members.")

In 1856 there were twenty members, but their meetings were largely attended, as in March, 1856, at Mrs. N. C. Smith's, they had seventy present, collected $7.08, and presented Mr. Bartley with twelve dollars as a gift.

Jan. 11, 1860, the society was again reorganized, and their constitution very little changed. The following members signed it for the year:—

Mrs. Susan Batchelder,	Mrs. Thomas K. Little,
“ R. K. Brickett,	“ William C. Little,
“ Elizabeth Calef,	“ Caleb Moulton,
Miss Abby Currier,	Miss Nancy Marston,
“ Julia A. Colby,	“ Nancy Ordway,
Mrs. Jesse Davis,	Mrs. Nelson Ordway,

Mrs. Dea. Eastman,	Mrs. T. C. Pratt,
“ George W. Eastman,	“ Henry Putnam,
Miss Sophia A. Greenleaf,	“ Benjamin Sawyer,
Mrs. Sally Harriman,	“ William Sanborn,
“ Isaac Heath,	“ John W. Tabor,
Miss Ann M. Howard,	“ John Ordway,
“ Abby R. Heath,	“ John C. Drew,
“ Mary J. Heath,	“ Tristram Little,
Mrs. John Jackson,	“ Amos Ring,
“ Dea. Kent,	“ Sarah Chandler.
Miss Sarah Little,

HONORARY MEMBERS.

Rev. T. C. Pratt,	Mr. L. W. Frost,
Mr. Amos Buck,	“ John S. Titeomb,
“ D. H. Emerson,	“ Frank Kent,
“ Nelson Ordway,	“ George W. Eastman.
“ N. C. Smith,

They elected Mrs. John C. Drew, president; Mrs. T. C. Pratt, vice-president; Sophia A. Greenleaf, secretary and treasurer.

Voted, that thirty dollars in their hands be appropriated to constitute Rev. T. C. Pratt a “life member of the American and Foreign Christian Union.” There were nearly a hundred persons present.

In 1860 there were forty-four members—thirty-five ladies and nine gentlemen—and they had sixteen meetings, all largely attended.

From 1860 to 1868 the society meetings were well attended, and in the form of a social, with readings and other entertainments in the evenings at various homes. Sept. 8, 1862, it is recorded at a meeting at R. K. Brickett's, “a good number of young people were present, and cheerfulness and sociability prevailed.” And Aug. 20, 1862, “a number of the volunteers were present, and addresses made by Mr. Pratt, Messrs. Garland and Buck in a happy manner.” Much of the money raised was given to the "Soldiers' Aid Society." Few meetings were holden without at least seventy-five persons present.

In September, 1867, the annual meeting was held at the house of Mrs. Tappan Eastman, with few present, and the reorganization of the Society was effected by voting to take some of the funds collected at the social and purchase materials for work, and that Mrs. T. C. Pratt have charge of the Charitable Society only, and Mrs. J. Henry Clark look after the social gatherings connected with it. The members admitted at that time were :—

Mrs. Mary E. Irving,	Miss Mary E. Merrill,
“ W. H. Brickett,	“ Lucy A. Sawyer,
“ J. H. Clark,	Mrs. B. F. Herrick,
“ Isaac Smith,	“ Tristram Little,
“ Mary Brickett,	Miss M. Jennie Little,
“ J. T. Brickett,	“ Lizzie Locke,
“ L. W. Frost,	“ Edwina Eaton,
“ Luther Chase,	Henry Putnam,
“ Hannah Titecomb,	John C. Little,
“ Ann Howard,	John Jackson,
“ T. C. Pratt,	Linus H. Little,
“ E. M. Locke,	George O. Jenness,
“ Tappan Eastman,	Adin T. Little,
“ Sally Harriman,	Charles Peasley,
“ Abby Brickett,	Frank H. Sawyer,
“ Benjamin Sawyer,	B. Frank Herrick,
“ Lizzie Hunkins,	John H. Clark,
Miss Mary A. Merrill,	Dea. Jona. Kent.

Nov. 5, 1867, the ladies met for work in the afternoon at Mrs. Kimball Brickett's, and only eleven members present. Knitting was introduced and six pairs of hose commenced, and in the evening of that day the social was held at Mrs. Jesse Emerson's, and about "fifty present and a royal good time enjoyed."

Trouble ensued, and in 1868 only three members would unite with the society—Mrs. E. M. Locke, Mrs. Colby, and Mrs. Nelson Ordway.

We find no records of meetings holden until December, 1870, when a few ladies met at Mrs. John H. Clark's for the purpose of forming a "Ladies' Benevolent Society," which was organized with Mrs. E. W. Bullard as president, Mrs. Mary C. Brickett as vice-president, Mrs. Wm. H. Davis as secretary and treasurer, and a committee in each school district to find places to hold meetings—Mrs. Wm. C. Little, No. 1; Miss Mary J. Heath, No. 2; Miss H. A. Eastman, No. 3; Mrs. M. A. Eastman, No. 4.

The constitution drawn by the committee, Mrs. E. W. Bullard, Mrs. Mary C. Brickett, Mrs. Wm. H. Davis, and Miss Ann M. Howard, was as follows:—

"PREAMBLE.—We, the ladies of the Congregational Church and Society, believing that volunteer association for benevolent purposes has a direct tendency to promote and strengthen the kindred feelings we ought to cherish towards each other, and that we ought to be ready for every good work, we therefore propose to form ourselves into a society with the design to promote these objects. We therefore recommend and agree to be governed by the foregoing constitution.

ART. 1. This Society shall be called "The Hampstead Ladies' Benevolent Society."

ART. 2. The object of this Society shall be to cultivate acquaintance with ladies in different sections of the town, to promote unanimity of feeling on all subjects tending to elevate society generally, and also to procure funds for benevolent purposes.

ART. 3. Any one over fourteen years of age can become a member of this Society by paying twenty-five cents annually.

ART. 6. In order to increase the funds it is expected that all present at any meeting, whether members or not, shall pay five cents.

Articles 4, 5, 7, 8, 9 and 10, relating to business of the officers, etc.

The members belonging to the Benevolent Society were :

Rev. Mr. Bullard,	Mrs. George O. Jenness,
William H. Davis,	“ John Titcomb,
Horace R. Sawyer,	Miss Helen A. Eastman,
John H. Clark,	Mrs. William Sanborn,
R. K. Brickett,	“ M. Irving,
J. S. Titcomb,	“ Nathaniel Smith,
Dea. Sanborn,	“ Rufus C. Smith,
Joseph Chase,	Miss H. E. Hoyt,
John W. Tabor,	Mrs. M. C. Brickett,
James Knight,	“ George W. Eastman,
Nathaniel Smith,	“ H. C. Eastman,
Silas Tenney,	“ M. A. Currier,
J. D. Ordway,	“ Isaac Heath,
H. C. Eastman,	Miss Anna L. Heath,
J. L. Cunningham,	Mrs. E. M. Locke,
Nelson Ordway,	“ Tristram Little,
Tristram Little,	“ Sally Harriman,
Rufus Bailey,	“ Sally Hubbard,
Caleb J. Hoyt,	Miss A. M. Howard,
Mrs. E. W. Bullard,	“ Lucy A. Bullard,
“ R. K. Brickett,	Mrs. Nelson Ordway,
“ Benjamin Sawyer,	Miss Nancy Ordway,
“ Amos Buck,	Mrs. John Jackson,
Miss Mary J. Heath,	“ Abner Chandler,
“ Abby R. Heath,	“ Susan V. Eastman,
Mrs. C. J. Hoyt,	Mr. Jacob Irving,
“ J. H. Clark,	Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Griffin,
“ W. H. Davis,	Fannie Williams, infant,
Miss M. E. Clark,	George R. Bennette.
Dr. W. E. Bullard,	Mrs. J. Kimball,
Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pressey,	Mrs. C. J. Sherman.
Miss Agnes Millar,

The members held meetings at the various homes of the members, with afternoon work on quilts, shirts and knitting work, and a social gathering in the evening, interspersed with songs, recitations and games. In 1877 the secretary says: "Less interest has been manifested during the past year and less meetings held than any previous year." Only nine meetings of the Benevolent Society were held in 1878. In May it is recorded that "The Ladies' Sociable met at the Town Hall: prayer by Rev. Albert Watson; 'the Social Gem' was prepared by Misses Cynthia S. Mills and Susie C. Smith, and recitations by Rev. Albert Watson and Master Charlie Grover." They received $4 by admission at the door.

The Benevolent Society held few meetings until Jan. 14, 1880, when the members met with the "Sociable" at Mrs. Alfred Emerson's, Jan. 14, where there were eighty persons present, and the members of the Benevolent Society "excused themselves to elect some new officers."

Very little interest was manifested in the meetings, the "sociable" being the leading attraction for the young people of the parish. The members were:—

Rev. and Mrs. Albert Watson,	Edwin S. Pressey,
Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Emerson,	Mrs. Margaret Marshall,
Dea. and Mrs. C. W. Williams,	" E. M. Locke,
Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Pressey,	" Tappan Eastman,
Mr. and Mrs. John H. Clark,	" Laura Corson,
Dea. and Mrs. Wm. Sanborn,	" Belinda G. Wilson,
Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Pike,	" Mary E. Irving,
Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Brown,	" Wm Fellows,
Mr. and Mrs. Moses B. Little,	" Almira Perley,
Mrs. M. E. Corson,	" Lizzie Hunkins,
Mr. and Mrs. Tristram Little,	" Martha E. Lake,
Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Ordway,	" Lizzie Coaker,
Mr. and Mrs. Ezra W. Foss,	" Lizzie Little,
Mrs. R. K. Brickett,	" Abner Chandler,
Jesse B. Shirley,	Miss Abbie F. Chandler,

C. H. Wood,	Miss Abbie Pillsbury,
Daniel H. Emerson,	“ Nellie F. Perley,
Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Shannon,	“ Abbie Heath,
Capt. William Griffin,	“ Ann M. Howard,
Col. Albert L. Eastman,	“ Lucy S. Johnson,
Willie A. Love,	“ Abbie A. Johnson,
Arthur Bond,	“ Judith Eastman,
Rufus H. Bailey,	“ Clara A. Irving,
Fred Clark,	“ Annie E. George.

The first four months of 1880 were memorable for the enjoyable evenings spent by the members of the Sociable and their young friends. In January they met with Mrs. Alfred Emerson, with eighty present; February, with Mrs. Charles W. Pressey, thirty-six present; March 3, with Mrs. Charles Osgood, with eighty present; March 19, Mrs. Eben Hoyt's, with twenty-two present; March 31, at Mr. Giles Marble's, with forty-two; April 18, at Mrs. Dea. Sanborn's, fifty-three attending; and April 18, at Mrs. E. M. Coaker's, with fifty-seven present. At each meeting there were various games, charades, recitations, readings and singing by the young people. They then adjourned until autumn, when the parties were again resumed. The secretary, in her annual report for the year ending Oct. 29, 1881, records: "For various reasons it has not been thought best to meet as often as in some years past. We trust, however, that some good has been accomplished, which shall benefit not only those of us who have met together to enjoy a social hour, but some less favored than ourselves." The report of the year showed that they held ten meetings, a membership of fifty-five—thirty-seven ladies and eighteen gentlemen—and raised $31.81; that they had sent $10 to foreign missions, two barrels of clothing and two dollars sent to the Kansas refugees, and $19.91 spent for necessary articles for the church.

At that date, Oct. 29, 1881, they voted "to revise the constitution," by a committee consisting of Mrs. E. M.

Coaker, Miss Abbie A. Johnson, and Mrs. Mary E. Eastman, which was adopted at an adjourned meeting, Nov. 9, 1881, at Y. M. C. A. Hall, as follows:—

ART. 1. This society shall be an auxiliary to the Congregational Church at Hampstead, and its name shall be "The Ladies' Social Circle."

ART. 2. The object of this Society shall be to cultivate acquaintance with ladies in different sections of the town, to promote unanimity of feeling on all subjects tending to elevate society generally, and also to raise funds for the benefit of the church and society, and for other objects, as shall from time to time be decided on by a vote of the Society.

ART. 3. Any lady over fourteen years of age may become an active member, and any gentleman over fourteen years of age may become an honorary member by paying twenty-five cents annually.

ART. 4. In order to increase the funds it is expected that all present at any meeting, whether members or not, shall pay five cents.

ART. 5. The officers of the Society shall be a president, vice-president, and secretary, who shall also act as treasurer.

ART. 6. There shall be an annual meeting of the Society early in October, when a report shall be presented by the secretary, officers elected for the ensuing year, and any other business transacted as shall be deemed necessary to promote the objects of the Society.

ART. 7. The officers may at any time call a special meeting by giving due notice in the church.

ART. 8. Eight members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

ART. 9. This constitution shall be altered or amended by a two-thirds vote of the Society at any regular meeting.

ART. 10. Each meeting shall be closed with prayer.

The officers then chosen were: Mrs. John Page, president; Mrs. Alfred Emerson, vice-president; and Katie E.

Coaker, secretary and treasurer. The members joining the "Ladies' Social Circle" in 1881, Nov. 9, for the following year, were :—

Mrs. E. M. Coaker,	Miss Ann M. Howard,
“ Mary E. Eastman,	“ Nellie Perley,
“ C. W. Williams,	“ Ada Nichols,
“ John Page,	“ Alice M. Little,
“ J. Henry Clark,	“ Mary E. Spollett,
“ C. W. Pressey,	“ Agnes Millar,
“ Belinda Wilson,	Rev. and Mrs. Albert Watson,
“ Alfred Emerson,	Mrs. Joseph G. Brown,
“ O. E. Follansbee,	“ Lewis Little,
“ R. K. Brickett,	“ Lizzie Hunkins,
“ Mary A. Bragdon,	Mr. Wm. H. Davis,
“ E. M. Locke,	Dea. John Page,
“ Lizzie Little,	John S. Corson,
“ Nellie Ordway,	J. Henry Clark,
“ Bailey,	Capt. Moffatt,
“ Abner Chandler,	Col. A. L. Eastman,
“ Nelson Ordway,	Charles H. Emerson,
“ Mary E. Corson,	Charles W. Garland,
“ Laura A. Corson	Mariner Chase,
“ Amanda Cass,	John Lawton,
Miss Judith S. Eastman,	Isaac Randall,
“ Katie E. Coaker,	Forrest E. Merrill,
“ Lizzie Johnson,	Dr. Isaac Tewksbury,
“ Abbie A. Johnson,	George E. Lake,
“ Lucy Johnson,	George G. Williams,
“ Annie Graham,	F. W. Coaker.

The first meeting of the "Ladies' Social Circle" was held at Mrs. E. M. Coaker's, with eighty persons present, who were entertained with instrumental music by Susie Stimson and Etta Hunkins, singing by Abbie F. Chandler, Mrs. Coaker, John S. Corson and William H. Davis. Prayer by Rev. Albert Watson. $8.65 was collected, also a present from Miss Hannah Howard of $10.

From this meeting the members of the Social Circle showed an interest in the work from year to year, and during the colder season meetings were held every two weeks at the homes, which were largely attended and enjoyed.

In June, 1886, several deeply interested ladies who were tireless workers, and seeing urgent need of funds to finish and furnish the parlor, kitchen, etc., incident to the new vestry, in a manner creditable to the church organization, pledged themselves to work especially for that cause, but not realizing the extent or how much they might accomplish, no special records were kept. It is, therefore, from the reminiscences of Mrs. G. R. Bennette and other of the ladies interested that we are indebted for items concerning their work.

The first meeting was held in the Town Hall, where a dozen or more ladies met and talked over plans of how they could raise the most money for their purpose, and adjourned to meet with Mrs. E. M. Locke in one week, when many more ladies met with them, and they named themselves the "Vestry Aid Society," which included most of the ladies of the church and society who were conveniently situated to be helpers. They chose Mrs. Mary E. Eastman, Mrs. Mary J. Fellows, Mrs. E. M. Coaker and Mrs. George R. Bennette, directresses to provide work. They also agreed that any person attending should pay five cents and improve every moment doing fancy work for a coming "sale about Christmas." As the year rolled around they saw so many things needed to beautify the new vestry that with increased interest they kept on busily working to plan how they could increase the funds so much desired. A few more months and the members of the V. A. S. held receipted bills for $365.65, expended as follows: Paid to the building committee, $140; for dishes, $50.66; for shades, lamps and oyster bowls, $37.80; for parlor carpet, $15.47; for glassware, $7.50; for a mirror, $6.50; table for the parlor, $4; for mantle, $1.43; incidental expenses to raise the full amount to $400 expended.

The children, under the direction of Mrs. Charles H. Sweet, gave a series of entertainments, realizing the sum of $41.40, and purchased the pulpit and chair, and chandeliers, and six lamps for the chapel, as a worker with the V. A. S., whose members have the satisfaction of seeing the parlor and kitchen of the vestry as pleasant and comfortable as the Society in Hampstead can wish.

Mrs. Mary E. Eastman and Mrs. Albert H. Little solicited funds to assist in building and furnishing the vestry, and collected from one hundred and thirty-six persons the sum of $977.75 towards the object in 1886.

Jan. 3, 1888, the members of the Ladies' Social Circle voted "to unite with the Y. P. S. C. E. in holding sociables." The first was held Jan. 11, 1888, in the vestry, with thirty-nine persons present, who were entertained by readings by Miss Mabel Watson and Jennie Coaker, recitations by Frances Buzzell: singing by a quartette, Messrs. Corson and Spinney, Misses Minnie C. Townsend and Annie L. Kimball of Chester: prayer by Rev. Albert Watson. They collected $2.00, and gave the Y. P. S. C. E. $1.

At the close of the year they voted "to extend a vote of thanks to the Y. P. S. C. E. for their kind and able assistance since the societies united," and credited them with $22.49.

Members in 1890 were :—

Mrs. Albert Watson,	Mrs. Mary J. Sanborn,
Miss Mabel Watson,	“ Mary A. Pike,
Mrs. C. W. Pressey,	“ Sarah M. Johnson,
“ Albert L. Eastman,	“ John W. Tabor,
“ Orren E. Follansbee,	“ M. Etta Fitts,
“ R. K. Brickett,	Miss Clara A. Irving,
“ Mary J. Fellows,	“ Mary E. Spollett,

Mrs. John H. Clark,	Miss Lucy S. Johnson,
“ Charles Bassett,	“ Anna M. Bartlett,
“ Carrie A. Moulton,	“ Abbie A. Johnson,
“ Lillian Sanborn,	“ Bessie Grover,
“ Mary E. Corson,	“ Cora M. Bassett,
“ Abbie M. Tabor,	“ Minnie C. Townsend,
“ Isaac Randall,	“ M. Etta Hunkins,
“ Frank W. Emerson,	Rev. Albert Watson,
“ Wm. A. Emerson,	Edwin H. Whitehill,
“ Nelson Ordway,	John C. Sanborn,
“ Belinda G. Wilson,	Orrin E. Follansbee,
“ Mary E. Griffin,	Charles W. Pressey,
“ Mary A. Bragdon,	I. Wm. George,
“ Emma A. Little,	W. Alonzo Griffin.

The report of the secretary for the year ending Oct. 31, 1890, says: “Considerable interest has been manifested during the year. We have had very pleasant gatherings, and feel very grateful to our young people for their kind assistance in making them enjoyable. Less meetings than usual have been held, on account of the “Auxiliary” and our present needs. We were all interested in the repairs of our church, and cheerfully gave way for the time, hoping it might in no way lessen our zeal, but by working together we might strengthen our bond of sympathy. We are all laboring for one common cause, and thus best promote the objects of the L. S. C.”

The Ladies' Auxiliary was organized April 10, 1890, with the following officers: President, Mrs. William Fellows; vice-president, Mrs. George R. Bennette; secretary and treasurer, Miss Mary E. Spollett.

This Society continued until Jan. 20, 1891, when it voted to unite with the “Ladies' Social Circle,” and passed over to that organization all the material for aprons, etc., on hand, with the twenty dollars in money which they had unexpended.

During the nine months of its existence six hundred and seventy-three dollars were raised and expended as follows :

For new cushions for the pews,	$310 68
For decorating the walls of the church, etc.,	249 25
For cleaning and varnishing pews,	60 00
For ventilators,	20 65
For incidentals,	12 42
To the Ladies' Social Circle,	20 00
	$673 00

The ladies of the "Auxiliary" then desired a new pulpit set, but felt that they must work on until they earned the money to pay for it, when Col. Albert L. Eastman, who was then confined to his bed by his last illness, urged them to select a set and put it in place. When it was done, the following note was received in the last handwriting of Mr. Eastman :—

"To the Ladies of the Auxiliary Society, Miss Mary E. Spollett, Secretary and Treasurer :—

The pulpit furniture selected by you for the Congregational Church has been paid for by the undersigned, as per bill enclosed, amounting to $140.21. They now beg leave to present the same, through you, to the Congregational Church and Society of Hampstead, N. H.

Respectfully,

ALBERT L. EASTMAN AND WIFE."

The members of the Auxiliary were :—

Mrs. Orren E. Follansbee,	Mrs. Isaac Roundy,
" Benj. F. Rowe,	" Horace R. Sawyer,
" Nelson Ordway,	" John E. Mills,
" W. Alonzo Griffin,	" Mary A. Pike,

“ John S. Corson,	Rev. Albert Watson,
“ John W. Tabor,	Isaac W. George,
“ Charles Tabor,	Frederick Spollett.

Nov. 4, 1891, the circle met with Mrs. John S. Corson at their annual meeting, and it was voted “to give $40 annually towards parish expenses until otherwise decided.”

That the ladies worked assiduously from week to week, from 1890 to 1895, is shown by the following resolutions:—

“Whereas, the Ladies’ Social Circle, with untiring zeal and industry, and a grand devotion to the interests of the Christian Church and Society with which they are connected, have secured and generously given results of much labor and effort towards the beautifying and adornment of the church edifice; and

Whereas, Mrs. Fellows, Mrs. Eastman, Mrs. Ordway, Mrs. Chandler, and others, with a large spirit of unselfishness, and of lively interest in the well being of the church, have given with unsparing hand to the same beneficent end.

Resolved, That we, the Society of the Hampstead Congregational Church, do hereby express our most hearty appreciation of the lavish expenditures and gifts, and extend to them one and all our hearty thanks for the same.

Respectfully submitted,

During the year ending Dec. 31, 1901, the ladies had met forty afternoons for work, one evening sociable, eight entertainments, one Easter sale, one Christmas sale, and the total cash receipts were $903.61 from all sources.

Early in January, 1901, the ladies residing in District No. 1, being deeply interested in raising funds for the contemplated repairs on the church, but living too far from the centre to often meet with the L. S. C., organized an auxiliary, with Mrs. Albert H. Little, vice-president, in charge. Meetings were held weekly at the several homes in the neighborhood, and a similar line of work carried on as in the main Circle, namely, making quilts, aprons, fancy work, etc. In the summer, when the church repairs called for money, the Auxiliary paid the treasurer of the Circle $78.64, as the result of their work. A particularly interesting feature was the making of an album quilt containing five hundred or more names, which netted them $50 at ten cents each. The quilt was presented to Mrs. Rufus P. Gardner. In soliciting names for the quilt the largest number secured by any person was one hundred and twenty by Mrs. Benj. F. Rowe.

The members of the Auxiliary in District No. 1 were:—

Mrs. Albert H. Little,	Mrs. Sabrina D. Noyes,
“ Helen Frost,	“ Henry Noyes,
“ Mary E. Putnam,	“ Herbert W. Mills,
“ Mary A. Pike,	“ John Mills,
“ John W. Garland,	“ Benjamin F. Rowe,
“ Charles W. Garland,	Miss Lulu J. Corson,
“ Eugene L. Spinney,	“ Elisabeth H. M. Smith,
“ Charles H. Whittier,	“ Mildred R. Garland,
“ Amasa W. Hmt,	“ Carrie E. Sherman.
“ Arthur H. Little,

With unfaltering zeal, the work by the members of the Social Circle has been harmoniously and pleasantly carried on to the completion of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Congregational Church, and they commence on another period of existence under the most auspicious circumstances. The members of the Circle for the years 1901-'02 are:—

Mrs. Mary E. Eastman,	Mrs. L. M. Wells,
“ Aaron Smith,	“ Isaac Randall,
“ Amos Fitts,	“ Arthur M. Emerson,

Mrs. Mary A. Tabor,	Mrs. Wm. H. Woods,
“ Albert H. Little,	“ Forrest E. Merrill,
“ William Fellows (dec'd),	“ Alden Pillsbury,
“ H. W. Tabor,	“ Frank Pillsbury, besides numerous works of charity during the past fifty years.

Of the original members joining the Society in 1852 only Martha J. Adolphus (see No. 637, Church Mem.), Miss Judith S. Eastman (No. 361), Emily S. Davis (No. 235), and Mrs. Clara A. Clark (No. 525), are now living, the latter being the only lady that has retained her membership unbroken during the fifty years.

MUSIC.

The Puritans brought with them for their service of song "The Book of Psalms, English, both in prose and metre," by Henry Ainsworth. The third book published in America was "The Whole Book of Psalms, faithfully translated into English metre." This book had no tunes; the people sang "by rote and varied the melody." Cotton Mather said, "A little more art was found to be necessary," and a revision was made of the Psalms, which edition was called "The New England Psalm Book."

In those days there was no instruction in music. The fathers of the churches remembered the tunes as they had learned them in childhood, and taught their children the same tunes. They all sang the Psalms with variations, and no two churches could sing together the same tune. It is written that "in 1714 the service of song had become an abomination," and that Rev. Thomas Symmes of the church at Bradford, Mass., Rev. John Tufts of the church in Newbury (now West Newbury), and others, introduced singing by note and parts. This method in singing was not looked upon with favor in the churches of New England. "Women fainted, men left the house," and even ministers opposed it "as a work of Satan."

Rev. Mr. Tufts says: "The care of the old time choristers was to set the tune at such a pitch that the people could sing it without squeaking above or grumbling below, and beat the time so that they could reasonably sing together."

"Elder Ruling Tenney stood before the pulpit in the rude meeting house on the brow of the hill in the old Pentucket burial ground and set the tunes, while only four or five could sing them, and they with such torturing and twisting that no one could tell the tune."

In the days of the organization of the church in Hampstead there were few tunes in use—Standish, London, and Eighty-fifth Psalm, St. Mary's, and the like. The words of the hymns were lined out in couplets. The deacons read the first line and pitched the tune, using a sort of whistle, which was "homemade" and could be lengthened or shortened to give lower or sharper sounds, the whole congregation joining in the singing of the line. Another line was read, and again the melody was taken up by the people, and so on to the end of the psalm. This was called "deaconing the hymn."

Nov. 12, 1753, at the house of Deacon Benjamin Kimball, it was voted "to sing Dr. Watts' Psalms at sacramental seasons."

March 31, 1767, it was voted in town meeting "to give eight feet in length and four and one-half feet in width before the deacons' seat for the use of those who lead in singing."

April 14, 1767, voted, "to give one-half of the men's gallery on the west side of the meeting house, in the room of the pew before the deacons' seat, the upper end of said seat, for the use of the singers."

Dec. 6, 1774, voted, "to exchange the two seats that were given the use of the singers and give them an equal privilege in the front gallery."

March 29, 1775, voted, "that one-third of the front gallery be allowed for a seat for those persons that lead in singing, the division to be made as followeth, viz.: Beginning over the pillar standing in the pue belonging to the family of Currier and extending as far as the woman's gallery as to complete one-third of the length of one whole front, and that they may have liberty to build a pue if they see fit to do so at their own charge, and that they may raise the floor in the fore seat on a level with the floor of the second seat, and voted that Jeremiah Ames, John Calfe, Moses Little, Caleb Emerson, Abner Little, Eliphalet Poor, and Jona. Eastman be a committee to seat said pue of singers."

The introduction of musical instruments to aid in the service was in September, 1797, when Rev. John Kelly held a meeting at his own house, and voted "to give leave to the singers to use a bass viol in the meeting house and a tenor one." In some towns the advent of such musical viols was a source of displeasure among the clergy, as well as congregations. One minister is said to have shouted, "Sing the 112th Psalm and fiddle it to your hearts' content."

In Chester, N. H., "Samuel Graham carried his bass viol into the meeting house on Thanksgiving day of 1806, and no sooner did he begin to sound it than Deacon William Wilson and Moody Chase left the house in hot haste."

The first viol used in the Hampstead meeting house was made by the Prescotts of Chester, and as far as research shows the Ayer family brought forth the first musical strains. John Little played the large bass viol for about twenty years in the gallery of the old meeting house. In 1825 "James Brickett bought of Capt. Jesse Ayer one large bass viol for use in the meeting house for $13.00." Occasionally some one, particularly Paul Heald of Atkinson, would assist in the music with some brass instrument.

The Hampstead Sacred Musical Society was organized Dec. 7, 1840, in "Amos Buck's Hall," which stood where Daniel Emerson's house now stands. Dr. J. C. Eastman was chosen chairman : Henry Putnam, secretary : and Benj. B. Garland, president : Jona. Kent, vice-president : Jacob Irving, treasurer ; A. M. Merrill, first chorister : R. K. Brickett, second chorister. There were twenty-eight men and ten female members, with twenty-two patrons.

The constitution adopted was in part as follows :—

“ Deeming it important, in order to secure good music in any surety, that those who are willing to assist should organize and frequently meet for practice, and that they should avail themselves of all of that information and correction which every choir must have in order to sing with accuracy and taste, and that they should be provided with suitable books and instruments, the subscribers, for the purpose of securing good music in the Congregational meeting house in Hampstead, hereby agree to form themselves into a society to be known as the Sacred Music Society, and most honorably pledge ourselves to each other to make every proper exertion to promote the object of the Society.”

ART. I. The members of this Society shall consist of singers. Other persons who may be willing to assist by advice, votes, and otherwise, shall be styled ‘Patrons.’”

Voted, April 4, 1848, that "the musical instruments belonging to the Society for the use of the choir be under the care of the chorister, and the Society to keep the instruments in repair and find lights for the choir when they meet to sing."

In 1851 an effort was made to provide a more suitable aid to their music in the form of an organ, which had become common in most of the New England churches. A subscription paper was circulated among the friends of better music in the church, and was successful, as follows:—

"We, the subscribers, agree to pay on demand the sums annexed to our respective names for the purchase of an organ, to be owned and contracted for by the Congregational Church and Society in Hampstead, to be placed in their house of worship, and to be used for the benefit of said church and society and the congregation worshipping with them."

Jan. 9, 1853, the Orthodox Congregational Society of Hampstead, N. H., bought of Wm. B. D. Simmons & Co., of Boston, one second hand parlor organ for $200; also paid R. K. Brickett for making a false roof for better security of the organ, $2; Wm. Sanborn, for iron work, $1; and Isaac Smith, for alpacca and lock, $1.

Simmons & Co. gave the Society an obligation, as follows:

" We hereby obligate to receive as part payment (for an organ of any size which we may build) the organ sold to Mr. Bartley of Hampstead, N. H., and allow for it in part payment for a new one one hundred and fifty dollars, any time within five years, provided it receive no other injury than comes of natural use.

The price of a new organ to be a fair price, such as we now receive say like the organ in the Methodist Church in Cambridgeport, Mass., for six hundred dollars, or according to our price book of 1853."

Miss Mary C. Smith was the first organist, and continued for several years. With the new organ a new impetus was given to singing in the church.

October, 1854, it was voted " that the singers meet once a week in the Town Hall, and that ' Ancient Harmony ' be used at the sings."

In 1858, Caleb Moulton was chosen " to get up a singing school," and for several years singing schools were held each winter and largely attended.

Oct. 3, 1859, it was voted " that George W. Eastman be requested to ascertain the expense of repairing and fitting up the two bass viols."

In 1862 the organ needed tuning and was much out of repair, which led to desiring a large organ for the gallery. A pipe organ was procured, which after a time was pronounced unsatisfactory, and in 1867 Col. Albert L. Eastman presented the church and society with the organ represented in the cut.

This organ was dedicated with programme as follows:—

" Grand Concert and Opening of the New Organ in the Congregational Church, on Tuesday Evening, December 10, 1867.

ORGAN—1867 TO 1901.

March 15, 1870, voted, "that the committee have power to sell the old parlor organ."

In 1867, Mrs. S. Lizzie Hunkins was organist for two years: Mrs. Mary Ida (Haseltine) Noyes from 1869 to 1874; Mrs. Orrie B. (Little) Pressey from 1874 for several years.

March 6, 1880, at a church meeting, "it was recommended that circumstances deem it expedient that the church do henceforth have entire control of the sacred music, according to congregational usage, and not depend upon outside organization. In view of the foregoing the following resolutions were accepted and adopted:—

Resolved 1st. "That the church shall begin at once to assume entire control of her sacred music."

2d. "That the members of the Hampstead Sacred Music Society be respectfully informed of the above action on the part of the church, and that in consequence thereof their services as an organization are no longer required in the conducting of our service of song."

3d. "That we do hereby extend a vote of thanks [to the members of the Hampstead Sacred Music Society for their valuable services."

4th. "That a committee of three be chosen for the year ensuing to have full power to organize a choir to lead us in our service of song."

John S. Corson, Dea. Wm. Sanborn, and Dea. Caleb Williams were chosen.

April, 1893, voted, "that John S. Corson, Eugene L. Spinney, Wm. H. Davis and Forrest E. Merrill be a committee to consider and formulate plans for the training of young voices, in the view of enlarging the choir and to introduce new singing books."

A piano was placed in the church in 1893, through the personal effort of Rev. Mr. Gardner, who obtained subscriptions for the same, beginning with a substantial gift from Mrs. Nelson Ordway. The piano has proved a great help to the church and Sunday school, and is greatly prized in their evening services.

Dec. 20, 1895, Forrest E. Merrill motioned that the old organ used before the new piano was secured be presented to Dea. Wm. H. Davis as a token of esteem for his long service as a faithful chorister, which was done, and cordially accepted.

In the spring of 1901 it was self evident to nearly all of the church people that something should be done with the old organ which for thirty-four years had been in constant use on the Sabbath. It was found upon careful investigation that the organ could only be repaired at a great expense. The pastor, Rev. Rufus P. Gardner, moved to see if they could not have a new organ, and with the repairs which were to be made in the interior of the church, have it placed in front of the church. He brought the matter before his church committee, who approved cordially his plan. With no subscription paper, but with a quiet invitation to friends and descendants of the fathers and mothers of the church during its one hundred and fifty years of existence, he succeeded in securing the necessary funds to procure the beautiful organ as shown in the cut.

The new organ was dedicated Sunday evening, Sept. 1, 1901, when the following programme was pleasantly enjoyed 12. Benediction.

Rev. Mr. Gardner spoke in part as follows: "It has been one of the real pleasures of my life to collect the free will offerings—no one but the auditor to know how much each one has given—enabling me, as chairman of the musical committee, to present this beautiful organ in behalf of the donors, as a piece of property to the church and society. A gift of one hundred and fifty of the friends of the Congregational Church in Hampstead, for the praise of God, and in memory of the fathers and mothers who have worshipped here. And these keys to the faithful organist of the church, Mrs. Minnie E. Emerson, who for nearly fourteen years has played the old organ. We extend to her our grateful appreciation of her willingness to aid in our service of song.

The organ loft and platform have been quite expensive, built by Mr. Horace Bailey in a workmanlike manner of quartered oak finish, and as the organ firm directed, and must give general satisfaction. The organ loft, furnishings, carpet, chairs (excepting the chorister's chair), are gifts of the Sunday School and Home Department.

The chorister's chair is a gift from Mrs. L. Ada Libbey, in the name of her father, Mr. George W. Eastman, who for thirty-six years was a member of the choir and fourteen years as chorister.

The glass upon the organ is the gift of Mrs. Cleveland, wife of ex-President Grover Cleveland.

The lamp is the gift of some of my personal friends, not Hampstead people. The curtain is a gift of the King's Daughters.

May the new organ be very useful."

Nearly one hundred persons have sung in the choir five years or more. The choristers since 1840 have been Amos Merrill, R. Kimball Brickett, a member of the choir for more than fifty years; Jacob Irving, many years; Albert W. Ayer, twenty-two years in the choir; George W. Eastman, thirty-six years in the choir; William McNeil, in the choir nine years; John C. Little, eleven years; Eugene

ORGAN AND PULPIT.

L. Spinney, several years: John S. Corson, since 1873: William H. Davis, since 1848.

The choir for 1902: Mrs. Minnie E. Emerson, organist fifteen years: Prof. Forrest E. Merrill, thirteen years. Tenor, William H. Davis, member fifty-two years; C. Park Pressey, eight years, bass; H. Clinton Davis, three years, bass: Mrs. Albert H. Little, nineteen years, soprano: Mrs. Henry W. Tabor, thirteen years, alto: and Miss Mary G. Davis, five years, alto. PROCEEDINGS
150TH ANNIVERSARY
OF THE
C H U R C H .

HAMPSTEAD, NEW HAMPSHIRE.

150th ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION.

The celebration of the 150th anniversary of Hampstead as a corporate town July 4, 1899 was an event ever to be remembered by those who were present on that occasion. It broadened our lives, and made us realize that the town in a century and a half of growth, has reached out to the farthermost parts of the earth, and we trust has encouraged us, to feel that life means something even here in an ordinary New England town.

The incorporation of Hampstead in 1749 was followed by the organization of the church three years later in 1752. For ninety years town and church affairs were closely connected.

The church committee in the summer of 1901, with the Rev. Rufus P. Gardner as the leading spirit, acted upon the thought, that the celebration of the anniversary of the town would be recognized only in part, unless the church fittingly remembered its one hundred and fifty years of work, by observing with appropriate exercises the birthday of the church the coming year.

The removal from town of Rev. Mr. Gardner was a serious drawback to the plans, but May 14, 1902 the following committees were chosen to complete the arrangements for a reunion of the friends of the church.

Executive Committee.—Rev. Walter H. Woodsum, Dea. Charles W. Pressey, Dea. William H. Davis, Dea. Forrest E. Merrill, John C. Sanborn, Miss Mary E. Spollett, and Mrs. John S. Corson.

Committee on Invitations.—Dea. Charles W. Pressey, Mrs. Mary E. Eastman, and William A. Emerson.

Committee on Music.—Dea. William H. Davis, Dea. Forrest E. Merrill, Mrs. Albert H. Little, and Mrs. Frank W. Emerson.

Committee on Reception.—Mr. and Mrs. Forrest E. Merrill, Mrs. Isaac Randall, and Mr. Charles Park Pressey.

Committee of Entertainment and Transportation.—John C. Sanborn, John S. Corson, Albion D. Emerson, Ammasa W. Hunt, Mrs. Clara Irving Davis, Mrs. William A. Emerson, and Mrs. James W. Sanborn.

Committee on Decorations.—Miss Mary E. Spollett, Miss Minnie M. Fitts, and Mrs. Charles O. Cass.

Committee on Banquet.—Mrs. John S. Corson, Mrs. Henry W. Tabor, and Mrs. William H. Davis.

Wednesday, July 2, 1902, the day chosen for the celebration was a cloudless, cool July day. Invitations had been sent to past and present members, town people and their friends, also to the neighboring parishes, and invited guests to meet at the church in the afternoon and evening.

The auditorium of the church was entered through an arch of evergreen, bearing the inscription in large white letters nestled among the twigs of the beautiful hemlock, "Welcome Home." On the other side of the arch where it met the eye on leaving the church were the words "Come in '52" formed of field daisies. In front of the new organ and about the pulpit were a mass of ferns and meadow rue, above which, filling the large room with their delightful fragrance were 150 roses of rare varieties, 150 carnations and other beautiful blossoms from the conservatories of Mrs. Joseph H. White of Boston who with her sisters, Mrs. Coaker, Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. Hitchcock, sent the gift as a birthday remembrance to their former church home. On the piano, surrounded with roses and maiden hair ferns, was placed a picture of the church in Hampstead, England, loaned by Mr. J. T. Rhodes of Haverhill, Mass., a native of Old Hampstead. In front of the new organ hung the word "150th Anniversary," in gilt and snowy white, trimmed with rock ferns and scarlet ramblers.

At one o'clock the spacious room was filled to overflowing. The exercises opened by an organ prelude, by Mrs. Frank W. Emerson, followed by anthem, "O give thanks" by chorus director, Wm. H. Davis; sopranos, Mrs. Albert H. Little, Mrs. Forrest E. Merrill, Misses Annie L. Kimball, and Ethel H. Spinney; altos, Mrs. Henry W. Tabor, Mrs.

Frank E. Darling, Misses Mary G. Davis, and Edith Foss; tenors, William H. Davis, Forrest E. Merrill, John S. Corson, and Lowell M. Clark; basses, Eugene L. Spinney, H. Clinton Davis, C. Park Pressey, and Albion D. Emerson; reading of scripture and invocation by Rev. A. B. Howard, pastor of the First Free Baptist Church, Danville, N. H.; response duet, "Through the gates of gold," Mrs. Albert H. Little and Miss Mary G. Davis.

Rev. Walter H. Woodsum then greeted the visitors with the following words of welcome.

"I think it was Tennyson who said, 'Words partly reveal and partly conceal the soul that is within.' I fully appreciate the inadequacy of words to express the sublime sentiments that surge in our hearts as we extend to you this welcome to the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of organized work for God in Hampstead, for what expressions of words can do justice to the grandeur of a century and a half of gospel labor of love and self sacrifice?

And yet what an honor to extend a welcome in so glorious a cause, for surely the work of the Gospel of Jesus Christ stands pre-eminently the grandest that ever engaged the feeble efforts of men.

And what a pleasure, also, it is to welcome you here to-day back to the old familiar haunts, to the recollections of childhood days, to the sacred precincts of God's house, hallowed by memories of devotion and holy worship, where was learned reverence for God, love for His Son, and true service for one another.

Truly it gives us genuine pleasure to welcome you to-day here in this house, and to our homes, our friendships, and our hospitality, such as we are enabled to give.

We welcome you, pastors of the past, we glory in the record of noble unselfish service to God and man, which you have made, and I pray God that as we reap the benefits of the heritage of good works, so when we shall have closed our labors as pastor of this people, the standard of service shall not have been lowered.

We welcome you, the posterity of those early pastors, who laid the foundations, and stood like the very bulwarks of God against the assaults of the enemy, truly an ancestry to be proud of.

We welcome you, the preceptors of the high school, which in the wise provision of its founder is in close connection with the church, and the cause of righteousness, to instruct in knowledge, in righteousness and in christian principle is the especial province of the church of Christ.

We welcome you, the members of former years. What a foretaste is this of the great family reunion in the kingdom of God, when from north and south, and from east and west, the children of God in all the ages shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac in that blessed land and talk of all the wonderful goodness of God.

We welcome you, the representatives of our parent church. Surely no greater work can be done by the church of God than the giving of birth, as it were, to children churches who shall carry the glorious gospel into the regions beyond.

And we welcome you, friends and neighbors, one and all. "Come, let us make a joyful noise unto the Lord:" "Come, behold what great things the Lord hath wrought," and let us each one contribute in honoring the past, in giving inspiration to the present and to enlarging the hope for the future.

I extend the welcome to you in behalf of the Executive Committee who have been untiring in their efforts to do justice to this occasion.

I also welcome you in behalf of the church organization standing in its entirety of one hundred and fifty years, and of over seven hundred and seventy members, "The church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth."

And finally I welcome you in behalf of the community, which has always done its part willingly and gladly, and has ever shown its respect and esteem for the church to which it should belong, and its regard and reverence for the true religion of Jesus Christ, which it should more emphatically and definitely espouse."

Number six of the programme "Reminiscences of former pastors," followed.

Rev. Henry True was represented by Henry True of Marion, Ohio, a great-grandson and namesake of the first pastor, and his son, Harry Ayer True, who were pleased to be present, and spoke briefly in response. A grand-daughter, Mrs. Mary True Vose and her daughter, Helen A., also revered the memory of their ancestor.

Rev. George O. Jenness of Charlton, Mass., gave the following tribute to the memory of Rev. John Kelly, grand father of Mrs. Jenness.

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

I have been invited to give you a five or ten minutes reminiscent address as a representative of the Rev. John Kelly, the second minister of this town.

I suppose your committee who extended this invitation knew very well that I had no acquaintance personally with good old Father Kelly, but that they also knew that for the last thirty-two years, I have been on familiar terms with his grand-daughter: and so they necessarily expect that what I shall say about him will be but an echo from her. So much has been printed and published in your excellent history of Hampstead concerning Father Kelly, there is very little of a biographical character left which would interest you.

There are, however, two or three very interesting facts about him to which I may, perhaps, call your attention appropriately.

Mr. Kelly was very specially interested in little children, even down to his last years. He was never known to pass one by, even in the streets, without some signal indications of his special love for them.

He delighted to take them on his knees and tell them bible stories. All the children loved and respected him, and when on his pastoral rounds wherever he visited, the children of that home were among the most cordial to gather about and welcome him.

If, as has often been stated, the average minister of his times was generally inclined, like the early disciples who rebuked the Master for paying little children marked attention, and giving them a peculiarly warm place in his heart, it is a most beautiful tribute to the memory of your second minister to be able to refer to him on such an occasion as this, as strikingly endowed with the Master's spirit who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not."

Father Kelly was also, I think, ahead of his brother ministers of his time, and indeed, I may say, ahead of the average christian man of the period, on the temperance question. On March 4th, 1841, when I was four years old, and he was seventy, he delivered a most remarkably strong sermon before the Hampstead Temperance Society, and also, three years later, repeated the sermon, one evening in the Plaistow Town House, from the text, "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging."

Among other things in this sermon, he spoke of the danger of being deceived and snared by using liquor, and also of the criminality of having anything to do in promoting its use in the common concerns of life.

On the first point mentioned, Father Kelly goes on to say, "There is one circumstance which has a great tendency to produce this deception, and that is when the intemperate man first takes down the deadly poison: he immediately feels better at his stomach, because the ingredient produces an excitement which he imagines to be renewed strength, whereas it is nothing more than a movement towards a fall."

When I read this from the pen of your second minister, I couldn't help thinking of that "tired feeling," and the promise of renewed strength in our day, by the Patent Medicine vender, who advertises a remedy and compounds it largely of intoxicating liquors.

And on the second point of the criminality of anything to do in promoting the use of intoxicants in the common concerns of life, he asks, "Is it not a national crime that a large proportion, one third of the best land in France, is taken up in the culture of the vine instead of that of bread corn? And is it not a national sin that in this country men are suffered to turn bread corn into poison, and a greater sin to give a license to covetous and wicked ones to sell this same poison to whom it will turn the sweetest and best food into poison, and to the ruin of soul and body, or to urge it upon others to the utter ruin of millions of individuals and families is a great sin, an aggravated sin."

Then your second minister was, I am persuaded, far in advance of many of his contemporaries, in his estimate of the importance of music in religious worship. I hold in my hand a sermon of his preached one hundred and two years ago, to the singing school in Hampstead. In this discourse, he argues that music is a divine institution. He takes strong grounds in support of instrumental music as helpful in worship. "Singing to the Lord before men," he says, "should be hearty and also reverent." Let me quote to you one or two of his sentences which might well be considered as most excellent advice to singers, even in these times. "It is granted by all," he says, "that regard is to be had to time, concord, distinct pronounciation, and the variety of the subject, but what gives the grace to the music is the unaffected piety of the heart, glowing in the countenance and flowing on the tongue." The apostle says, "I will sing, saith the spirit, I will sing with the understanding also." "And so ought all thus to sing with grace in their hearts, by the assistance of the spirit of God, and with their own mind in spirit engaged in the work; and according to rule, understanding themselves what they sing and how they sing, and as far as they are able singing to the understanding of others, by pronouncing distinctly and in plain language, what they sing." In his closing he says to this singing school, "You will permit me to express my satisfaction with the conduct of many youths in this place, that instead of being engaged in those frivolous occupations which neither improve the head nor the heart, you have turned your attention to one of the most improving and useful sciences, which by divine grace, will enable you to praise God, to aid His people in their devotions, and to enjoy much satisfaction yourselves."

As I look back thirty years to the time when I left Hampstead, my memory recurs to the old singing seats where I used to sit with the Hampstead choir, many of whom have gone to sing the praises of God in the upper and more glorious sanctuary, that I cannot but feel that much of the success and interest which has been a distinguishing feature in the musical part of the Hampstead Congregational Church worship is largely due to the encouragement the singers of the olden days received from the long and faithful ministry of Father Kelly.

Rev. William Tenney Bartlett, Ph. D., pastor of the Congregational Church in Salem, N. H., and grandson of the third minister, Rev. John M. C. Bartley, 1836-1857, referred briefly to his grandfather's life, mentioned dates, spoke of his relation to children, how he would question them on the street, "Do you want to be happy?" and finally would tell them, "Then you must be good"; spoke of his mild, but firm home government, in which the words "I guess I wouldn't" were well understood, and served to frustrate childish plans of which he disapproved. He referred to his grandfather's charity, as when he interested parents in the further education of their sons, or even paid a part of their tuition himself, or when he secured the free services of a Newburyport physician to remove cataracts from the eyes of an indigent parishioner, himself driving to Newburyport to bring the doctor, and driving back to return him to his home; and of his last words, nearly the last, as, towards morning, after a night of sickness, in which he had paid little attention to surroundings, he asked the watcher who had spent the night at his bedside, "And how is your little family?" adding almost immediately, "Of which the whole family in heaven and earth is named—one family," thus showing how closely his every day thoughts were with his holy ones.

In closing he suggested that it would be well for every one if the secular were so closely connected in his own life with the divine.

The fourth pastor, Rev. Theodore C. Pratt, was present, and spoke for himself, as follows:—

"When the early spring sap runs from the rock maples it is sweetish. Boiled down it becomes delicious syrup or maple sugar. But this requires time and skill on the part of the sugar-maker. The same holds true of writers and speakers. Time and skill are required to produce the best thoughts in the fewest words. Whether I shall give you sap or syrup remains to be seen.

I came to this church and people after many men had been heard. Candidates and supplies had been tried for more than a year, until some thirty, more or less, had been tested.

Unless a settled pastor was secured within the second year, certain funds in the possession of the Society would perhaps be forfeited. Was this the main reason for the choice they finally made?

The war of the rebellion came on near the close of my second year. When the first gun was fired at Fort Sumter, my way became plain and clear. It had been my method when any important question came up to seek the advice of those wiser than myself. But I had no time nor inclination to confer with others. The government must be sustained, was my immediate decision.

Then came those four years of conflict, of fierce struggles, of successes, and of final victory. This church in those four years never faltered. In God we trusted, and he gave us success.

I spoke out plainly and boldly, in and out of the pulpit, advocating freedom and every movement that aimed to improve the church and people.

In accepting the call to this pastorate I closed my letter with the assurance that I would preach what in my judgment was truth. Hence I was not trammelled. I could not be, if I remained a true man.

Just before the war broke out the people decided to build a new church, which in due time was completed. I preached the sermon of dedication from I Kings 8: 27, "And will God in every deed dwell on the earth? Behold the heaven, and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee: how much less this house that I have builded." God accepted this house as his own, and here for forty years he has manifested his grace, his power to save souls.

The last year of my ministry here was remarkable in my personal experience. Circumstances led me to the investigation of spiritual phenomena, and to deeper, closer thinking. And here, at my home, and in this sanctuary, the angels of God met me. They soon convinced me that they were ministering spirits, strengthening the soul in its conflict with sin and deepening its love for others. Yes, after ten years of labor, I found my love for others increased, and a deeper longing for a knowledge of divine truth. As it had been my practice to utter truth as I saw it, how could I conceal the change in my views and feelings? Did not the angels do much to bring about the change? They met Jacob in olden time and helped him. Is it strange that they helped me?

I frankly spoke of my rich experiences, my love for God, and my deeper longings for personal holiness. In a word, I poured out my whole soul. This course was in such marked contrast with my former teaching that my hearers were surprised. What can it mean? they asked. Afraid that something was wrong, and desirous of doing the right thing, they called a council. I consented, and pastors and delegates met and advised that I spend a while in study at Andover Theological Seminary.

The next year and a half at Andover was rich in its results. The professors were men of ability and truth lovers. I found myself in sympathy with their views of truth. Some were unable to help me in my special investigations. One said he "knew nothing about such matters." Was he not wise to withhold his judgment? I honor him. From Prof. Phelps and his aged father I received much information. The elder man confirmed me in my new views, while the professor indirectly influenced me along the same lines. Prof. Park was absent in Europe, I think, when I arrived. Some one advised me to avoid him. Circumstances never brought us together except for a moment. The faculty of the seminary were very kind and helpful, and I hold them in grateful remembrance.

The application of the church in Tilton, N. H., was handed to me by one of the professors. I answered it, went to Tilton, and, after an interval, was installed as pastor of the Congregational Church. I remained with them five years.

I come back to-day, after thirty-two years of reflection and experience, strengthened in my impressions and belief in the value and power of angelic guidance, and in sympathy with many of my brethren in the ministry—I mean the more conservative thinkers.

My interest in this church and people has not waned. This is the only church that I know well throughout my entire ministry. To see my successors doing good work has gladdened my heart, while the kind attention shown me recently in my age has been most gratifying.

To-day is a rare occasion in my varied experience. Looking backward I see that better work has been done by my successors as one result of the change. And the two men who have toiled here for twenty-four years have received marked blessing from above. For this I hoped, for this I prayed. The improvements made in this house of worship, its enlargement, and its added beauty, have been in keeping with my desire for your good, and I am satisfied.

This church and this people are dear to my heart. Here I began my work as a minister of the gospel. Here I received blessing, enlargement, uplifting.

Three times the angel of life entered our little cottage. Later in a few days death removed the little ones so dear to us. The dust of my wife and four children mingle with the precious dust of those whom you have loved. And by their side is room for me and my remaining daughter. But when this body is laid in yonder cemetery do not think of me as being here. Only the cast-off garment that my soul hast worn will be deposited with you.

I may be with you as an angel of light, with larger power for aiding and strengthening your pastors. If infinite wisdom shall send me here as a helper, I will come on the swift wings of joy and love."

The remarks by Rev. Mr. Pratt were listened to with marked attention, and suggested the following lines, dedicated to him by a friend:—

TO OUR PASTOR.

Thin is the veil that hides the unseen portal
 That leads from out this narrow place of tears
 Into wide fields, the blessed life immortal,
 Where we, rejoicing, spend the eternal years.

We feel a presence rising dark before us,
 A shadow looming dimly on our way,
 A gasping cry, and then full shining o'er us,
 The bright effulgence of an endless day.

The death we fear is but the quiet going
 From life's dim chamber into quickening day,
 The careful reaping of a lifetime's sowing
 Of seed we scattered on our daily way.

Perhaps with joy we'll find the end we wrought for
 Has yielded gracious store of golden sheaves.
 Perchance with tears too late the purpose sought for,
 We find left naught to glean but scattered leaves.

What wonder if, with all these scenes before us,
 We think of loved ones in life's weary day,
 In full remembrance of the love they bore us,
 And long to help them on their weary way.

The burning bush that still was not consumed,
 The mighty triad on the mountain grim,
 And spirit forms that all the space illumed
 When Christ in anguish paced the garden dim.

The spirit mild that bailed the favored maiden,
 And gave sweet promise of the coming child,
 And those who later, with great tidings laden,
 Led the rude shepherds through the pastures wild.

All prove you that with watchful love's persistence,
 We silent guide you on your homeward way,
 And when you falter, we, with mild insistence,
 Still lure you onward toward the perfect day.

Sometimes at eventide, when night's descending,
 And you unconscious breathe a silent prayer,
 You feel us present o'er you quiet bending,
 And know, unseen, we stand beside you there.

Hope on, dear heart. The hours you spent in sowing
 Along the wayside of each weary day,
 Shall come to you in measure deep o'erflowing
 In the rich harvest of the bright away.

The following letter was read in response to the fifth pastor, Rev. E. W. Bullard:—

 NEW YORK, JUNE 26, 1902.

JOHN C. SANBORN, Clerk of the Hampstead Cong'l Church:

Dear Sir:—I thank you, and through you the pastor and people, for the very kind invitation to be present at your one hundred and fiftieth anniversary.

I shall be with you in spirit, but shall be unable to be present in person.

My late father, Rev. E. W. Bullard, and former pastor of your church, often spoke of his pastorate among you as years of great happiness, due in a large measure to the loyal support that he received in his work from the church officers and the congregation.

Surely, when any church gives such stalwart aid to the Lord's work, and upholds its pastor's hands, as you did during my father's ministry, then such a church will prosper and be blessed.

I wish you, as a church, congregation and town, all possible joy and happiness in your anniversary, and for the future may God's richest blessings be in store for you.

Very sincerely yours,

WILLIAM E. BULLARD (No. 501).

Rev. Albert Watson, sixth pastor, spoke as follows:—

“In response to the kind and gracious welcome given us, I feel like saying, “thank you” most heartily to this beloved pastor and church, whose guests we are to-day.

Even if this is not exactly the “Mount of Transfiguration,” it is good to be here, to listen to the story of the past, to look into each other's faces, to take each other by the hand, and exchange hearty greetings.

Doubtless we all feel like saying, with Tiny Tim, “God bless us, every one.”

In giving reminiscences such as are called for this afternoon, there is great danger of the “ego” coming to the front: and yet one can hardly speak of what he saw, heard and felt during a ministry extending a little over seventeen years without using personal pronouns in a manner that is not altogether pleasant to the ear.

This difficulty, combined with the brief time limit allowed the speakers, baffles one and makes him tremble a little as he undertakes to tell his story.

It is not with a view of calling attention to myself, but in simple gratitude to Almighty God to whom all glory belongs, that I now submit to you a few facts and figures.

It was in the early days of 1876 that your attention was called to me, as one who might possibly fit in the vacant place in your church and become your sixth pastor. You sent for me; "I came, I saw, I conquered." A very hearty and unanimous call followed. We were one at the start. The installation took place March 23, 1876. Now as to reminiscences.

The most marked event in my pastorate was the great revival which begun Sunday evening, May 21st, a little less than two months after the installation. We had been singing the well-known hymn, "Pass me not, O Gentle Saviour," when the pastor was moved by an almost invisible impulse to stop the singing and press home the truth that if any were passed by it was their own fault. Surely God was present, and willing and waiting to save there and then.

No need of any being "passed by." The blessing is here, A full, free, complete salvation is offered to all. Will you have it? Will you open your heart, surrender yourselves, and be saved now? If so, please rise at once. Seventeen stood on their feet, as if moved by a common impulse, most of them heads of families now. The spirit of the Lord was with us in mighty power.

A few extra meetings were called, and in less than two weeks over twice as many more were on their feet in our meetings, saying virtually, "We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you."

The whole town was moved as it had not been before for forty years. In fact, the influence of the revival extended through the whole of my pastorate. It was emphatically the best thing in it, and it was particularly gratifying to me, a few weeks ago, to hear my successor, Brother Gardner, say publicly, that he "had felt its effect all through his ministry here."

I can hardly begin to tell you its effect upon my own heart. It will be enough, perhaps, to say that I never felt so weak or so humble in all my life; it seemed as if God almost took the breath out of me. How utterly insignificant I was! There was no chance whatever for any self-glorification, because, you see, I had done nothing special to bring about such a revival. And yet I had rather have one grand, gracious, God-given revival like that than fifty man-made, machine-like, manufactured articles called by that name, for such things are very likely to be superficial in character, shallow in spirit, and sadly disappointing in results.

Beginning with a membership of seventy-two, the church life and work grew so rapidly that at the end of five years we were able to report a membership of one hundred and sixty-one.

Whole number received during my pastorate was 182, on confession of faith 136, and by letter 46.

Whole number connected with the church during my ministry was 254, of these 98 were removed by letter, death, or discipline.

The attendance on evening meetings was increased four-fold. There was a corresponding increase in benevolence. You gave on an average, during my ministry, $500 a year, besides meeting current expenses.

This includes what you gave for the building of the new vestry, also the church repairs and alterations from time to time. About one half of the above sum, (or $250), represented your average yearly contribution, for missionary and other benevolent purposes.

I may remark, in passing, that I performed the marriage service eighty-nine times. The oldest bridegroom was 78 years of age, and the youngest 18. The oldest bride 71 years and the youngest 15.

Whole number of funerals attended 226. I had thought of mentioning a long list of names ever dear to me, with a view to noting their excellent virtues and characteristics, but time will not permit. To mention a few would, I fear, be invidious, so I deny myself the pleasure of mentioning any.

Permit me to express my thanks, to the whole church and people of this town, for the many kindnesses I received during my ministry.

And as time is rapidly passing, and soon it will be said of each of us, "He is gone," allow me to say another thing to each, and all who felt themselves in the least degree injured by me (through plainness of speech or anything else), I most sincerely and humbly crave your forgiveness.

How small some of these things seem now about which we differed occasionally; and how grandly the sweeter and better things rise and grow before our eyes!

It is one of the things that gladdens our hearts, this "survival of the fittest." The fact that the weak things, the foolish things, the evil things in life will die (like weeds picked up by the roots) if we give them a fair chance, while the nobler, better, sweeter things of life will live and flourish abundantly; for is it not an eternal truth that no really good thing ever dies?

I wish to express my obligation to the pastors who preceded me, especially, Bros. Bartley, Pratt and Bullard, who did such efficient work and faithful seed sowing, as to make possible the revival which followed. I shall ever hold, also, in grateful remembrance the brotherly love and encouragement I received from neighboring pastors, notably, Rev. Jesse Page of Atkinson, and Rev. Charles Tenney of Chester, both noble men of God, who seemed to deem it a joy to help a young man, and cheer his heart with kind words, now and again.

I should be glad, if time permitted, to speak of the Hampstead Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Ladies Reading Class, The Hampstead Lecture Course, The King's Daughters and the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor; all of which had their inception during my ministry here.

With varying degrees of success, they all rendered valuable service to the church, and town.

Some of them after serving their desired purpose, very properly fell asleep, or were "merged" into the regular life and work of the church. Others served as distinct organizations and are doing good work to-day.

A prominent New England divine took exception the other day to the common remark "life is a voyage;" he said, "that is poetic nonsense, life is not a voyage, it is building; we cannot sail away from our past, and leave it behind, we take it with us and, build it unto our very being, our life, our character." If that is true, then church life is a building. Paradoxical as it may seem, all that has gone before, remains. It is with us. It is part of the building as we find it to-day. The work of the former pastors, the work of the laity, during these one hundred and fifty years is here. It is the business and high privilege of those who are here to-day, and those who shall come after us, to go on building better and better, rock to rock, grace to grace, power to power, until the structure shall be completed, and the top stone is brought on with shouting, "grace, grace unto it."

It was much regretted that unavoidable official duties prevented the seventh pastor, Rev. Rufus P. Gardner, Supt. of the N. H. Orphans' Home, Webster Place, Franklin, from being present. He, however, sent a most cordial letter, expressing much joy in the remembrance of the part he took in the life of the church for eight years; and recalled with pleasure the loyalty of the church people.

Mrs. Forrest E. Merrill rendered the solo, "There is a City Bright," after which, Miss Harriette E. Noyes was introduced, and occupied the next hour and fifteen minutes in reviewing the history of the church in the following address.

ADDRESS.

The first principle of history is growth. From history in general, we see the development of humanity. From the history of a community, we shall see its growth and development.

The Right Hon. James Bryce says: "The task of history is to trace the march of humanity, and to show the relations which each part of it bears to the others." Vives, the first historian of civilization, desired to chronicle "only the events of peace, and progress, and the acquisitions of intellect." The great historian, Herodotus, wrote only of the prominent people of the world. Other writers have defined history as "the essence of numerous biographies," as fiction immortalized, as a register of successes and disappointments." Prof. Von Helmholtz, however, says, "It is not for the historian to discover the scheme of the universe, but to record the facts of human experience." All nations and all people are makers of history, and however writers may differ, historical narrations are always interesting and helpful, whether they be a review of the revolutions of the past centuries, or the evolutions of modern times.

MISS H. E. NOVES,
July 2, 1902.

The year 1899 was the one hundred and fiftieth birth-day of the town of Hampstead. The year 1902 is the one hundred and fiftieth birth-day of the Congregational Church of Hampstead. I was honored, in 1899, by being permitted to relate some thoughts relative to the history of the town. Today, I am doubly honored by being invited to present a second chapter, or some of the history of the church.

During a period of several centuries nearly all the nations of civilized western Europe had been under the domination of the Roman Catholic Church. The principles of the Reformation, under the active propagandism of Luther and Malancthon, in Germany in the sixteenth century, developed a state of religious discord and social confusion all over England, which resulted in dividing the people of that nation into four religious bodies—the Catholics, the Church of England, the Puritans, and the Pilgrims. The Puritans and the Pilgrims were especially obnoxious to the reigning monarchs of England. The growing intelligence of the people of that great realm asserted itself, and about the year 1600 many counties of old England were visited by a “revival of the vital religion.” Many learned graduates of Oxford and Cambridge were partakers of the spiritual benefits, and united with the Puritan cause.

In the early days of the reign of James I., son of Mary, Queen of Scots, the Hampton Court Conference made an unsuccessful attempt to reconcile the Puritans to the views of the Catholics, and in July, 1604, more stringent measures were taken against them. A proclamation was issued commanding the Puritan clergy “to conform before the last of November, or dispose of themselves and families in some other way.” The law virtually declared England uninhabitable by “non-conformists” and by “separatists,” as the Puritans and Pilgrims were called.

Persecutions, ruinous fines, imprisonments, and even sentences of death were imposed, until, seeing no way to worship God unmolested in their native land, a number of the best families of England, representing nearly every coat of arms in the Kingdom, emigrated and came to Massachusetts Bay, willing to endure danger, deprivation, hardship and exile in a strange land, where they could enjoy the privileges of civil and religious liberty for themselves, and transmit to posterity what they believed to be a pure religion and a more scriptural mode of worship.

In the spring of 1640 we find twelve of those sturdy farmers and their families from Essex county, England, with the Rev. John Ward as their master spirit, forming a new settlement, where no white man had ever trod, in the wild woods of ancient Pentucket, on the northern bank of the Merrimack river, which the following year they named Haverhill, in honor of Haverhill, England, the birthplace of Mr. Ward.

Captain Edward Johnson, in his celebrated history of New England, published in 1654, entitled "Wonder-Working Providence of Zion's Saviour," says, "When they came at once to hopes of being such a competent number of people as might be able to maintain a minister, they then surely seated themselves, and not before, it being as unnatural for a right New England man to live without an able ministry as a smith to work his iron without a fire." He further says: "The town of Haverhill is built upon the fair and large river of Merrimack, the people are wholly bent to improve their labor in tilling the earth and keeping cattle, whose yearly income encourages them to spend their days in these remote parts; the people are labourers in gaining the goods of this life, yet they are not unmindful of the chief end of their coming hither, namely, to be made partakers of the blessed ordinances of Christ, that their souls might be refreshed by the continual income of his rich grace, to which end they gathered into a church body and called to office the Reverend Mr. Ward."

In the month of June of 1641, the General Court of Massachusetts, on consideration that the settlers have six or more dwellings erected, appointed a committee to determine the bounds of the lands which they had purchased of the Indians; which territory comprised a large portion of the present towns of Haverhill and Methuen, in Massachusetts; Salem, Plaistow, Atkinson and Hampstead, in New Hampshire; and in the autumn of that year their church, the twentieth in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, was gathered with fourteen members, eight males and six females.

This faithful band, whose homes were all in the vicinity of what is now called Water street, assembled for worship Sabbath after Sabbath, for seven years, beneath the branches of a noble tree which stood on the brow of the hill in the old Pentucket burial ground.

The Puritan fathers knew no churches, or "houses of the Lord:" but as other Puritans came to the settlement and prospered, they were enabled, in 1648, to build at the "Lower knoll of the Mill Lott," now occupied by the Pentucket and Linwood cemeteries, a rude log house, which they called their "meeting-house, or house to meet in," for prayers and public worship, and also the transaction of all town and civic affairs.

Rev. Rufus P. Gardner, in his historical discourse at the re-dedication service September 1, 1901, gave a descriptive sketch of the several places of worship, pastors, etc., which interested each successive generation, from the pioneers of Haverhill to the worshippers in this church. Therefore in this paper I shall notice more particularly the people and their works.

The fifty years that the inhabitants of Haverhill gathered for worship in their humble house, with its stockade of smooth poles, and armed watch for defence against attacks of a lurking foe, were years of hardship, poverty, dread and peril. The story has been often told of how nearly thirty of their number were murderously slain or taken captive by the Indians, their houses plundered, or reduced to ashes. A whole generation of fathers and mothers had been laid to rest in their burial ground behind the meeting-house, yet at no time do we find them faltering in either Sabbath or family worship.

No man could take the freeman's oath or be invested with power to vote or hold any public office who was not a member of a Congregational church, which was the established church. Thus every family was a family of prayer. They believed in its efficacy, and entered upon no enterprise that they could not commend to heaven by prayer. They sanctified the Sabbath, and felt for that day emotions of peculiar reverence and pleasure. It was the universal custom to gather their children and households about them for morning and evening worship.

Even if famine was at their doors they felt it far safer to trust in their God than to engage in any doubtful expedient for a supply of corn. Besides the regular Sabbath and family worship, they often devoted whole days to fasting and to prayer, with mutual exhortation and encouragement. They taught the catechism to their children, and dedicated themselves and their children by the ordinances of baptism and the sacrament. They were people of pure morals, of rigid honesty, and of patient, self-denying industry. They had great courage and strong faith.

During that half century men of character, wealth and influence had settled in the town. So that even in those perilous times the pioneers had prospered in their homes and families, in their church and minister, in their town organization, in their mills and mechanics, in their cultivated fields and meadows, and in their horses and cattle. In 1699 they were seated in their new and more commodious meeting-house on the 'Commons,' now known as City Hall Park.

We read of the heroic courage and unflinching trust which those zealous worshippers possessed, as they saw their beloved pastor, Rev. Benjamin Rolfe, and his wife, with several members of their church, together with the soldiers who had been sent to their relief, ruthlessly slain at their own doors by a desperate band of French and Indians in their march through the town, and of how they spent not only whole days, but weeks, in exhortation, fasting, and prayer, that the Indian troubles might cease.

Their Christian faith and obligation was strengthened when the treaty of peace was signed in 1709, and as less fear and anxiety rested in their hearts the more thrifty and adventurous were eager to take up wild tracts of land in the dense woods in the north, the east, or the westward limits of the town, and establish homes for their families.

As each section of the town prospered, they at once petitioned the mother parish "that as, by reason of the great distance of their dwellings from the meeting-house, they undergo many and great difficulties in attending the public worship of Almighty God," and asked "that they might be permitted to hold meetings by themselves."

In 1730, seventy-six members from the First Parish Church had selected homes among the neighboring hills and valleys at the north, and were organized into a church body, since known as the "North Parish and Plaistow Congregational Church," with the Rev. James Cushing as their teacher. Two-thirds of those members were residents of what is now Plaistow, Atkinson or Hampstead.

Many of those hardy pioneers, who had separated from the parent church, "gentlemen and yeomen," skilled in all trades, were eager for more land, and the tide of migration rested not near the North Parish meeting house, for in 1733 twenty-five families, from that and neighboring parishes, had braved the hardships and cleared their lands from four to eight miles north from Rev. Mr. Cushing's parish. They had found an ideal location for their homes in the midst of the valuable timber lands, where the lakes and ponds glistened in the sunlight, where the streams abounded in fish, the excellent mill privileges and the rich soil assured them of prosperity and of happiness. They had prepared a house for worship—a simple log building, where Daniel Emerson's house now stands, and humbly asked the North Parish committee to permit them "to hold meetings by themselves during the winter months." This permission was granted them.

Study reveals to us very little concerning their mode of worship for the next fifteen years, or of the exact date when the Church of Christ in Timberlane was gathered: but, as "from the character of the father that of the son may be anticipated," we can readily believe that the families of Little, Hazen, Heath, Johnson, Bailey, Emerson, Stevens, Webster, Eastman, Gile, Morse, Hale, and others, strengthened by the influence of the great religious revival which spread over the settlement in 1741, were as faithful to their Christian obligation and duties of worship, and as earnest to be gathered into a church body, as were their grandparents one hundred years before, when they brought from England their austere rules of worship.

July 29, 1746, Daniel Little, in behalf of the inhabitants, sent a petition to the Governor and His Majesty's Council, giving as a reason for asking to be set off into a distinct parish or township, that "we are so compactly situated, and by the blessings of God have made such improvements, that we are now able to support a gospel minister amongst ourselves," and that "most of us now live far from ye public worship of God (unless carried on amongst ourselves), that we cannot possibly attend upon it without the utmost difficulty and hazard."

The petition of Richard Hazen, May 12, 1748, says: "We have for the greater part of fifteen years, at a very great cost and charge, hired a minister to preach amongst us," and "we have now a suitable place for worship, and ask to be freed from all support of the North Parish minister."

These petitions lead to the belief that three years before the granting of the township or parish of Hampstead, January 19, 1749, the people had their meeting house (our present town house) raised and covered, and perhaps used for public worship.

In the warrant for the first town meeting, called by "Daniel Little, Justice of the Peace," January 24, 1749, as a former historian has said, "every line but one was penned to take measures for the enjoyment of increased privileges in the worship of God and to provide a permanent preacher of His Word."

The history of the town was the history of the church in those days. The church was maintained and the minister supported by rates levied upon the whole town, under the charge of the selectmen. Therefore it was a town meeting question of settling a minister and providing for his support.

The first three years after the incorporation of the township of Hampstead, articles were inserted from time to time in the warrant for town meetings, to "see if the town would vote to extend a call to either Mr. Parker, Mr. Phillips, Mr. Merriam, or other preacher to settle as a gospel minister in town," or "to supply ye pulpit with ye advice of ye neighboring ministers." The voters decided, however, at each attempt to settle a minister, "to provide preaching, with ye advice of ye pastors in ye neighboring parishes." It may seem remarkable that, with their meeting house ready, and with a people able and willing to support a minister, that they did not unite and settle a preacher before three years.

Rev. John Kelly used the expression, "Hampstead had the name of being a difficult people." Their delay in uniting in the choice of a pastor, while numerous candidates came and went, may not have been due to the fact that the people were hard to please. Fifteen families had come to Hampstead from Old Salisbury, Massachusetts, and were watching the progress of their beloved friend, Henry True. Twenty other families were in the Hampstead parish, having come from the First Church in Haverhill, where, under the guidance of their pastor, Rev. Edward Barnard, their friend, Henry True, of Salisbury, fresh from a four years' course at Harvard College, was teaching the village school, and faithfully pursuing his studies for the ministry. When Henry True, the young man of twenty-six years, was ready for the work, the inhabitants of Hampstead were ready to extend to him a unanimous call to become their first settled minister. He sent his letter of acceptance May 3, 1752. He was dismissed from the church in Salisbury, May 31, 1752, having been admitted a member of the Second Church in 1746. The pastor, Rev. Edmund Noyes, granted him a letter from that church, "in order of his being incorporated with ye church of and at Hampstead."

June 3d, 1752, the church was organized with sixty-eight members, fifteen from the First Church in Haverhill, twenty from the North Parish Church, and fourteen from the Second Church of Amesbury and Salisbury, Massachusetts.

Ordination day June 24th, 1752, was doubtless observed with the usual festivities of the times. We do not find a complete record of the event. Rev. Edward Barnard preached the ordination sermon from the eleventh chapter of Acts and the twenty-fourth verse, "For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost."

The church records of Salisbury, under date of June 21, 1752, read, "It was proposed to ye church whether ye would comply with ye church in Hampstead, to assist in ye ordination of Mr. Henry True which was voted in ye affirmative." The names of Rev. Edmund Noyes, Pastor, Moses Merrill, and Nathaniel Fitts are given as delegates, and doubtless they were present. We also find mention of Rev. Ebenezer Flagg of Chester, Rev. Abner Bailey of Salem, Rev. Stephen Bachelor of West Parish of Haverhill, and Rev. James Cushing of the North Parish being present.

The first church in New Hampshire was organized at Dover, in 1700. The Church of Christ in Hampstead was the thirty-second in the Province, but no church had been gathered with more members or with persons of greater influence.

They were Nature's noblemen and women, possessed of courage, integrity, and perseverance. The various votes of the freeholders, as recorded on the town and church books, show the members of the parish to have been unwearied in their efforts to found the system of common schools, to improve and make more comfortable their house of worship, and to firmly establish the principles of the Puritan Congregational faith in town, which have proved such a rich inheritance to their descendants.

The first votes by the early members of the church, under date of August 16, 1752, were the choosing of two deacons, Daniel Little and Peter Eastman, and at the same time voting "that a levy should be made on each communicant to pay five shillings annually for providing for ye elements." November 12, 1753, it was voted "that ye overplus of money that had been raised for ye procuring vessels for ye use of ye church should in part be disposed of to buy a church book;" "that there be five sacraments a year, one every other month, omitting one in ye winter season," and that "ye sing Dr. Watts hymns at sacramental seasons." July 9, 1754, it was voted "to procure ye burying cloth;" and that "Lieut. Peter Morse, Moses Hale, Stephen Johnson and John Muzzey be chosen a committee to inspect ye lives of professing christians, and if any be found absenting themselves from ye communion table, to know ye reason why."

From Amesbury, Salisbury, Newbury and Haverhill young men and their families came to the town. Most of them had been baptized in their infancy, and at once united with the church, by profession or by letter. Others went before the church officials and accepted certain doctrines. Those that are thus recorded, "Owned the Covenant" and were placed into such relations to the church as to give them rights of citizenship, and their children the ordinance of baptism. One hundred and forty-six persons were so accepted by Rev. Henry True, from 1752 to 1782, and termed "half way members," many of them in later years became members in full communion.

And now that the church in Hampstead is well established, let us in imagination go back and visit the town, and keep Sabbath with its people in their new meeting house, that we may record our observations.

Borne with indescribable velocity on the wings of fancy, through the current of time, we suddenly alight on the Thomas Hale farm, of which the Daniel Ayer homestead is now a part.

It is daylight of a fine Sabbath morning in June, nearly one hundred and fifty years ago. We stand for some moments listening to the howling of the wolves and wildcats over in the "Kingston woods" and as the gruesome sound dies away, and the rosy hue of the morning light spreads up into the heavens, we slowly wend our way along the beaten path towards the meeting house.

A solemn stillness presides over the bright scene which Nature has spread around us. The motions and joyous songs of numerous birds, together with the fragrant odor of the wild blossoms, seem like a morning offering of praise.

Giant trees of oak, elm, chestnut and ash are on each side, broken branches, masses of briars, and often huge logs, lie where storm or decay had strewn them, showing marks of extreme age. Now and then we come to a low framed house of rough boards, and log sheds or other out-buildings, stone walls in progress of making and garden patches in the clearings, where the surface of the meadows and grass lands are clad in richest green.

We silently pass the homes of the Harrimans, Grandmother Copp, Ebenezer Gile, Col. Jacob Bailey, Lemuel Tucker, the Hutchens' home with the sycamore tree in the doorway, and the stately elm opposite, the Merrill lands, the Hazen homestead, and over the log bridge across "Flaggy meadow," from which loads of sweet flag are yearly taken to the ports of Salem and Newbury.

The families are all astir, for on Sabbath mornings the needed work is early done. The warmth of the morning has caused the windows and doors to be opened, and at some dwellings we hear from within, the voices of prayer, at others, groups of little boys and girls are reading to their pious mothers from the Testament or Book of Psalms, or promptly answering the questions of the Puritan Catechism.

Impressed with the sacredness of the scene, we leave the meadows to the right, and enter a narrow bridle path, through a dense forest, with the waters of Rowell's pond glistening at our left. Nearing the ledgy hill with the meeting house in sight, we meet Stephen Johnson, the aged sexton, on his way to open the house of worship. We explain to him that we have come to worship with them for the day, and to learn their way of worship, but our observations will not be disclosed till one hundred and fifty years have passed away.

With a kindly smile he places a massive iron key in the lock of the solid plank door, which springs wide open as if to bid us welcome, and as we stand on the rocky eminence admiring the beautiful landscape before us, he makes several loud blasts from an ox horn, which doubtless are heard to the distant parts of the parish.

He fervently surveys the plain house, newly clapboarded, and with part of the windows glazed, but solid enough to withstand the storms of centuries, remarking, "our house was raised and covered by willing hands, and we have dedicated it to God, and His praise forever."

Several couples come up the hill to the stone horse-mount where the women dismount and the men lead their horses to the stakes among the trees behind the meeting house. "The Moses, Williams, Johnson, and Kezer families from Amesbury Peak, though farthest from the sanctuary," said he, "are always first to arrive. We are thankful to be permitted to be here, and few are late for morning prayer." We are given prominent seats in the meeting house.

A few solemn women glance at us as if we are subjects for church discipline, as we take the opportunity to look about, while the people are gathering. We see the pulpit high up, with its glazed window behind it, the winding stairway leading to it, the octagon shaped sounding board suspended above it, the deacons' seat beneath it, with the sacramental table on hinges in front, the rows of plank seats, the deep box pews and hasped doors, the galleries supported by marble painted pillars, the unplastered walls and ceiling showing the substantial timbers of which the house was builded.

Ebenezer Gile, Jonathan Hutchens, Moses Hale, Samuel Worthen, and James Graves had been chosen a committee to "seat the meeting house" and the selectmen, Benjamin Emerson, Benjamin Philbrick, and Nathaniel Heath were to seat the committee and their families.

The sittings had been assigned with regard to the amount of taxes each paid, the social position, or according to age.

Facing the pulpit at the east of the broad aisle are the selectmen's seats. Behind them are seated those whose white locks and bending forms betokened them to be the surviving few who had come to Hampstead to take possession of the land. Among them are Michael Johnson, James Mills, Bartholomew Heath, Henry Hale, Stephen Emerson, and Jonathan Eastman.

Next, in crowded ranks, sit the rugged young farmers and mechanics of the town—David Dodge, Josiah Davis, Timothy Goodwin, Samuel and Joseph Little, John Hunkins, Thomas Williams, Otho Stevens, Jr., and many others.

The box pews are occupied by Richard Hazen, Jacob Bailey, Esquire Plummer, Charles Johnston, John Webster, and Edmund Sawyer, whose dignity of bearing and finer clothing are emblems of their importance in the parish.

In the corresponding seats at the west of the aisle are the wives and mothers and sisters, dressed as suited to their rank, many in homespun gingham, with tidy aprons of purest white. The young men and maidens are opposite each other, in the east and west galleries, and on the long benches against the wall are the boys of the parish, David Copp, the tything man, with his rod in hand, near them, to suppress any smile, whisper, or wink, by a rap on the ear.

Nearly three hundred people have arrived, as every inhabitant, not excused for sufficient reasons, must attend public worship.

As the Rev. Mr. True enters the house the whole congregation rise and stand, until the sexton escorts the minister to the pulpit and seats himself on the broad stair. It is nine o'clock. All heads are bowed. Rev. Mr. True rises, and with a clear, earnest voice, commences the service with a short invocation, praising God for the light and privileges of another of His holy days, and fervently imploring His presence and aid in the prayers and praises to be offered, and humbly asking His blessing upon His Word now to be dispensed.

A half hour of reading and explaining the nineteenth Psalm is followed by Deacon Little reading the five stanzas of the fifth Psalm, from the "New England Collection of Psalms, Hymns and Spiritual Songs." Repeating the first line of the Psalm—"Jehovah, to my words give ear"—Deacon Little commences singing in a tremulous voice, to the tune of Windsor," as Deacon Eastman "pitched the tune," when instantly the whole congregation, old and young, without rising, join in the singing. He reads the second line, "My meditation weigh," and the words are caught from his lips, and so on separately, line by line.

There is no harmony in the singing, no perfect keeping of time, yet it is exceedingly interesting and impressive. It is much like a roar of thunder, or the voice of many waters, but the seriousness of the appearance and manner of the people cause a deep solemnity to pervade the whole congregation. "They sing to the Lord, with spirit and understanding."

The sexton passes from seat to seat while the people are rising for the long prayer, and collects the letters or little notes, which are read by the pastor. Widow Elizabeth Johnson wishes prayers from minister and congregation that she may be reconciled in her recent bereavement; Ebenezer Gile would render thanks for manifold mercies which had been given him and Mrs. Gile for the birth of a daughter; John Muzzey and wife wish prayers for relief from the depredations of wild beasts; Nathaniel Heath and his relatives would give thanks to the Lord for relief from the dreaded throat distemper in his family; Ruth Atwood asks prayers for help and wisdom in guiding her family of step-children, and that her troubles may cease; Benjamin Kimball requests prayers that he may be more fully prepared to commune at the Lord's table; and so on till every event of life is made an occasion of prayer and praise.

The prayer commences with acknowledgments of dependence, guilt, and spiritual necessity. The minister spreads before the Lord all the wants, trials, sins and temptations of the people, all of the joys and sorrows in the town during the past week, and with special minuteness of description the thanksgivings and requests of those who have expressly desired particular mention in the prayers of the sanctuary this day, and finally prays that they may be prepared for the final change that awaits them, that they may meet it in peace, with the hope of pardon and acceptance to eternal life, and felicity beyond the grave.

When the long plank seats, which are hung on hinges, and are raised up as the people passed in or out of the pews, or rise for the long prayers, fall into place, the resounding clatter of "click, click, click," from all parts of the room for several seconds, is amusing to our imagination.

The congregation, without any visible signs of weariness or impatience during the long prayer, catch the tune from Deacon Little, as he reads line by line four verses of the sixth Psalm, commencing :—

"Lord, in thy wrath, rebuke me not,
Nor in thy hot wrath chasten me.
Lord, pity me, for I am weak ;
Lord, heal me, for my bones vex'd be.
Also my soul is vex'd sore,
How long, Lord, wilt thou me forsake ?
Return, O Lord, my soul release,
O, save me, for thy mercy's sake."

We hear a slight rustling and espy the deacons, selectmen and others, who carry the pens of ready writers, preparing to take the text and heads of the discourse. We are reminded that we may do the same, and note the text as from 2d Timothy 11 : 19. "And let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity."

The discourse is divided into seven parts, namely, questions and answers, with occasional points of doctrine, but abounding in practical thoughts and suggestions.

A short prayer for the blessing of God on His Word dispensed and a solemn benediction closes the forenoon service.

An hour intermission is social and of good cheer. Promptly at one o'clock minister and people are in their seats. Deacon Eastman reads the one hundred and forty-eighth hymn, and the melody of each line is caught from the voice of Deacon Little to the tune of "Old One Hundred and Forty-eighth." A long prayer follows, observing the same particularity of enumeration and minuteness of description of the mercies implored as the prayer of the morning. A more exact profession of the prevailing sins among the people, the special intercession for the country, for all mankind, for the church of God throughout the world, for the inhabitants of New England, especially those of Massachusetts Bay, that they may never forget the errand for which their fathers crossed the ocean to the wilderness, that righteousness may reign in the whole colony, for blessing and direction upon the sovereign, King George, and divine benediction upon the high court of Parliament, of the realm of England. Finally the Lord is earnestly besought to hasten the end of all idolatry, superstition, and imposture.

The singing of the fifteenth Psalm is followed by a long sermon from the same text as in the morning. In the forenoon it was noticeably an explanation and defence of the truth of the text. In the afternoon it is the enforcement of it upon the conscience and heart.

When the good man closes this labor of love, Deacon Eastman arises and says: "Brethren, if any among you have a word of exhortation to offer, let him say on." Several of the aged men speak a few words of admonition to the young people, telling them of the danger of longer delay, and earnestly entreating them to "name the name of Christ."

At the close of the service of exhortation, and after singing a verse of a psalm, several young men hastily arrange rows of plank tables in the long aisles and in front of the pulpit, and spread them with linen, and the long seats are moved into place by the sides of the tables.

The Lord's Supper is, by custom, the social event of the church, and many visitors from neighboring parishes had come to partake of the "elements" with them, each stranger going to the pastor or deacons holding a lead coin marked "A," which served in keeping any unworthy person from the sacramental table. The aged communicants are seated at the tables first, followed by the next in age or rank.

The whole service is very impressive, and amid much singing of Dr. Watts' Psalms and Hymns, the "elements" are passed from one to another. The pastor and deacons are favored with "elements" of a more choice flavor.

Jeremiah Eaton, who had recently moved to Hampstead from Lynn, Massachusetts, was noted for his musical talents. He had been given permission by a vote in church meeting "to set ye psalms if he saw fit." He became enthusiastic in the singing, and at the close of the supper sings in a very spirited way the interrogative verse so familiar to their parents and grandparents, as sang at their sacramental service :—

"Did Jesus ordain
His supper in vain,
And furnish a feast
For none but His earliest servants to taste?"

The communicants seem to vie with one another as they join Mr. Eaton with their voices and hearts in singing the following words of the chorus or answer :—

" In rapturous bliss
He bid us do this ;
The joy it imparts,
Hath witnessed His gracious
Design in our hearts.
Receiving the bread
On Jesus we feed ;
It doth not appear,
His manner of working :
But Jesus is here."

Rev. Mr. True gives notice that during the coming week he shall visit the families of Ebenezer Gile, John Kezer, Peter Morse, Benjamin Emerson, Peter Eastman, and David Copp, for the purpose of questioning their children on the points of doctrine, as required in the Westminster Catechism.

A short prayer is then in order, imploring blessings on the services of the day, and a joyous singing of the doxology :—

“To ev’ry hill He bore my load,
And there the Lamb, my Lord and God,
When He came hither nailed
My sin and my iniquity
With His own body on the tree,
And there my pardon sealed.”

A scriptural benediction closes the public worship. Rev. Mr. True descends the pulpit stairs and passes through the long aisle to the door, bowing right and left to the congregation. No person moves from his seat until the minister has passed out of the meeting house. The people then begin departing to their homes, as it is nearly sundown.

After this vision, we are swiftly transported through space and over one hundred and fifty years of time. Let us now revert to the records and traditions of the past.

The thirty years that Rev. Mr. True was pastor of the church were years of trying experience to minister and people. Early in his work the New Hampshire Provincial army was calling for recruits to protect the colonies against the invasion of France. From 1755 to 1762 thirty-three stalwart sons and fathers from the parish, who had been taught the qualities and traditions of the soldier, true to their ancestral training, marched to Lake George, Crown Point, or other places of defence. Rev. Mr. True, as their good shepherd, went with them as chaplain in 1759, and again in 1762. His “Journal of Events,” as he arrived home, reads: “May I never forgit ye goodness of ye Lord, in ye land of ye living,” rejoicing that he was once more among his people.

In 1756 a “mortal fever” prevailed, and thirty or more members of the church died. The migrations to the “northern country” from 1762 to 1770 took one hundred or more inhabitants of Hampstead. Among them were some of the most influential families, but their places were quickly filled by others imbued with the same religious zeal.

Most of the early settlers of Hampstead were said to be “rough and hardy, like the soil.” Men of that iron mould were quick to see that a vigorous enforcement of the laws were carried out by the town officials, whereby every inhabitant was required to attend divine service and to give due observance to the ordinances of religion.

With one faith and with one form of worship, it was an ideal church, with none to gainsay its rights, to dispute its doctrines, or to criticise its methods.

For nearly twenty years Rev. Mr. True's pastorate continued, with only one voice of dissent, and that was in the action of John Hogg, Esq., who is supposed to have been a Quaker, and who, in 1752, and years following, caused some trouble by refusing to pay his proportion of the rates towards the support of the ministry and of building the meeting house, under pretence of "his being of a different persuasion from the church and congregation of the town;" but it was voted in town meeting "to instruct the selectmen to make distress on him for his rates." and it was agreed "to stand by the constable and pay reasonable charges for so doing."

From 1765 to 1775 an insatiable thirst for liberty spread over the colonies. The "stamp act" aroused the people to independence, and with the determination to sever allegiance from the British crown and from all political connection with Great Britain, a constantly growing number in the State Church of New England were demanding liberty from the burdensome exactions of the church, believing that not only a free government should prevail, but that religious worship should be voluntary and free to the choice of every man according to the dictates of his own conscience.

Rev. John Kelly, in his sketch of Hampstead, in 1835, says: "About twenty years after Rev. Mr. True's settlement in town, Baptist ministers came into the place, and by zealous and loud speaking they produced a great commotion, but no revival among the people, who were very sanguine and versatile in their dispositions," which "did not unsettle the good minister, or sully his character in the views of any man, but it reduced his salary and reduced the number of his hearers, and greatly injured the character of the people, for almost all of the followers of the new teachers became downright infidels."

In 1762 the town voted "to keep the meeting house doors shut against all such preachers, whose principles are such that neither Congregational nor Presbyterian churches amongst us can hold communion with or admit as preachers."

John Hogg, Esq., Lieut. Peter Morse, John Muzzey, Esquire Plummer, Deacon Joseph French, Nathaniel Heath, John Kent, Samuel Brown, Daniel Emerson, Joseph Noyes, Edward Prescott, and Reuben Harriman were among the leaders in asking for freedom from the minister rates. They were freed from paying their rates by a vote of the town from 1768 to 1779.

Rev. Mr. True died May 22, 1782. Of the first one hundred members before 1760 all had gone, by death or removal from town, save one, Thomas Williams, who was then eighty years of age.

Eighty-three persons had been added to the church rolls in spite of these serious obstacles, which doubtless were a cause of great grief to the pastor, and may be hastened his sudden and untimely death at the age of fifty-six years. He was a person whose piety, integrity, learning, and ability none can question.

The next ten years were evidently the darkest days in the history of the church. The depreciation of the currency had made the people poor, and according to the writings of Rev. Mr. Kelly, "this town contained more infidels than any other town in the state, who gave themselves up to reproaching the saints and blaspheming the name of the Saviour."

By infidels he evidently referred to all the followers of the Methodist, the Baptist, or the Universalist preachers who had visited the town. He says, "The goodly number of sober people of the Orthodox faith were in trouble, longing to have a minister to speak the word of truth, and to break the bread of life to them," and that "they sometimes had preaching, but they had not the courage to give any man a call for four years." In 1786 they were obliged to insert in the warrant for town meeting an exemption from paying a minister tax to all those who in other years had been freed by a vote of the town.

September 11, 1786, a call was extended to Mr. Tillison Howe from the Church of Christ at Dartmouth College. He accepted the terms and preached several months in town and united with the church here, but the people judged him as "morally unsuitable" and withdrew the call.

October 11, 1787, Mr. Joshua Langdon was called, but declined the invitation on account "of the small salary, and open infidels." Mr. Jacob Cram was called the next June, but he was invited elsewhere at a larger salary. February 19, 1789, Reverend John Wilbur was invited, but would not accept the situation. Rev'd Abishai Allen was asked to become their pastor, but later both parties were willing to relinquish the call.

These men were all graduates from either Dartmouth or Harvard Colleges, and were eminently fitted for the duties of the ministry, but the prospects for a living were so meagre that they gave principally that reason for declining to enter the work.

The salary offered was $200 in money annually, the use of the parsonage, two cows and six sheep.

The three following years the people could not get a vote to raise one cent for maintaining a minister, as the agitation for the repeal of the law which recognized only the Orthodox sect, in 1791, shook New Hampshire from seaboard to mountain.

Early in 1792 a subscription was taken for the object of hiring a minister, and this measure opened the way for a unanimous vote of the town to call John Kelly, A. M., of Amesbury Mass., a graduate of Dartmouth College, and a student of Theology under that eminent scholar and divine, Rev. Moses Hemmenway D. D., of Wells, Me.

Mr. Kelly said, "he feared neither poverty or the infidels of Hampstead, and that his death, if not his life, might be the salvation of this people." He was ordained Dec. 5, 1792. His teacher Dr. Hemmenway preached the ordination sermon from Philippians, third chapter, sixth verse: "Count all things as lost, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord."

That Mr. Kelly led a busy and eventful life, cannot be doubted as we read in his Autobiography, of his preaching three thousand written sermons, and many unwritten ones, attending five hundred and three funerals in town, and half as many more in other parishes, uniting nearly two thousand persons in marriage, attending thirty ordaining or other councils, publishing twenty sermons, discourses or reports, taking an active part in the various Bible, tract, missionary or educational societies of New Hampshire, contributing various articles to the newspapers, teaching the youth abundantly, aiding with his voice in the service of song, uniting one hundred and sixty-eight persons to the fellowship of the church, burying or dismissing all except Deacon Job Kent of the members, and all but Jonathan C. Little and Mr. Hezekiah Ayer of the voters in town, when he was ordained, besides, as he says, "gaining a victory over the infidels and enemies of the church."

In 1793 the porch and steeple were added to the meeting house, mostly by subscription, and numerous repairs were made to the building, which was in a wasting and miserable condition.

A social library was formed, with a good number of valuable and interesting volumes, in 1796.

Through the efforts also of Rev. Mr. Kelly, the "Paul Revere" bell, which rings from the town hall tower, was secured and placed in position Dec. 19, 1809.

Rev. Mr. Kelly was the leader in the "Moral Society of Hampstead, Atkinson and Plaistow." This society was organized in Hampstead, Dec. 29, 1814, at the house of John True Esq., with John True, chairman, and Rev. Mr. Kelly, as secretary, and continued until about 1822.

The society was composed of a very select membership of seventy-eight men from the three towns, whose duties as members were to exert their influence to suppress immorality of every description, particularly Sabbath breaking, profanity, intemperance, falsehood and gaming, and to see that tythingmen of respectable character, in sufficient numbers be chosen and qualified to carry the law respecting the Christian Sabbath into effect, "and to openly and dividedly to discountenance profane language, and the improper and unnecessary use of ardent spirits at funerals and other occasions, and by their example and advice to encourage the rising generation to a constant attendance on the public worship of God, and in habits of sobriety, morality and industry."

Quarterly meetings were held in Hampstead at the homes of John True, Rev. Mr. Kelly, Dr. Jeremiah Spofford, Mr. Jesse Gordon, and Benjamin Garland.

Annual sermons were given alternately in the three towns in the meeting houses by Rev. Samuel Harris of Windham, Rev. Stephen Peabody of Atkinson, Rev. Edward L. Parker of Londonderry, Rev. John H. Church of Pelham, Rev. John Kelly, and others.

Their favorite texts were "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people;" and "One sinner destroyeth much good."

Similar societies were formed in Portsmouth, Exeter, Concord, Chester, Londonderry, Candia, and Salem in New Hampshire, and Bradford and Rowley in Massachusetts.

June 13, 1815, it was voted by the society to determine what vice was the most prevalent in Hampstead, and that the secretary consider ways of petitioning Congress to prevent the carrying and opening of the mail on the Lord's day.

September 14, 1818, it was voted "that Silas Tenney be a collector of a subscription to purchase tracts to be distributed among themselves, which was so much of a success that the next December at a meeting at the house of Josiah Grover in Atkinson, Hon. John Vose of that town and Rev. John Kelly were selected to purchase tracts for the public," "that it would be desirable to purchase them from the New England Tract Society of Andover, Massachusetts," and that "the tracts should all treat of the importance of the sanctification of the Sabbath, and should contain as many disasters happening on that day to those who have profaned the Sabbath as can well be collected from authentic records."

August 4, 1819, 7000 tracts were purchased for the $7.00 collected, and were distributed in each town according to the number of the inhabitants. And again in 1820 a great number of tracts were likewise obtained and used.

It was voted, March 13, 1821 "that it would be expedient for the members of the "Moral Society to refrain from the use of ardent spirits at their meetings."

We would hope that this action did not lead to the disbanding of the Society, but so few members attended the next meetings that early the next year they voted "to divide the subscription on hand to the Sabbath schools of the three towns."

The religious toleration bill, which had been pending in the New Hampshire Legislature for several years, through the weighty efforts of Ichabod Bartlett, the young and talented lawyer of Portsmouth, became a law in 1819, and all religious denominations in the State, by the enactment of that law, were given equal rights and privileges, in face of the declaration of the opposer, Mr. Hubbard, who said, "Pass this bill, and the temples now consecrated to the worship of the Saviour of the world will soon be deserted and forsaken."

By the passing of that law believers in the doctrines of the Methodists, the Baptists, and the Universalists in Hampstead, asked to have their minister tax for the support of Rev. Mr. Kelly abated, and they claimed from the town the right to have ministers of their own faith to occupy the meeting house a part of the time.

This seems to have been a sore trial to Rev. Mr. Kelly and his friends. The church records show repeated efforts to reclaim some delinquent members of the parish or family who had gone over to what was termed "false doctrines": and January 28, 1828, the church appointed twelve of its members "to visit every family in Hampstead to call the attention of the people to the consciences of their souls, and to pray with them from house to house." "Deacon John Emerson and Jacob Irving to begin at Enoch Tewksbury's, including all of Kent's farm, Mr. Davis', Mrs. Stevens', and Mr. Bartlett's families." "Deacon Jonathan Kent and Thomas K. Little beginning at Nathaniel Heath's and ending at Mr. Knight's, on the Harriman farm." "Mr. Jesse Davis and Lyman Worthen to begin at Lieut. Poor's and end at John Currier's, including the Island." "Mr. Phineas Balch and Francis Sawyer to begin at the widow Brown's and come around to Jesse Davis', including James Brickett's." "Mr. Jonathan Brickett and David Little to take all of the 'Peak' and 'Handle,' so called."

For a period of eighty-three years from the incorporation of Hampstead the salary of the minister was assessed by the selectmen, and the town collector gathered the assessments and paid the money and delivered the wood to the minister.

After March 5, 1832, the Congregational Church and Society, for the first time, held their meetings and transacted their business without a town meeting, and separate from the affairs of the town, and soon made their plans to build their own church, where the present church now stands.

On leaving the old meeting house to occupy the new church, Oct. 13, 1837, Rev. Mr. Kelly preached the farewell sermon, from the second chapter of Philippians, second and third verses, his topic being, "Union and Communion of Saints," which he dedicated "to the inhabitants of the town of Hampstead, in grateful remembrance of the uniform respect and kindness shown to him for a long series of years."

He gave as a reason for leaving the old meeting house of the fathers, "that, like the Congregational Puritan Orthodox people of England, who first settled New England, you wish to have a place to worship God in peace, where you have no temptation to disturb others, nor be intruded on by them."

Mr. Kelly was twenty-nine years of age when he was ordained, and he spent forty-four years as an able minister and faithful friend to the people of Hampstead. He retired from the pastorate at the age of seventy-three years, and died in Hampstead at the age of eighty-five.

Rev. John M. C. Bartley was installed as pastor on the day of Mr. Kelly's dismissal, October 12, 1836. Rev. Dr. Daniel Dana, who was for fifty years pastor of the church in Newburyport, Mass., preached the installation sermon on "Ministerial Firmness," taking his text from the twentieth chapter of Acts and the twenty-fourth verse.

Rev. Mr. Bartley is remembered by many residents of Hampstead, who valued him during his labors of twenty-one years as an affectionate and warm-hearted friend, and as one whose precept and practice were sincere and courteous. Besides fulfilling his bounden duty to the church and to the society, and uniting one hundred and four persons to church membership, he took an active part in whatever would be of benefit to the town. He served sixteen years as superintendent of the public schools, and was instrumental in founding the Emerson High School, as a result of his intimate acquaintance and friendship with Benjamin Dudley Emerson, its benefactor, who was a member of this church under his pastorate.

January 2, 1860, about one year after he relinquished his labors in town, he was laid to rest, at the age of sixty-one years, in the pleasant cemetery at Kittery Point, Maine, where a granite monument marks his grave.

And now we come to the present times, or to the last forty-three years of the history of the church. We come to the pastorates of Reverends Mr. Pratt, Bullard, Watson and Gardner, and the present pastor, Rev. Walter H. Woodsum.

Rev. Mr. Bullard died four years ago, at the ripe age of eighty-eight years. His remains rest in the family burial lot in the beautiful Laurel Hill Cemetery at Fitchburg, Massachusetts.

It is not always well to say much of the living. The work of the several pastors and members of the church and society have all been recorded on the church records or impressed on memory's page.

The past few months it has been our privilege to make an exhaustive study of those records, and the results obtained from the study and from personal research of each individual member will, we trust, be published in a "Memorial of the Church."

The church books record a list of 775 persons who have been admitted to the fellowship of the church, 272 males and 503 females. Nearly 1100 children have received the ordinance of baptism.

Among the members there have been twenty-two ordained ministers. Eleven members have adopted the profession of medicine and five have become lawyers. Fifty-six men have been graduated from some college, and twenty-eight ladies have graduated or attended some college, seminary, normal school, or higher institution of learning. Ninety-seven or more members have been teachers in the public schools of the country, and a goodly number of the teachers have occupied prominent positions. Forty-four members have received diplomas from our High school, and forty-three others have been students there and have nearly or quite completed the prescribed course of study.

The Colonial and Revolutionary wars and the State militia have been represented by one general, two colonels, three lieutenant-colonels, five captains, four majors, three lieutenants, one chaplain, and nine private soldiers. Eleven have served in the civil war, and one member was enlisted as a marine in the Spanish-American war.

Fifty-eight members have served as selectmen in town, and several other members in other towns. Five members have represented the town in the State Legislature, and the various minor town offices have been often filled from the church ranks.

The present membership of the church numbers one hundred and fifty-three, thirty-six males and one hundred and seventeen females, of whom thirty-seven descend directly from the original sixty-eight members. Nine members are descended directly from Richard Hazen, fourteen from Deacon Daniel Little, four from James and Jane Mills. Several others of the present zealous church workers can trace their noblest blood from the founders of the church.

We find that a majority of the members have been faithful to the church covenant and faithful to their Christian obligations, and entirely worthy of the honors which have been bestowed upon them. Also,

“We find 'tis true there's blood that's blue
That in their veins was flowing,
And then we find some other kind,
O'er which we do no crowing.”

As we continue our research to the village cemetery, we are reminded that,— “There is a reaper whose name is Death,

And with his sickle keen
He reaps the bearded grain at a breath,
And the flowers that grow between.”

There rest the remains of the two earliest pastors, who labored faithfully for the church and town people for eighty-four years, and at least three hundred members of the church, whose lives were characterized by the qualities of true citizenship.

Of the original sixty-eight members, fifty-six or more were buried in town. A goodly number of the deceased members reached the age of seventy years, but we find many of the tiny graves of the children there whose names are on our list of baptisms.

We stand by the tomb that covers the grave of Rev. Henry True, and notice the variety of monuments and other stones, from Nature's simplest boulder to the exquisitely carved granite tablet that marks the family lot. We see the humble monument made of wood, around which the Grand Army of the Republic loyally gather and pay tribute to the memory of their deceased comrades.

But should it seem unbefitting that in the cemetery we find no special tablet inscribed to the memory of the founders of the Congregational Church?

It has been said of one of the world's greatest architects, Sir Christopher Wren, who designed St. Paul's Cathedral and eighty-seven churches, besides hospitals, palaces and monuments in London, England, and who died two hundred years ago, at the age of ninety-one years, that when it was asked concerning him, if he had no monument, the reply was given, "Look around thee: Saint Paul's Cathedral is Sir Christopher's monument: he needs no other."

Would you contemplate the monument to the founders of the Congregational Church in Hampstead, that will stand when many another structure will have crumbled into dust, builded by those noble men and women "whose outward mould was hardship and whose inward bliss was piety"?—"Look around thee!" Go first to the old meeting-house, the early shrine where the pioneer worshippers truly went up to their Jerusalem, upon the level crest of a solid ledge, typical of Zion's foundation! Go to that ancient structure, which has stood more than a century and a half, defiant to storm or decay! There they organized and constructed the Congregational Church, and there they subscribed their names to the covenant; there they laid the foundation of an everlasting monument, whose "pillars are as of lily work."

The Puritan faith which they planted in Hampstead is their monument. They need no other! That faith has been cherished through the long vista of the changing years of progress by five generations of members. With industry in their labors, with perseverance and fidelity in all good works, with love, honesty and honor in their hearts, and with loyalty to their God and to the established forms of worship, the members have, through education and intelligence, builded higher and higher a monument to Hampstead, the Congregational Church, which will stand to glorify posterity and to remain against the inroads of time, a fitting concomitant to the dear old meeting-house.

And while this great world of ours speeds forever on its course, freighted with human joys and sorrows, hopes, aspirations, successes and disappointments, may the present and future members of the Congregational Church and Society deeply feel that it is better to transmit than to inherit a good record of their works.

May they "hold fast to their Puritan heritage," and also may they let the free light of the age,—

"Its life, its hope, and its sweetness add
To the sterner faith the fathers had."

The double male quartette—first tenors, Forrest E. Merrill, Lowell M. Clark; second tenors, William H. Davis, John S. Corson; first basses, C. Park Pressey, Albion D. Emerson; second basses, Eugene L. Spinney, H. Clinton Davis—sang "While the Years are Rolling On," which was followed by reminiscent remarks by Rev. Myron P. Dickey, pastor of the Congregational Church at Milton, N. H., and first preceptor of Hampstead High School.

Mr. Chairman and Friends:—

They have a custom in Congress to give leave to print (in the Congressional record) certain speeches for which there is not time for their delivery. I should be inclined at this late hour to ask that privilege if I had any speech to print: not having any prepared speech, I must needs deliver my remarks to find out what they are.

There used to be an eccentric character in my native town of Derry, who insisted that a minister did not need time to study during the week in order to preach Sundays if he preached the truth. "The truth is easy" he said, "it takes study to preach lies." I have not found it so. Rather has it seemed to me easy for folks to speak and believe things that are untrue and hard to get at the whole truth.

In my remarks I shall try not to speak untruth, but tell a few of the things which came under my observation in the years of my residence here, 1876 to 1879, and in especial reference to the church in its connection with the High school and its pupils.

I always feels somewhat aged when I come to Hampstead, and to-day I feel that I must be very old, for of the eight pastors this church has had in the one hundred and fifty years of its history, I have had some personal acquaintance with all but the first three, and I almost feel that I have a little acquaintance with the very first pastor, Parson True, since today I sat at the table with his great grandson Henry True, the direct lineal descendant of the Rev. Henry True.

When I was a boy, Pastor Pratt would occasionally exchange with the pastor of my home church in Derry, and I always was pleased to see a new face in the pulpit and wonder if the boys now feel as I did.

The pastor of this church when I came to Hampstead, in 1875, was Rev. E. W. Bullard and as there seems to be no one here to speak for him today, I wish to render to his memory my hearty tribute.

Mr. Bullard was somewhat advanced in years and not in the best of health during his pastorate here. His pastorate was the shortest in the history of the church, and the additions to the membership were not many. But my estimate of Mr. Bullard is that he was a fine Christian gentleman, an able preacher, and faithful pastor. He was one of the finest looking men I ever knew. I remember hearing him tell of a lady who sat in the choir behind him where he once preached (it was not so common then for the choir to be behind the pulpit as now), and this lady remarked after the service, "How delighted I've been with it all." Mr. Bullard was curious to know what it was that had made so favorable an impression, and asked what part of the sermon she liked so well. "Oh," she replied, "I didn't hear any part of the sermon, couldn't even tell the text, I was so taken with admiring your beautiful white locks." (Mr. Bullard did not like choirs back of his pulpit.)

Mrs. Bullard was equally delightful with Mr. Bullard, and I think one daughter resided at home. Perhaps they all were at their best in the home circle, and any who enjoyed their hospitality will always cherish it.

Mr. Bullard took great interest in the High school in its first beginnings, and I greatly appreciated his personal kindness and council. Such ministers as Mr. Bullard may not bring out as many new converts as some, but one wonders if any one could make converts, if there were not such fine examples of Christian manhood.

It used to be a common remark that Mr. Bullard sowed seed, the reaping of which was gathered by those who succeeded him.

The coming of Rev. Albert Watson marked a new era in the history of the church. At his coming the membership had not materially increased. Mr. Watson has himself given the account of the revival spirit which manifested itself so markedly in the spring of his first year's pastorate.

That Sunday night manifestation of which he has spoken was a complete surprise to me. The interest from the first was very deep among the pupils of the High school. Mattie Irving was the first to be called to heaven. Hattie Hoyt, Orrie Belle Little, Charles Garland, Sarah Sagar, and many others made their Christian committal, and a different atmosphere, serious, but wholesome and joyous, pervaded the school room, and all about the school premises. For a time a weekly prayer meeting was held at the school.

From that time on through my principalship, the school was decidedly Christian. This revival spirit continued in church and school and doubled the church membership. The prayer meetings especially were of great power.

I recall the night when Joseph Brown made his first attempt to speak in meeting. The tense muscle as he drew himself to his feet, his broken utterance, the deep earnestness which showed on every feature. Some of the Christian people of that time, now gone to their reward, who impressed their ideas on me, are Dea. Sanborn, Jacob Irving, Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Brickett, Mrs. Nelson Ordway, Mrs. Pike, Henry Clarke and many others. These people all had their faults and imperfections, as do all, but in the memory of them, it is their Christian spirit, their sincerity, and devotion to Christ and the church, that have made their names to abide.

In closing I must not fail to express my personal interest in this church. For several years my name was enrolled on its roll of membership. Here my wife made public confession of her Christian faith, and here our first born was baptized into the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

I have rejoiced in all your prosperity in these recent years. I am glad to join with you today in this celebration, and I pray the future may be even richer than the past in the nurture and perfecting of Christian souls for the eternal habitations."

Prof. Edward E. Bradley of Lincoln, Mass., late teacher of the High school was unable to be present to respond to the part assigned to him.

Prof. Forrest E. Merrill occupied a few minutes in reviewing the school work as connected with the church during the fifteen years in which he had been teacher.

Miss Abbie F. Chandler, a daughter of Hampstead, sang in a pleasing way the solo, "The Gates of the West." In response to the number, "Reminiscences by past members," Miss Fannie B. Williams sent a cordial letter of greeting to the church from the field of her missionary labors in Oklahoma.

Rev. Albert P. Watson, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Bedford, N. H., was present, and spoke as follows:—

"To speak successfully on reminiscences the one thing absolutely essential is a long and varied experience from which, as a storehouse, memory can draw at will. This I do not possess. The usual introductory remark, "when I was a boy," carries very little weight in this instance, for I seem hardly out of boyhood yet. Any of the circumstances and conditions of former years that I might recall are more familiar to you, than to myself, accordingly I shall not attempt to enlighten you; but shall simply endeavor to pay a very willing tribute to this, the church home of my childhood.

I united with this church at the age of twelve. Three years later I left home to attend school and have not been here since except on brief occasional visits. Although my actual personal fellowship here was so brief, yet I feel that to this church I owe a debt greater than words can tell. It was here that I first felt the power of a Christian faith, and made public confession of the same. Here, by the grace of God, was laid the foundation of a Christian character. It was from the Christian people of this place that I received the kindly sympathy, the words of encouragement, the patience, forbearance and charitable consideration which are of such measureless worth to the young Christian. How much all this has been to me through the intervening years I cannot tell.

The worth of this church, like the worth of any other, has not been wholly due to the clergy. A good deal has been said this afternoon in praise of the noble men of God who have labored here as Christian ministers. I am in hearty sympathy with every word that has been said. But they are not the only ones deserving of our grateful appreciation. I am glad of this opportunity of paying tribute to one whose permanent influence over my life has been greater than she knew. I refer to my first Sunday school teacher, Mrs. Pike. She was my teacher nearly all the time I was in this school. I know we caused her a great deal of trouble and anxiety, but she was always patient and kind. I cannot remember much that she ever said, but I do remember that somehow, through her consecrated service, I learned that God is Love, and that He loves to pity and to save His sinful, erring child. She has now gone home to her reward, but I'm sure she has left with every one of her boys, as she used to call us, a sweet, beautiful, inspiring, and immortal memory, that we shall ever cherish.

The Christian church has not yet done its work. The brightest days for this and every household of faith are yet to come. The eternal living truth of God does not yet permeate humanity. The abundant life is not yet every man's possession. And it is the highest glory of the Christian church to bring close to the human heart the truth of God, that all, old and young, rich and poor, from the least men to the greatest, may know Him, and in that knowledge live.

Henry C. Ordway, of Winchester, Mass., was listened to with close attention. His remarks were:—

“The kind invitation to join with you in this celebration is appreciated. I am glad to be here and take part in the birthday festivities of the old church.

Hampstead was my birthplace and for many years my home. For nearly a generation, I have been much away. As my visits to Hampstead became infrequent, I was enabled to keep in touch with old friends as we came together here on Sunday. Their cordial welcome and kindly greeting always given to me are pleasant memories of those years.

Your pastor has asked me to say something on this subject—'Personal reminiscences, and anything else you like.' I hope I may be able to stick to the text.

I have always felt when one indulged in reminiscences on such an occasion as this that it implied great age. It is, therefore, a genuine satisfaction for me to state that I can give no account of what happened under Parsons True and Kelly.

Still, candor compels me to admit that I was a contemporary of Rev. Mr. Bartley, though at the time of his dismissal I was only one year old. This will account for my passing lightly over his administration.

I well remember the long ride to church. From the old Watts' and Select Hymns the minister would read :

"Lord, in the morning Thou shalt hear
My voice ascending high,
To Thee will I direct my prayer,
To Thee lift up mine eye."

Then, as the singing began, right about face turned the congregation. For in those days, the organ and the singers were in the gallery, and the reward of the choir was to behold the faces of the people.

'Twas a good old custom and had much of merit. The minister, freed from the gaze of every eye, relaxed ; the people changed their positions, saw who were behind them, and got thoroughly waked up. Pastor and people were refreshed and prepared for the sermon.

Then, as now, the morning service was followed by the Sunday School. William Davis, now Deacon Davis, was one of my teachers. With another boy, I frequently gathered in the pennies, passing my cap from pew to pew. In addition to the Sunday School lesson, we learned Bible verses. Whether you follow our example in this respect I do not know, but I am credibly informed that the ancient custom of taking up a collection is still observed.

After Sunday School we youngsters ate our lunch, which was a great feature of the child's Sunday forty years ago, for the afternoon services soon began, and dinner was still far away.

Mr. Pratt was the minister of my childhood days. It was the custom then to hold prayer meetings occasionally in different parts of the town. On Sunday, the notice might be given that next Tuesday evening there would be a prayer meeting at the school house in District No. 4, at half-past seven, and there the neighbors would gather, taking their lamps with them.

Of the many excellent things said by Mr. Pratt in this church, what I am about to relate made the greatest impression on my young mind. He then lived at the village in the brick house now owned by Deacon Pressey. It sometimes happened that his good helpmeet, burdened with the cares of the household and the preparation of the children, was not always in readiness Sunday mornings when the minister brought the horse to the door. The resulting rush and hurry were disquieting to one who wished to be "In the spirit on the Lord's day."

One morning he entered the pulpit promptly, and, flushed with victory won, told us what he had done, and what other men might do. It was this: "Instead of waiting about, finding fault and doing nothing, Sunday mornings, take hold and help!" Very simple, wasn't it? But to me it was worth more than a bushel of sermons.

Those were the days of Deacon Chase and Deacon Sanborn. A tall, spare man was the senior deacon, of tireless energy, faithful in the discharge of his duties, working always to the limit of his strength and of the daylight hours. After the labors of the week, he came to the house of God, and found the rest which his soul and body alike craved. I count it no sin for a man to sleep in meeting, if only he is graceful about it, nodding in the right direction and at the right time. But I shall never forget the sharp profile of my great uncle's face as I gazed across to his pew the hot summer afternoons. He looked neither forward nor backward, but reverently upward, and his head, bobbing back and forth, was so delicately poised, I felt that Providence alone prevented the catastrophe that seemed imminent.

Many of you will remember Deacon Sanborn and recall his genial smile and warm hand-grasp. He, too, has done his work and gone to his reward. Associated together for many years, these two men, independent and straightforward, made their impress on the life of the church and the community, doing their duty as they saw it. To-day we honor their memory.

You who are older miss many whose presence on Sunday at that time identified them with this place. The once familiar faces of Deacon Kent, Isaac Smith, John Ordway, Amos Buck, Kimball Brickett, John Drew and Nathan Johnson have long since passed from view.

Then one after another, Frederick Pike, Mrs. Nabby K. Brickett, Oliver Putnam, and many more joined the silent majority. Of those who have more recently entered into the eternal home, I will not speak. The memory of their lives is with us. Their kindly deeds and helpful influence still remain.

Mr. Pratt was followed by Mr. Bullard, a mature and scholarly man, fond of books and fond of nature. He worked not alone in the study, but in the garden and field. Deacon Sanborn said with satisfaction, "Mr. Bullard is a good farmer, he is improving the parsonage property."

The home life of the Bullard family was delightful, and its uplifting, refining influence was a benediction to all whom it reached.

In 1876, after one hundred years of independence, we voluntarily came again under the British yoke, and called Rev. Mr. Watson to come and rule over us. Had England cared for her colonies as well as Mr. Watson cared for the people under his charge, there would have been no wrongs to right, no Declaration of Independence. Not only was Mr. Watson a worker along distinctly religious lines, but he took a deep interest in everything that might stimulate and instruct the people of the town. The Y. M. C. A., with its associate membership open to all, was helpful. The lectures and concerts, the Jubilee singers, were due to his faith and push. It was in Mr. Watson's pastorate that I became a member of this church. The late Mrs. William Fellows joined at the same time.

Of Mr. Gardner I ought not to speak. It would be carrying coals to Newcastle, for you all know better than I what he has accomplished here. However, it may not be amiss for me to say that his success in making all hands march the quickstep the past few years seems rather remarkable.

The outside world has begun to wonder what Hampstead will do next. Only five years ago yonder library building was dedicated. We gathered in this house, proud to welcome to his native town the most distinguished of Hampstead's sons, the eminent jurist, the Christian gentleman, Isaac W. Smith. Three years ago, hundreds of her sons and daughters came back to Hampstead. The civic pride of her citizens had arrayed the mother town in best attire. On the spot where, fifty years before, the one hundredth anniversary had been observed, in the grove by the pond, fitting exercises crowned the third half century of the town's corporate existence. The story of the long life was ably told by Miss Noyes, and has been preserved for us in her "Memorial History of Hampstead."

And this same daughter of Hampstead, loyal, not alone to the interests of the town, but thoughtful of the church as well, has carefully studied its past, and put in permanent form the results of her painstaking research. It is most fortunate for the church that the data relating to its history have been so gathered and preserved. Our gratitude and appreciation go out to Miss Noyes for her labor of love.

Two years pass. The tireless energy of Mr. Gardner, seconded by the lightning and the ladies, works a transformation scene. Within a twelvemonth, the church interior assumes its present-attractive and finished appearance. The new organ is welcomed to the front of the church, and is dedicated with appropriate ceremony. In early fall of last year, reluctant farewells are said to Mr. Gardner, and as the blossoms of spring time show once more, Mr. Woodsum is installed.

To-day, at the bidding of the old church, we come again to Hampstead. For one hundred and fifty years, she has stood for those things which are honest and of good report. Three years younger than the town, she has grown with and labored for its welfare. Enriched by the experiences of the past, conserving that which is good, let her be receptive of all that is inspiring and helpful in the life of to-day. Old in years, she is young in all that tends for effective effort. She rejoices in what has been accomplished, but her work lies ever before her. The conflict between right and wrong is always going on. Let her train the boys and girls to battle for the right, to have high ideals, to become good citizens.

This church is beautiful for situation; it is unrivalled in equipment; it is out of debt. It is strong in the affections of its members. Its pastor comes to his duties full of courage and eager to serve. Cheered by the inspiration of the past, rejoicing in the abounding life of the present, the old church looks forward to a future great with promise.

Rev. Kimball Kent Clark, pastor of the M. E. Church at Fitzwilliam, N. H., recalled his boyhood days in Hampstead, as follows:—

“It is a great pleasure for me to stand here to-day and speak a few words. The other day, when I was in Keene, I had the good fortune to meet Judge Holmes of that city. He said to me, “Young man, how do you like the ministry?” I said, “Very much.” “Well,” said he, “Ministers’ sermons and lawyers’ pleas ought never to be more than one-half hour long and leaning towards mercy at that.”

It would seem to me, my friends, that there could be no place as dear to us as the town in which we spend our childhood years. Around this town, therefore, cluster for me sacred memories and tender associations. It was in the public schools of this town that I received my early education. How well do I remember the years spent in the High school under Prof. F. E. Merrill. The Saturday morning remarks, what a source of blessing in after life! My life may be spared many years, but I shall not forget his kindness and timely words of advice. Hampstead never had a better man than Prof. Merrill. It has not been my pleasure to know but two of the pastors of the church, Rev. Albert Watson and Rev. Rufus P. Gardner. I have the pleasure of an acquaintance with Rev. Mr. Pratt, but did not live under his ministrations.

How well do I remember Mr. Watson. One day in particular, as I was trudging along the street, he came along in his sleigh and said, “Lad, won’t you have a ride?” I was pleased to ride, and what a ride we did have! If you remember about Mr. Watson's horse, you know how swift he could travel. I suppose he has forgotten the incident, and may be wondering even this moment when he took me to ride. However, he took me to my home, and made a kindly call, and from that day I knew he was my friend, and I certainly was his. Well do I remember when he was about to leave Hampstead that I said to him, "I shall never think as much of another minister as I have of you." "Oh, yes you will," said he. Mr. Watson understood human nature better than I did.

At my charge in East Deering, one of the members of my church, and my next door neighbor, said to me when I left there, "We shall never like another minister as we have liked you." I said, "Yes, you will, I'm sure," and recently I hear that my neighbor has just the same feeling towards the new minister. I am glad it is so, glad for my friend, glad for the new minister, and glad for the church.

Mr. Watson went away and Mr. Gardner came, and to know him was to love him. I did not forget the old pastor, but I learned to honor and respect the new one. There sprang up a peculiar relation between us, that of the pastor with the young man whom he had received into the church. I am sure no man ever endeavored to benefit the young people more than Mr. Gardner.

The Hampstead Congregational Church has had a grand history in the past. The pastors have been men of God. Their lives have been more than their sermons. You have had noble men and women, also, in your midst. Many that were here a short time since are gone. They have heard the words, "Come up higher." Their work on earth is done. They have entered into rest, but their lives are a power still for good. You have to-day men and women who are carrying on the work loyally for Christ and His church. I believe that the best work of the Hampstead church has not been done. Fair and as grand as her history has been in the past, there is a brighter history in the future.

My parting thought is this: Work for the church, not because it is your church, not so much that as because it represents the work of Jesus Christ in this world, and you desire a part in that work, remembering that success depends on God alone. "Man may come and man may go, but I go on forever." Thus sings the mountain brook as it journeys down the side of the mountain. So may we learn the great lesson that we are but instruments in the hands of God. May we, knowing this, work earnestly for the upbuilding of His kingdom, which shall one day come to its full fruition, and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and the Christ."

The singing of "Jerusalem, the Golden," by the quartette—Mrs. Forrest E. Merrill, soprano; Miss Mary G. Davis, alto; Prof. Forrest E. Merrill, tenor; Mr. H. Clinton Davis, bass—was much enjoyed by the audience.

"Greetings from the Mother Church, Plaistow and North Haverhill," was responded to by Rev. Joseph Kimball, pastor, and was as follows:—

When the settlers of Haverhill had extended a considerable distance to the north, there was reasonably a desire for a new parish, and in the autumn of 1730 the North Parish Church was organized.

Most of its members were from the town church of Haverhill. At length the settlers had extended farther northward, so that another church was desired, and after some twenty-two years the church of Hampstead was formed.

The membership was largely from the North Parish of Haverhill church, which, after the state line of New Hampshire and Massachusetts was established, had become the Congregational Church of Plaistow and the North Parish of Haverhill, Mass.

There appears to have been a number of quite intimate features of relationship between the parent and daughter churches. The first minister of the parent church, Rev. James Cushing, was from Salisbury, Mass., and he may have had some influence in causing that the first minister of the daughter church should be from that town.

The second minister at the parent church, Rev. Giles Merrill, also from Salisbury, is said to have studied for a time with Rev. Henry True, your first minister.

The next minister of your church was a near family relative of a prominently theological family of the parent church.

There continued to be an intimate relationship between the two churches, aided by the fact that some residents of the Hampstead parish were from the parent parish, as well as by the frequent exchange of pulpits that were enjoyed. Both communities also had various intimate relationships to Salisbury, Mass.

We are wont to look upon you as fortunate in situation, upon the sides of the north, free from mar by distractions of city pastimes, fortunate in your long pastorates, fortunate in your present beautifully appointed church, fortunate in your new organ, and fortunate in the presence of a successful endowed school.

Please accept the cordial congratulations of the parent church, which, as the years have passed, has become rather an older sister. May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to you abundantly.

Hon. Lyman Dewey Stevens of Concord, N. H., spoke as follows in response to No. 15 of the programme, "Greetings from Friends":—

Brethren and Friends :—

Your programme has assigned to me the pleasant duty of bringing to the church the greetings of friends. Among that company I feel that I may properly claim a place, and the greetings I offer in their behalf are most cordial and heartfelt.

Here was the home of my ancestors, one of whom was a member of this church, and their remains now rest in the ancient cemetery of this town. My father, in his early boyhood, migrated from Hampstead, with the family of my grandfather, to the northern part of the state, there to spend the remainder of his life.

I should be destitute of filial affection and a due respect for my progenitors, did I not feel a deep interest in Hampstead, my ancestral home, and especially in its church, the corner-stone on which its advancement and growth rest.

On an occasion like this it is necessary to compare the past with the present, in order to get a correct and full understanding of the day we celebrate, and note carefully the changes which the lapse of years has wrought.

On whichever side we look it is our happiness to see a better husbandry, a higher standard of domestic life and comfort, a longer term of life and better health, by reason of improved sanitation: better schools, the establishment of public libraries, and a more general interest in popular education—in short, all the conditions of life have been characterized by such a vast improvement that the subject is not easy of comprehension.

The church has kept step in this grand march of progress. If we take a retrospect of the last one hundred and fifty years, their history informs us that the original home, cold, uncomfortable, possessing none of the appointments of a modern house of worship, and bearing no resemblance to the gate of heaven, except in the sublime faith, the undoubting trust and seal of the worshippers who gathered there.

To-day we find this same church installed in this beautiful and commodious edifice, with its sweet-toned organ and trained choir, and appointments for comfort. We rejoice and are happy over its increase of numbers and the noble work and blessed influence it has contributed to make possible the Hampstead of to-day.

All friends of this church give thanks to God as they contemplate the blessings which his gracious hand has bestowed upon it, while they offer congratulations and pray for its continued growth and enlarged usefulness.

This joyous day is not a celebration of the conclusion of a noble Christian work, but rather to mark and emphasize its progress, and to gather inspiration from the consideration of its past to achieve greater work and more extensive usefulness in the years to come.

It is the ardent desire of all friends of this church who have assembled here to congratulate its members and to rejoice in the prosperity of its past, that when those who shall participate in the three hundredth anniversary of its formation, they shall behold a progress far greater, and a standard of piety and Christian service far higher than the present, gratifying as that surely is.

I can close in no better way than by quoting this sentiment, which is worthy to be held in perpetual remembrance: "To preserve the institutions of our holy religion is a duty which we owe to ourselves who enjoy them, to our pious ancestors who transmitted them down, and to our posterity who will require at our hands these, the noblest gift and the best birthright of mankind."

SONG

Written for the occasion by James H. Taylor.

Tune, "Marching Through Georgia."

Come, ye happy people, come, and let your voices ring
Loud in jubilation as a praise offering ;
Sing in faith and courage as our fathers used to sing—
Filled with a hope everlasting.

CHORUS.

Rejoice, be glad this is our natal day,
Our friends are here to swell the cheerful lay,
Coming from the hills and valleys, many miles away,—
Back to the old church in Hampstead.

Sing of how the joy of life outweighs the grief and tears ;
Sing of all the triumph that on memory's page appears ;
Sing our church's record, born of three times fifty years ;
Who would forbid us of praising ?

CHORUS—

Dear familiar faces once again we welcome here—
Pastors we have parted with in sorrowing sincere—
Voices long unheard we now with deepest pleasure hear.
This is a happy occasion.

CHORUS—

Builed like the church of old, upon the solid rock,
Riven by the tempest oft, yet rising from the shock ;
Still the godly shelter of a persevering flock—
Ever the way mark to Glory.

CHORUS—

Hampstead should for character be strongly underlined.
 Nowhere else are people raised so generally kind.
 No place where the pastors stay so long you'd ever find
 If you should search the world over.

CHORUS—

Love and loyalty to God: Oh, may these never cease.
 Goodwill unto all mankind, here let it not decrease
 Till the glory-morning ushers in the day of peace,
 Day of a righteous dominion.

FINAL CHORUS.

All praise to Him who saw the church begun—
 Who viewed the work through many seasons run;
 Grant that all may hear some day the Saviour's glad "Well done,"
 Welcoming us home to Glory.

The audience room and kitchen of the vestry which had been draped with crepe paper of delicate tints in artistic designs, served as a banquet hall, where three hundred invited guests repaired to enjoy a lunch and social hour, until the organ prelude, "Sunset Glow," at 7.30 o'clock, announced the opening of the evening entertainment. A large company filled the church. The singing of the anthem, "Praise ye the Lord," by the chorus, was followed by invocation, by Rev. George Hale Scott, pastor of the Congregational church, Atkinson.

By request, Miss Harriette E. Noyes read the following letter from Rev. George B. Spalding, D. D., pastor, First Presbyterian church, Syracuse, N. Y.

"To the Congregational Church, Hampstead, N. H.

Greeting:—It is a matter of great regret to me that I am unable to be present at the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Congregational Church at Hampstead.

This church, beyond all others, is precious to me, because of the three generations of my ancestors who were connected with it. My great-grandfather, Hezekiah Hutchens, and his wife, Anna Merrill, daughter of Deacon John Merrill, of Newbury, Mass., came to Hampstead about ten years after the organization of the church. Captain Hutchens, when a boy of seventeen years, was a soldier at the capture of Louisburg, June 17, 1745. He won his title of captain by active service in every Indian war from that date to the breaking out of the war of the Revolution.

Here, on the ground before the old church building, he mustered the largest company of soldiers that took part in the great battle at Bunker Hill on June 17th, and as captain of a New Hampshire company he was present at the not less famous battle which ended in the surrender of Burgoyne.

Within the walls of the old church, now your well preserved Town Hall, the old warrior worshipped until with reverent hand his fellow citizens and soldiers laid him away in the cemetery close by, where the pines above his own and wife's graves seem to whisper their ceaseless requiems.

Here in the old homestead, still known as the "Hutchens Tavern," was born my grandmother Patty, whose name as "Polly Hutchens" stands in the baptismal list of the church. I remember her as "grandma" all through my childhood years in her home in Montpelier, Vt. Her virtues of wisdom and large-hearted charity and clear-eyed faith were admired by a large circle of old people, but better to us younger ones were her virtues of constant cheerfulness and sweet laughter and ever-brooding love.

It is a supreme grace of heaven which makes old age lovable to children.

Here in the old church, or more probably in the old tavern, Thomas Reed of Uxbridge, Mass., made this "Polly" his wife. On the hillside now owned by Mr. Tristram Little they made their home. Here my mother was born a century ago. Here she began a growth which matured into a remarkable beauty of person and mingled sweetness and strength of character, and lofty ambition and faith which children and children's children recall with constant praise.

Before my grandfather, Thomas Reed, went from Hampstead to live at Montpelier, he performed a service for the old church which in my visits here, I regard with utmost pleasure and pride.

He was a carpenter and cabinet worker, and he it was who designed and built the porch and the graceful steeple of the meeting house,—the town hall of to-day.

Pardon me, if in my appreciation of my grandfather's work during his brief sojourn here in Hampstead, I look at this structure of his hands as a monument to his worthy memory, and breathe the prayer that by your preserving care and that of heaven, it may endure in its integrity and beauty through coming generations.

Dear friends of the old church, these fathers and mothers have bequeathed to you a noble heritage in their characters, sacrifices, their prayers, in their clear vision of the surpassing worth of spiritual things over the material.

These last, which we so unduly magnify, they held subordinate. They endured "seeing the invisible."

Let no generation of such ancestors in all their magnificent progress in earthly things forget or miss the heavenly realities for which these fathers and mothers so bravely struggled and which now they forever more possess.

Sincerely and cordially your friend,

GEORGE B. SPALDING.

The double male quartette sung "He knows it All," after which Rev. W. T. Bartley recited the "Poem of the Day," as follows:—

"No pompous deeds of heroes known to fame,
No fulsome eulogies to-day we frame,
But rather humbly thank the Father, God,
For faithful ones that beneath the sod

Repose; and with them those who still Abide, and do the Heavenly Father's will.
The world esteems the conquering warriors great,
And bows before the men of princely state;

Yet far above his name, in heaven's roll,
Is that of him who hath a noble soul.
"The short and simple annals of the poor"
In God's esteem will often times endure.

Till more pretentious records, carved on brass
Or sculptured stone, from recollection pass :
And when "the noiseless tenor of their way"
The faithful keep, nor from their duty stray,

They shall not be as flowers that blush unseen,
But after death their memory shall be green.
With honor deep we turn the backward page,
And with the past our chastened thoughts engage.

Those early saints who kindled heavenly light,
That whosoever would might walk aright
And happy-hearted tread the toilsome road.
Laborious life relieved of half its load.

These were the benefactors of the land :
Their names beside the patriots should stand
Who freed us from the cruel foreign yoke,
Or to the slave the great deliverance spoke.

If he who freed the body labored well,
Then he who freed the spirit from the spell
Of evil, better still performed his part,
His work unmatched by any human art

We honor them to-day, the men of old,
Who prayed that every name might be enrolled
Within the book of life, and praying, reared
A sanctuary fit for those who feared

"The Lord of earth and sky, and sealed the bond
That holds the Christian with affection foud
In that fraternal love and warm accord
Enjoyed by all that know and love the Lord.

We honor, too, the generations five
Who sacrificed, to keep the flame alive
Upon the sacred altar : all their fears,
Their toils laborious and their anxious tears,

Their contest with the evil one, their deeds
 That showed how Christ within supplied their needs,
 Their prayers at home, their virtues known to men,
 We kindle, and our hearts are warm again,

As retrospection brings their worth to light,
 And we acknowledge that their day was bright.
 A happy church at Hampstead long has stood,
 Harmonious, strong, and hospitable, good.

With goodness as a crowning grace of all,
 For that which pleases heaven cannot fall
 To utter ruin. Had celestial fire
 In flame this temple swathed from lofty spire

To stone beneath, or in titantic play
 Its solid timbers splintered in a day,
 Lamented havoc, still would He who keeps
 And cheers His people form those dreadful heaps,

Have helped once more the edifice to rise,
 And point another spire to the skies.
 Harmonious church, thy people well content
 With several pastors several years have spent.

And they who ministered have loved the spot
 And thanked the Father for their earthly lot,
 An honor both to shepherd and to sheep
 That loved each other with affection deep.

Nor looked for failings with too keen a gaze,
 But rather trained their kindly lips to praise.
 Could I those faithful shepherds call by name,
 And into lines poetic fitly frame,

The dissyllabic titles that you've known,
 As Kelly, Bartley, Gardner and your own,
 From Bath, imported Woodsum, and to that Should add a Watson, and a genial Pratt.

Brief monosyllables, of sort unique
Among its rivals, man of spirit meek ;
And heroes of the faith in earlier days,
Your voice would blend with mine in words of praise.

If faults they had, the faults were well concealed,
And many virtues to the eye revealed.
A part have passed from earth, and some remain,
Have you forgotten him whose heart and brain

Combined their efforts, or the cordial hold
Of loving hand, or ringing voice that rolled
From pulpit up to organ ? He was known
All trials to lament except his own.

Another, rich in sparkling mother wit,
Holds honored record here. How oft he hit
The point with language choice, or stirred
The drowsy listener with a mirthful word.

Nor lacks he skill in parliamentary law,
And outlines methods fit without a flaw.
On him who now the sacred office fills
We seek the blessing of the Lord who wills

That all men holy be. The spirit's might Explaining things divine, and making bright
The shaded life, in him abideth strong,
Abides in all that after goodness long.

Alone in power the church has striven apace,
Nor yet been called to show forgiving grace
To proselyting sects who fain would found
Another church upon pre-empted ground.

Pray why this peace ? This undisturbed career ?
A twin response I'll whisper in your ear.
The first, surrounding churches have been kind ;
The second, never could their eyes be blind

To life and consecrated vigor lent
To God by earnest souls obedient.
The field was bravely fortified ; the shot
At Satan's ramparts was seemly hot,

The captain and the warriors stood their ground,
And needless interruption never found.
The world unites to glorify the wise,
And views inventions with astonished eyes ;

It praises him who journeys towards the pole,
And steers 'mid icebergs with courageous soul,
Reveres the name of him who braved the worst,
To penetrate the Afric jungle first.

Yet equal honors, and as fine a prize,
And exaltation to the very skies
Await the foe of sin, the friend of man,
Who aids the soul of God's appointed plan.

The Christian church's dignity and worth
Are unsurpassed to any on the earth.
The worth and dignity of those who teach
A higher life, and by example preach.

There's none but God their value can appraise,
Enduring work is theirs, and richly pays.
May God perpetuate these altar fires,
And may the sons inherit from their sires

The love of all things good, and may they strive
To keep a true religion here alive,
And let thy blessings on the people rest,
O, Father. Thus we voice our heart's request.

The solo by Mrs. Albert H. Little, "The Land of Home," was well enjoyed, and although the people had listened to address after address for more than five hours in the afternoon, they proved their appreciation by their rapt attention to the discourse from the text, "Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it," by Rev. Burton W. Lockhart, D. D., pastor of the Franklin Congregational Church, Manchester.

The anthem by the chorus. "Ye that stand in the House of the Lord," a short prayer, followed by the anniversary hymn, sang by the congregation, the benediction by the pastor, and the organist with her beautiful "Organ Postlude," closed the exercises of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the church in town, which will be remembered by its members and friends as one of the happiest days in the life of the church.

ANNIVERSARY HYMN.

Written for the occasion by James H. Taylor.

Tune, "Uxbridge."

Great God, from whose almighty hand
The centuries roll like grains of sand,
Thy power through varying scenes we see
Changeless in glorious majesty.

We praise Thee for our native land;
This hallowed ground on which we stand;
Thy care that watches year by year
The church that Thou hast planted here.

Loved preachers of Thy work and word
Have toiled within Thy vineyard, Lord;
Entreating men to turn and see
The Christ who died on Calvary.

New followers stand where old have stood,
A tribute to redeeming blood;
The same forgiving love to share,
One voice in praise, one heart in prayer.

Like as the branches to the vine
 May we subsist on food divine—
 Through Thy blest Bible, freely given,
 The light of earth, the guide to Heaven.

Thanks be to Thee for all the past,
 Protect, support us to the last,
 When we to earthly being lost,
 Shall join the everlasting host.
 Amen.

Letters were received as follows:—

METHUCHEN, NEW JERSEY,
 June 9, 1902.

REV. W. H. WOODSUM:

My Dear Sir:—Your letter is before me. While I would gladly be with you on July 2d, I have not the courage to undertake the journey. I am in good health, and lead an active life for a man of eighty years, but I do not like to leave my pleasant home to incur the fatigues of travel.

I was never a member of the church in Hampstead, but I used to attend the Sabbath meetings in the old meeting house (now the town hall), under the Rev. John Kelly's pastorate, and in the first new house, Rev. J. M. C. Bartley, pastor.

In 1849 I sailed for Valparaiso, Chile, where I resided about ten years, teaching. I became interested in religion, and united with the Congregational Church, Rev. David Trumbull, pastor, in 1852. Returning from Chile in 1859, I moved to Kingston, N. Y., and then to Methuchen in 1866, where I still reside.

I have all these years been in Sunday school work as teacher or superintendent. I have now an adult Bible class, and find great pleasure in the work. I rejoice in the prosperity of the church at Hampstead, and I am sure it has been a power for good in all these years.

I have had eight children. Four have passed on to the better land; four are doing good work in church and society. All were members of the church.

All or nearly all of those whom I knew in boyhood have gone, and the work which they were doing has fallen to other hands.

I trust you will have a grand time July 2d, and that it will be a prelude to a great spiritual awakening. These are not church reminiscences, but perhaps there may be a few remaining who will be interested to hear from an old resident who has not forgotten the home of his childhood.

I am very truly yours,

A. W. MARSHALL (See 424).

LINCOLN, MASS., June 19, 1902.

My Dear Mrs. Eastman:—

Your very kind remembrance of me with an invitation to attend the exercises celebrating the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Hampstead Church I appreciate very much. I should enjoy exceedingly attending the celebration, but I am intending to attend the Harvard Summer School of Theology in Cambridge from July 1st to 18th, and I am making so much effort to attend these lectures, in addition to carrying on my regular work, that I feel that I must forego the pleasure of going to Hampstead.

I hope most sincerely that the exercises will pass off successfully, and that the result of the celebration will be to endear the church yet more to those who love it, and to exalt it in the community.

With sincere regard to you and all who may remember me,

I remain, very truly yours,

EDW. E. BRADLEY (658).

“ELMHURST,” BROOKLINE, MASS.,

July 1st, 1902.

My Dear Mrs. Eastman:—

May the one hundred and fifty roses and one hundred and fifty carnations, and many other bright flowers, express to you and other members of the committee of arrangements the sincere and united interest and sympathy of my sisters, Mrs. Coaker, Mrs. Jackson, and Mrs. Hitchcock, with my own, on this festal day that you celebrate, and our mutual regret that we are unable to personally rejoice with the many who will gather at the historic church.

It is a glorious thing that, through all the changes of the one hundred and fifty years, that this ancient church has not changed except for the better.

My hope and prayer is that God's presence may continue to bless and ever maintain its high standard through this twentieth century.

With sincere and affectionate greetings,

ELLEN DANFORTH WHITE (421).

REV. WALTER H. WOODSUM :

Dear Brother :—I thank you for the invitation received from you, as chairman of the executive committee, to attend the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Hampstead Congregational Church. I thank you, also, for your invitation to speak on that occasion.

It would give both Mrs. Pressey and myself great and sincere pleasure to be present at that time, but it will be impossible to do so.

Let me say in behalf of both of us, that we remember the old home with a great deal of affection.

Those who have been away from Hampstead nearly all the time for twenty years, as we have, will of course think of the church as it was years ago, more than of it now. We remember very distinctly the days when we were in the Hampstead High School, and attended the various services of the church, and had some part in its different activities.

Mrs. Pressey played the organ for a long time, and I used to teach a class of boys, nearly of my own age, in the Sunday school. It was along in these days that the season of great revival of religious interest came to the church, in the early part of the ministry of the Rev. Albert Watson. It was then that a great many new names were added to the roll of membership, and new forces were added to the working power of the church.

The earnest, emphatic, sometimes severe, more often tender, words of Deacon Sanborn; the rapid, whole-hearted testimonies of Joseph Brown; the whole-souled, deep and helpful talks of Mr. Dickey, and the influence of many others, abide with us still.

Very many of those whose voices were heard in the meetings at that time have gone to their reward. Earnest, humble, yes, human and imperfect, too, they yet set in motion influences that will never cease.

Mr. Watson's clear and searching preaching, his business-like methods and his spiritual fervor, had a great and lasting effect, greater and more lasting than many, perhaps, who sat under his ministrations realize even yet.

Others will tell of the great work of the church during the past decade or two, and they will have many good things to relate. By and by those who are children now will speak to one another about the good work of the first decade of the twentieth century, for Hampstead church is very much alive, and its beneficent activities will be continued by new generations.

Very cordially yours,

EDWIN S. PRESSEY (518).

REV. W. H. WOODSUM, HAMPSTEAD, N. H.:

My Dear Sir:—Your esteemed favor of the 5th instant is at hand. I thank you for your kind invitation to be present at the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Congregational Church and to speak of "personal reminiscences."

Hampstead is the home of my boyhood, and the Congregational Church there is the birthplace of my Christian experience. Nearly two-thirds of my life has been spent in Hampstead as my home, hence I have a feeling of gratitude for what the Congregational Church there has accomplished for me spiritually.

I regret that I cannot be with you, but I wish you Godspeed, and congratulate you on the advent of this birthday.

Most cordially yours,

J. W. WATSON (651).

BURLINGTON, VT., June 13, 1902.

My Dear Mr. Woodsum:—

I thank you for your cordial invitation to be present and to give some personal reminiscences at the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Congregational Church in Hampstead.

I regret more than I can express that engagements here in connection with the meeting of the American Institute of Instruction, July 1, 2, and 3, make it impossible to leave Burlington at that time.

My happy twenty years in Hampstead will never be forgotten, and I count it among my life's choicest experiences that in 1855, at the age of sixteen, I became a member of the Hampstead church.

Five things in my life began beyond the limits of my memory, namely, attendance at singing school, day school, Sunday school, the weekly prayer meetings, and the church service. As soon as they came into my consciousness I loved them all, and the habits thus formed have been abiding. I now sing in our festal chorus, teach in the Sunday school and in the Burlington High school, and am rarely absent from church or prayer meeting.

Kind, gentle Mrs. Deacon Eastman was my first Sunday school teacher. In suitable weather on Thursday evenings I took my father's hand, and, like Inlus and Aeneas, we walked with "unequal steps" to the home of either Deacon Kent, Deacon Eastman, or Deacon Emerson, for the weekly prayer meeting, in which the only part I took was in the singing. Even at that early age the meetings were interesting to me.

I am happy to know that you will have present with you a representative in my son, Rev. W. T. Bartley of Salem.

Mrs. Bartley, whose grandfather was once a member of your church, and my daughter Helen, join with me in best wishes for the prosperity of the church and the success of the celebration.

They, with myself, have delightful memories of the late celebration of the settlement of the town, which we were happy to attend.

JOSEPH DANA BARTLEY (426).

PLYMPTON, MASS., June 24, 1902.

Dear Mrs. Eastman :—

Mr. Perot unites with me in thanking the committee for the invitations to be present at the celebration of the Hampstead church.

It would be a very enjoyable occasion for us to be with you at that time, but circumstances forbid it. But our best wishes go to you, and hope the occasion will be a grand success and an anniversary long to be remembered.

I have the most pleasant recollections of the dear old church of my younger years in Hampstead, especially the teachers of my class in the Sunday school.

May God bless and prosper you.

“We may build more splendid habitations, fill our homes with paintings and with sculpture, but we cannot buy with gold the old associations.”

Yours in Christ,

CARRIE F. PEROT (684).

PHILADELPHIA, PA., June 29, 1902.

Mrs. Mary E. Eastman :—

Your kind invitation to be present at the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Congregational Church was duly received, and I regret to say that I cannot be with you on that occasion, but my thoughts will be with you, and I shall ever pray that the richest blessings of heaven may ever rest on the loved ones of my old New England home.

Knowing as I do the committee of invitations, I am confident that it will not only be a success, but will add another interesting chapter in the history of old Hampstead. With kind regards to all who may have a passing thought to the absent one,

Very truly,

WILL C. WILSON (650).

CHELSEA, MASS., June 27, 1902.

Dear Mrs. Eastman :—

I very much regret that on account of my advanced years I am unable to visit the home of my younger days, and celebrate with you the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Congregational Church of Hampstead.

Wishing you prosperity in the future as in the past, I am,
Sincerely yours,

MRS. MARY P. EMERSON (396).

54 V ST. N. W., WASHINGTON, D. C.,

June 26, 1902.

My Dear Mrs. Eastman :—

Accept my thanks for the invitation received to the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Congregational Church in Hampstead.

There are many pleasant memories connected with the church of my earlier years, and it would give me great pleasure to be present at the exercises. The distance is so great, I regret that I will not be able to attend.

Very sincerely and cordially yours,

EMMA L. LANE (422).

NEW LONDON, CONN., June 23, 1902.

“Miss Elizabeth Muzzey Browne desires to extend to the committee her best wishes for the success of the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Congregational Church in Hampstead, and regrets most exceedingly her inability to attend either the exercises or the banquet. Since her ancestor was one of its founders, the occasion would be one of extreme interest.”

HAVERHILL, MASS., June 23, 1902.

My Dear Mrs. Eastman :—

My mother wishes to acknowledge the invitation to a gathering of Hampstead people with thanks, and regrets that she will not be able to accept it.

We are glad to have the assurance of the prosperity of the church and the interest shown in old-time friends and members.

With cordial wishes for its future well-being and high attainments, in which my mother joins me, I am,

Sincerely yours,

MARY PUTNAM MERRILL (384).

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 24, 1902.

Dear Mrs. Eastman:—

Many thanks for your kind invitation to attend the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the church. Much as I would be pleased to be with you, I can only send kind greetings and best hopes for the welfare of the church.

Sincerely,

MRS. FRANK M. CONNER (762).

22 ARLINGTON ST., ROCHESTER, N. Y.,

June 22, 1902.

Dear Mrs. Eastman:—

I regret I cannot accept the invitation to attend the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Congregational Church of Hampstead.

Although I cannot be with you at this time, I have many pleasant memories of my church home, and I hope the many blessings the church has received during the past will be continued.

With best wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,

LYLE EASTMAN (664).

CHELSEA, MASS., June 25, 1902.

Dear Mrs. Eastman:—

We regret very much our inability to be present at the anniversary exercises and banquet of the Congregational Church, but let us assure you that wherever we may be, we always consider the Hampstead church as our church home.

We would be pleased indeed, to be present on this interesting occasion if circumstances would permit.

Most cordially,

MR. AND MRS. RUFUS C. MCNIEL AND CARRIE C.

(591, 578, 716).

BLUFF LAKE RESORT, REDLANDS, CAL.,

June 29, 1902.

Dear Mrs. Eastman:—

The invitation to be present at the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the church at Hampstead is at hand. I regret that it will be impossible for us to be present. I can never lose interest in the church and town where my childhood days were spent, and I extend my best wishes for its prosperity.

For fourteen years my home has been in this beautiful land of sunshine and flowers. Mr. Thurman and myself are both members of the First Congregational Church at Redlands. We spend our summers at our mountain resort (Bluff Lake), at an elevation of 7675 feet above sea level, and our winters at "Allendale," near Redlands.

With cordial greetings,

MRS. M. ABBIE (PILLSBURY) THURMAN (433).

SKETCHES OF MEMBERS.

When the State is not given in a sketch New Hampshire is meant. The number of the member corresponds with the number in the preceding list of members. Abbreviations: b. for born; d., died; m. or mar., married; adm., admitted; dis. and rec. for dismissed and recommended. Vol. 1 refers to the Memorial History of the town.

No. 1.

Rev. Henry True, b. in Salisbury, Mass., Feb. 27, 1726; a son of Deacon Jabez and Sarah (Tappan) True. His father was elected deacon of the Salisbury church in 1721, and the son Henry was received to the membership of that church, 1746. He was graduated from Harvard College, 1750. After his graduation he taught school in Haverhill, Mass., and studied divinity with the pastor of the First Church, Rev. Edward Barnard.

It is stated that he received an invitation to settle in his native town, but declined, mainly in consequence of the opposition of Henry Eaton, who raised some technical objection, "mainly for the sake of being contrary."

He married Ruth Ayer (72). He was twice chaplain in the "Old French war." His Bible has dates, "Fort Edward, 1759;" "At Crown Point, 1762."

He died suddenly Tuesday morning, May 22, 1782. His "tomb," as represented, is in the village cemetery (see page 308, Vol. 1).

Judging from the manuscript sermons, many of which remain, his teachings abounded in practical thoughts and suggestions.

Henry True had two brothers and seven sisters. His father, Jabez True, b. Oct. 5, 1686, was the youngest of the eight children of Henry True, b. March 6, 1645, and wife Jane Bradbury, whose father, Henry True, is the first True mentioned on the records of Salem, Mass., 1644, and who married Israel, daughter of John Pike of Langford, England, and bought lands and house in Salisbury, 1659.

The following incident, evidently believed to be a "warning," is related: "In the house of his brother Samuel, in Salisbury, an old clock which had not been running for a long time, began to strike, and struck continually about forty times at eleven o'clock in the morning. It did this several times. Samuel's wife Sarah could not stay in the house, and went to neighbors. Dea. Samuel remarked, "We shall have bad news." At eleven o'clock that night a messenger from Hampstead brought the news that his brother Henry had died that morning at eleven o'clock."

In 1855 Mr. Jesse Davis (223) described Mr. True as he knew him when he was a boy, "as a venerable looking man, with light, silvery hair, and, like the most of his family, of quite large frame, but not inclined to corpulency."

Henry True, of Marion, Ohio, a great-grandson, has in his possession:—

I. Some forty sermons of the Rev. Henry True, the text of which is sometimes prefixed in Greek. The handwriting is microscopic.

II. Four letters to his wife, Ruth Ayer True.

III. Almanack Journal of years 1753, '54.

IV. His journal in 1759 and 1762, reprints of which Mr. True has deposited in the Public Libraries of Hampstead, Boston, Mass., and other places. This journal is partly written in Latin. Mrs. Mary True Vose, of Chelsea, Mass., the only living grandchild, says: "Grandpa True was fond of using Latin in his family, and would ask for his spectacles in Latin."

The Almanac Journal of 1753 records accounts of the erection of his parsonage (see p. 34), alternate with visits to Haverhill to see Ruth Ayer, and under date of Nov. 29th is the following extract in Latin: "Proseectus ad Haverhill, intergrims connubalia vincula." (See autograph, p. 331, Vol. I.)

No. 2.

Richard Hazen, b. in Haverhill, Mass., July 20, 1686, was son of Lieut. Richard and Mary, dau. of Capt. John and Hannah (Andrews) Peabody. His father, Lieut. Richard Hazen, inherited an immense fortune, for the times, from his stepfather, George Browne, of Haverhill, who adopted him by law. He was the youngest child of the family of ten children of his parents.

Richard Hazen, Jr., was a graduate of Harvard College, in 1717. In 1723 he kept school in Haverhill, "one quarter at the widow Mary Whittier's, and three quarters, for which he received eleven pounds a quarter."

In 1726-7, he, with his brother Moses, were the first proprietors of Pennacook (now Concord), and active in making the early surveys.

In 1726 he was chosen, at a meeting in Ipswich, Mass., Sept. 9, to search out the way from Chester to Pennacook and mark the same.

He was appointed by Gov. Belcher and his Council to survey the western and principal boundary between Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

Some extracts from the journal of Richard Hazen, written while making the survey, which is now in the possession of John W. Garland, of Hampstead, read: "Friday, March 20, 1740, at Eight o'clock forenoon, we set out from my dwelling house in Haverhill, with our provisions on hand sleds, which we hal'd up the Merrimaek river, with great difficulty and danger of falling through, most of the falls in the river being broke Open & Rotten, and at eight o'clock at night we came to Mr. Richard Hall's, at Tewksbury, and lodged by his fireside."

On April 26, 1740, he wrote: "I purchased a canoe at Dunstable and come down the Merrimack river at Dracut. We carried Our Canoe Over Pentucket falls. Zechariah Hildrick, another of our company, slept at Dracut, where he belongs. We came down the river to Methuen, where Mr. Caleb Swan, another of our company, who belonged there left us. The rest (46) of us came down to Haverhill, about eight or nine of the clock. After a journey of thirty-seven days, all in perfect health through God's goodness to us."

"N. B. The weather proved so favorable to us that we never slept in the woods for any foul weather, nor did we made a camp for any one night, & stretched our blankets but three times all the journey, but Lodged without any covering save the Heavens and our Blankets. Distance covered in the thirty-seven days was one hundred and nine miles, three-quarters and thirty-eight perches."

He was one of the "Prince subscribers" and representative to the General Court of Massachusetts in 1742. He was an early owner of land in Hampstead, and settled the farm where John W. Garland now resides. He was also owner of a mill on the Merrimack river till his death.

He married Sarah Clement (No. 3). He was a principal member at the organization of the church, being admitted from the First Church in Haverhill.

The Boston Gazette of February 19, 1754, says; "Richard Hazen, an ingenious surveyor of land, was found dead in the road, at or near Bradford, in the county of Essex. His horse was standing by him. As there were no marks of violence found upon him by the Jury of Inquest, 'tis thought he was seized with a fit, and fell from his horse & dy'd."

The date of his death has been given as February 7 or 9, 1754.

No. 3.

Sarah Clement, b. in Salisbury, Mass., 1697; daughter of Fawne and Sarah (Hoyt) Clement. She married Richard

Hazen, Esq. (No. 2), Oct. 22, 1719: children, all b. in Haverhill. She was one of the original members of the church from the First Church in Haverhill, June 3, 1752. In 1723, she, with several other women, asked permission to "erect a pew over the head of the stairs in the meeting house in Haverhill, so as not to damnify the stairway, as they could always find seats if belated to meeting."

The children of Hon. Richard and Sarah (Clement) Hazen were:—

- I. Richard, b. June 12, 1722; m. Miriam, daughter of Robert and Mary (Currier) Hoyt, in 1741.
- II. Sarah, b. Feb. 12, 1723; d. July 29, 1740.
- III. Mary, b. March 10, 1725; d. Nov. 30, 1737.
- IV. Hannah, b. Sept. 17, 1729; m. John Moors (see list -- Owned the Covenant.)
- V. Nathaniel, b. July 23, 1732; d. Nov. 19, 1737.
- VI. Elizabeth, b. Sept. 23, 1734; m. Joseph Little of Newburyport, Mass.
- VII. Nathaniel, b. Dec. 9, 1737; d. Dec. 10, 1745.
- VIII. Mary, b. Feb. 2, 1739-40; m. Benjamin, son of Moses and Sarah (Jaques) Little; second, Major Edmund Moors, both of Hampstead. (See Cov.)

No. 4.

Jeremiah Eaton, b. in Reading, Mass., August 10, 1698, was a son of William and Mary (Swain) Eaton of Reading, and who moved to Lynnfield, Mass., where the father died, Nov. 27, 1731.

Jeremiah married, first, Margaret Hawkes of Lynn, March 17, 1721, by whom he had two children, Margaret and Hannah. His wife was b. Feb. 4, 1702, in Lynn, and died there May 25, 1730. He then married Hannah Osgood (No. 5), Nov. 4, 1730, and moved to Hampstead about 1750.

He was a designer and carver of wood for printing purposes, and was also noted for his fine musical voice and singer of psalms. From the church records: "Voted, January 19, 1754, that Jeremiah Eaton should set ye psalms, if he saw fit;" but in July, 1754, the "prior vote was revoked allowing him setting ye psalms." He was admitted a member of the church from the First Church in Haverhill, June 3, 1752. He died October 14, 1754, and was buried in the village cemetery.

Jonathan Eaton m. Melitable Page in Hamp., April 8, 1784. Three of their children settled in Plymouth. Daniel reared a large family there. Ruth and Hannah both married King, son of William and Ruth (Hastings) George, who was b. in Hamp. (See p. 412, Vol. 1.)

No. 5.

Hannah Osgood, b. in Haverhill, Mass., June 8, 1704; daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Dane) Osgood, of Andover, Mass., who were married in Haverhill Dec. 28, 1734; married Jeremiah Eaton (No. 4), "ye 3 or 4 of Nov., 1730," and the mother of Jeremiah and William, who d. young; Osgood William, b. April 21, 1743, married Sarah Farnham, and lived in Fryeburg, Me., where they both died, and whose children were William, Osgood, Sarah, Hannah, Mary, Jeremiah, Susanna, and Enoch Abbott.

After the death of her husband, she married James Abbott, Feb. 14, 1765, and lived in the West Parish of Haverhill some time.

No. 6.

David Dodge, b. in Ipswich, Mass., 1704, was son of Antipas and Joanna (Low) Dodge of Ipswich. His mother married, second, Joseph Hale of Bradford, Mass. David lived in Boston from 1725 to 1728, and soon after removed to Haverhill, Mass., where he was a wheelwright. He mar. Martha Esgate (No. 7) in Haverhill, in 1729. They lived in Hampstead a few years, but later removed to Londonderry, where he died. He was admitted to the church June 3, 1752, from the First Church in Haverhill.

No. 7.

Stephen Johnson, b. in Andover, Mass., 1679, was a son of Lt. Stephen Johnson of Ipswich and his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. Francis Dane, who were mar. in Andover, 1661. Lt. Stephen Johnson died in Andover in 1690, and his wife Elizabeth d. there in 1722. Rev. Francis Dane speaks of his daughter (see Upham's Witchcraft, Vol. 2): "Concerning my daughter, Elizabeth Johnson, I never had grounds to suspect her. Neither have I heard any other accuse her, till by spectre evidence she was brought forth, but this I would say, she was weak & incapacious, tearful, & in that respect I fear she hath falsely accused herself & others—that long before she was sent for she spake as to her own particular that she was sure she was no witch. And for her daughter Elizabeth, she is but simplish at the best, & I fear the common speech that was frequently spread among us of their liberty if they would confess, & the like expressions used by some have brought many into a snare. The Lord direct & guide those that are in place & give us all submissive wills, & lett the Lord do with me & mine what seems good in his eyes." She was condemned to death, but as it was late, escaped the fate of the other condemned witches.

Benjamin Kimball, b. in Haverhill, Mass., May 3, 1722, was a son of Dea. Benjamin Kimball of Plaistow and Mary, daughter of Joseph and Martha (Toothaker) Emerson, his wife. His parents were members of the church at the North Parish, Haverhill, when it was organized, in 1730, and his father was the first deacon there. It is said that "his father married at the age of eighteen and went three miles north of the river, into the woods, and cleared his farm, now known as the homestead of Nathaniel Wentworth, near the old burial ground in the North Parish of Haverhill, and that his mother was greatly distressed from the danger he run from the Indians."

Jonathan, a son, settled on the old homestead, and mar. Elizabeth, a daughter of Dea. Daniel Little of Hampstead (No. 13), for his first wife, and, second, mar. Abigail True of Salisbury, Mass. Tradition says that "Jonathan was the first person to migrate to that part of the town of Haverhill which is now Hampstead: that he went up into the woods and had twenty men to help him build his log cabin, and that two stood guard against the Indians while the rest worked." He afterwards returned to Plaistow to the old homestead, where he lived and died. He was town clerk of Plaistow twenty-three years, and deacon of the North Parish Church for fifty-seven years, and had nine children.

Benjamin, the subject of our sketch, occupied the cleared farm in Hampstead, which was a large tract, which now includes the homes of Charles B. Gilman (which was the old Kimball homestead), and Dr. Bennette and others in that vicinity, and to the Island pond on the west, and much land bordering on the Wash pond. He married, first, Mary Eaton (No. 22), by whom he had nine children. He mar., second, Mary Hoyt (No. 91), by whom he had seven children. He was adm. a member of the church by letter from the North Parish Church, June 3, 1752, and was elected deacon of the church June 23, 1754, and continued till June 17, 1774. "It was voted to communie with Dea. Benj. Kimball not to officiate any longer as a deacon on account of an irregularity in his accounts as guardian of Enoch Heath." (Church records.)

His gravestone and that of his wife are in the village cemetery not far from the street, near the gate, and bear the inscriptions: "Dea. Benjamin Kimball, died June 22, 1799, aged 77." "Mary, wife of Dea. Benjamin Kimball, died March 10, 1816, aged 84."

He was farmer in town and in 1755 moved to Weare, and in 1770 he sold his farm there of 150 acres and went to Chester, Vt., where he was recorded a freeman in 1779. In 1775 he was chosen a standing committee to ascertain the state of the Colonies and keep the county informed of the doings of the friends of liberty in the different colonies, and took an active part in the events which preceded the Revolution. He owned a farm of rich bottom land in Williams River. He died 1786, and was called the richest man in Chester, his estate being given as £160. He had nine children by 2d wife, prominent in Vt.

Holmes in his annals in 1720 states that tea began to be used in New England, and probably was soon after used in Haverhill, and it has been said that the father of Moses Guile, had a pound of tea sent to him as a present from Boston. His good wife had never tasted of it, and was not acquainted with the way to make it, but thought it must be cooked in some way, so partly filling her large dinner pot with water she hung it over the fire, and put into it the whole pound of tea. To make it more luscious, as she thought, she put in a good piece of beef, for to make "a real dish of tea." After boiling until the meat was tender she removed the tea from the fire, and, as the old man remarked "the liquor was so despot strong they could not drink it, besides it had made a complete jelly of the meat."

Jacob Bailey, b. in Newbury, Mass., was a son of Joshua and Sarah (Coffin) Bailey, of Newbury. He married Prudence, daughter of Ephraim and Prudence (Stickney) Noyes, of Newbury (No. 83). They removed to Hampstead soon after marriage and resided on his farm of 150 acres, which included the present homesteads of Edward F. Noyes, B. F. Rowe and part of the John Mills' farm. He was influential towards the incorporation of Hampstead and the parish in 1746. He raised a company of soldiers, of which he was the capt., in the French war in 1756. He was at the capture of Fort William Henry and ran the gauntlet of that dreadful massacre that occurred by the violation of the plighted faith of the enemy, in August, 1757, and was one of those who escaped to Fort Edward. He was made a colonel by General Amherst and was with him at the taking of Fort Ticonderoga and Crown Point, in 1759. In 1767 he obtained a charter of a township in "Coos County," and removed to Haverhill, N. H., in 1764. He was there appointed by New York as brig. gen., and soon after, by General Washington, commissioner general of the Northern department, which involved great responsibilities and subjected him to dangers, difficulties and sacrifices. A reward of 500 guineas was offered for his capture, dead or alive, and it required vigilance to escape the scouts sent from Canada to take him. He made a treaty with St. Francis tribe of Indians, and was looked up to by them as a father, and by the friendly Indians. By means of spies he acquired important intelligence respecting the movements of the British, and rendered great service with his purse, pen and person before and at the time of the capture of Burgoyne. Several of his sons served with him against the British. He sacrificed a large estate in the service of his country, of which he never received any compensation. He was judge of probate in Newbury district, in 1778; chief justice of Orange county court from 1781 to 1791, with the exception of years 1783 and 1784. He was termed the "father" of Newbury, Vt., for he was the original grantee, and the prime mover in all of its enterprises concerning its settlement. He died in Newbury, March 1, 1810. He was admitted a member of the church June 3d, 1752, and dismissed to Newbury, Vt. in 1764.

Fisk, and were the parents of William Stowell Mills, LL. B. of Brooklyn, New York, author of "Foundations of Genealogy," "The story of the Western Reserve of Connecticut," "Leaves from Genealogical trees," etc. to whom the writer is indebted for much of the sketch of Mills and Hogg families.

Jane Mills, the mother, d. in Hampstead, Nov. 2, 1762, aged 73, and was buried in the village cemetery.

No. 61.

James Graves, probably b. in Hampton, May 2, 1707, a son of William and Margeret Graves, of Hampton. He married in Haverhill, Mass., Sarah Roberts (No. 62). He was admitted to the church, June 3d, 1752, from the first church of Haverhill and d. "before 1764." He was one of the earliest petitioners for the town of Sandown, and probably lived in town, but near the Angly Pond, in 1756. He was called "of Kingston," in town and church affairs, but of that part set off as Sandown.

No. 62.

Sarah Roberts, b. in Haverhill, Mass., May 7, 1825, a daughter of Ephraim and Hannah (Smith) Roberts of Haverhill. She married James Graves (No. 64), Sept. 1, 1741, in Haverhill. She was admitted to the church, June 3d, 1752. "Voted at church meeting after lecture March 25, 1764, that Sarah Graves be transferred at her request to the church at South Hampton." They had children, bapt. in South Hampton:—

- I. Lucy, b. Aug. 22, 1762.
- II. Molly, b. Oct. 16, 1764.

No. 63.

Ensign Otho Stevens, b. in Gloucester, Mass. (probably) 1702, a son of John and Mary, a daughter of Aquilla Chase. John Stevens took the oath of allegiance in 1669, also in 1678, aged 70 years, and lived in Newbury, Haverhill, Gloucester, and perhaps other towns in Massachusetts. John and Mary Stevens had ten children and perhaps others, three or four born in Haverhill. In his will, dated 1715, he mentions children by name and age, “ John, aged 19 years, Samuel, aged 16 years, and Otho, aged 13.” Otho, mar. first, Abigail Kent (No. 67), and second, mar. Mary — (see “Covenant” No. 2). He was a farmer and constable in Hampstead and lived on the eastern shore of the pond. He was admitted to the church June 3d, 1752. He died in Hampstead, May 4, 1771, aged 69 years. (See Stevens in Appendix).

No. 64.

Abigail Kent, b. July 9, 1797, in Gloucester, Mass., a daughter of Josiah and Mary (Lufkin) Kent, of Gloucester. It is said that she was one-fourth Indian blood. She mar. Otho Stevens, Mar. 21, 1723 (No. 66), and was admitted to the church June 3d, 1752, and d. in Hampstead. She was the mother of children:—

- I. Samuel, b. 1724, mar. Susanna Griffin, and lived in Hampstead, nearly opposite George Braggs' house.
- II. Levi, m. Lydia Hills (see No. 67).
- III. Otho, b. 1726, mar. Abigail Emerson (see No. 748 “Covenant”).
- IV. Archelus, b. 1729, mar. Hannah Emerson (see No. 17-18).

- VII. Josiah.
- VIII. Daniel, b. 1742, m. Elizabeth Bryant (see No. 407); second, Hannah Hills (see No. 67).
- IX. Susan.

Archelus and Josiah settled later in Enfield, and d. there. Daniel settled in Haverhill. Simeon, settled in Newbury, Vt., and d. there July 6, 1788, aged 52 years. He mar. first, Sarah Hadley, who d. in Newbury in 1799, and second, he mar. widow Susanah Shepherd, a daughter of Dea. Moses Chamberlain, who after Mr. Stevens' death, mar. James Colliss of Greenboro, Vt., and lived to be over 100 years old. Simeon was one of the first settlers in Newbury, and in the spring of 1762 was a first lieutenant in the first company of minute men of Newbury, and captain in a company of Col. Bebell's regiment, from April, 1778 to Nov. 30, 1779, and also served on several alarms. On his gravestone his name is spelled Stephens, and he is said to have written it in that way. He had nine children, 1, Abigail, who d. unm. 2, Otho, mar. widow Sarah Bailey, who was b. in Newbury, Mass., a daughter of John G. and Abigail Bailey. She mar. first, James, son of Gen. Jacob and Prudence (Noyes) Bailey (Nos. 34-83). Her husband James Bailey, served in the Revolutionary war and was taken prisoner by the party which had failed to capture his father (see No. 34), in 1782. He was going home from his father's saw-mill in the dusk of the evening, barefooted and bareheaded, and was taken to Canada in that condition, and kept until the close of the war. Some benevolent people provided him with clothing and shoes. He died April, 1784. His grandmother said "that he was killed by accident," but "the oldest people in town" say that he died "by foul play." His widow then mar. Otho Stevens (son of Simeon), and lived in Waterford, Vt. 3, Simeon, mar. Hannah Bailey. 4, Sarah. 5, Levi, mar. Susan Shepherd, and d. in Greenboro, Vt. 6, Judith, mar. George W. No. 65.

Rebecca Tucker, b. in Kingston, May 4, 1729, a daughter of Moses and Joanna (Dow) Tucker of Kingston, who were mar. Sept. 30, 1727, and was in Kingston as one of the early settlers in 1735, and prominent in the early settlement. She was admitted to the church June 3, 1752.

No. 66.

Edmund Eastman, b. in Salisbury, Mass., May 21, 1715, a son of Edmund and Susanna Singletary, who married, for a second husband, Richard Bartlett, Dec. 8, 1720. She had three children by Mr. Eastman, of whom Edmund was the second child. He married widow Hannah Hills (No. 67), and removed to Hampstead soon after, to the "old Eastman residence" at West Hampstead, where he died, Oct. 21, 1804, and was buried in the hill cemetery at West Hampstead. He was admitted a member of the church June 3, 1752. (See p. 543, Vol. 1.)

No. 67.

Hannah Hunt, b. in Amesbury, Mass., July 7, 1716, a daughter of John and Hannah (Clough) Hunt of Amesbury, "a shoe man" there. She m., first, Joshua, son of Joshua and Priscilla (Chase) Hills, who was b. in Newbury, Mass., March 2, 1718; m. Nov. 27, 1739. He d. in Newbury, Nov. 13, 1744. She m., second, Edmund Eastman (No. 66), Mar. 10, 1746. She had children, b. in Hampstead:—

- I. Jemima, mar. Parker Stevens (No. 22).
- II. Edmund, b. April 3, 1752; mar. Mary Davis, b. Mar. 21, 1752, in Hampstead, a daughter of Josiah and Dorothy (Colby) Davis, and who d. in Corinth, Vt., Aug. 30, 1836, aged 85 years. He was a farmer of Corinth, and had nine children born there.

David Copp of Hampstead, Oct. 27, 1725, and moved here in 1732, near the eastern shore of Wash pond (see p. 15, Vol. 1). She was admitted to the church Aug. 6, 1752, and died in Hampstead, aged 85 years, and was buried in the village cemetery. She had several children, some of whom went to Vermont. One of them, David, mar. Hannah Merrill (widow), in 1768, and mar. second, Mary French of Hampstead; Moses; and Joshua, who mar. Sarah Poor, and resided in town, at "Copp's Corner," and had eleven children, b. in town.

No. 72.

Ruth Ayer, b. in Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 7, 1728, a daughter of Deacon James and Mary (White) Ayer of Haverhill. She married Rev. Henry True (No. 1), Nov. 29 or 30, 1753, evidently having made his acquaintance while he was pursuing his studies for the ministry in Haverhill. She was adm. to the church November, 1753, and died in Hampstead, Jan. 1, 1810. (See inscription on tomb of Rev. Mr. True, p. 309, Vol. 1.) She was the mother of children:—

- I. A daughter, b. and d. Nov. 2, 1754.
- II. Samuel, b. March 8, 1756; d. Aug. 5, 1778; in the Revolutionary war at Providence.
- III. Hannah (see No. 217).
- IV. Rev. James (see No. 161).
- V. Dr. Jabez, b. Oct. 6, 1760; d. Sept. 5, 1823; mar. at Marietta, Ohio. He was one of the first settlers in Marietta. His name appears on the first subscription for celebrating July 4th in the new settlement. He was one of the "Ohio Company" reaching Marietta in 1788. Harris' History of Ohio says Dr. True was "one of the early teachers," and "always foremost in laying the foundations of the educational system of that part of the State of Ohio." He was a deacon of the church, and the first Bible society in the Northwest Territory was formed in Mr. True's house in 1812. He had a fine orchard, and one day going into it he saw a boy in an apple tree. He said, "My boy, you are in the [wrong tree; that has not the best; come down, and I will give you some better apples," which he proceeded to gather, saying, "When you want some apples again, come to me; you endanger your limbs by climbing so high a fence." The lad told of it, saying, "I will never steal apples again from so kind a man; I am ashamed of myself." Dr. True practised his profession, with a glad desire to relieve distress and pain, not caring whether the patient could pay; and he cared little for money except as he could do good with it. He was earnest in support of all educational, religious, and moral reforms. He was marked by the usual peculiarities of the New England race, being frugal, industrious, temperate, and public-spirited. He went out as a surgeon in the Revolution on board a privateer.

- VI. Deacon John, mar. Mrs. Anna Kimball (Nos. 214 and 249).
 VII. Ruth, mar. Samuel Little (see Nos. 201 and 200).
 VIII. Sarah, mar. John Howard (see No. 247).
 IX. Rev. Henry, b. May 20, 1770; mar. Mary Barrett. He d. April 17, 1757. He graduated from Dartmouth College 1796. His wife was born June 8, 1784; a daughter of Amos Barrett, a captain of minute men at Concord; she d. Feb. 18, 1856. Rev. Henry True was fitted for college at Atkinson Academy, and partly with the Rev. Giles Merrill of North Parish, Haverhill. He taught school after his graduation from Dartmouth College, for five or six years, in Salisbury, Beverly and Tyngsborough, and other towns. He studied divinity, partly with the Rev. Mr. Lawrence, with whom he boarded in Tyngsborough, and partly with Rev. Dr. Chapin of Groton. He preached some at Tewksbury and Dracut, Mass., and one summer for the North Parish Church at Plaistow, and during one session of Congress for the Rev. Manassah Cutler, at Hamilton, Mass. He was trustee of Warren, Mass., Academy for many years; also chaplain of a regiment, justice of the peace and quorum, and town clerk—"none of these offices very profitable." He published a sermon delivered by him in Hampstead Nov. 15, 1807. He was called as pastor of the Congregational Church at Union, Me., Sept. 24, 1806, and settled Nov. 11, 1806. The charge at the ordination was given by Rev. Manassah Cutler of Hamilton. He resigned April, 1816. In the fall of 1849 he moved with his wife to Marion, Ohio, where he resided with his son, Dr. Henry True, three years, when he returned to Union, Me., where he resided with his daughter, Mrs. Vose, until he died, April 17, 1857. Mrs. Mary Barrett (True), his daughter, writes of her father: "He was loving and affectionate to his children, and fond of other children. He retained his love of Latin, Hebrew and Greek to his old age. Our minister would come in often to talk with him in Union on some difficult points in theology, and always found help." Nathan Rice of Union said: "I would trust him with any amount of money uncounted, knowing that every cent would be returned." Mrs. Vose says. "He composed this morning prayer for me"—

"Now I awake to see the light,
In this my God I take delight;
Guard me this day from every ill,
And make me know and do thy will."

X. Mary (No. 344).

The children of Rev. Henry and Mary (Barrett) True were:—

Mehitable Putnam, b. March 26, 1727, in Danvers, Mass., a daughter of Dea. Nathaniel and Hannah (Roberts) Putnam. She married Reuben Harriman, in Salem, Mass., June 4, 1747, who was b. in Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 5, 1725, son of Joseph and Lydia (Eaton) Harriman of Haverhill. Reuben Harriman was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, having enlisted "in the company to go on an expedition now on foot to the State of Rhode Island." A torn receipt, which is preserved in the Record and Pension Bureau at Washington, D. C., shows "that Lieut. Moses Little received 20 pounds for Reuben Harrim— (receipt torn) and another soldier, who were members of his company."

They removed to Hampstead soon after their marriage, to the farm purchased by his grandfather, Nathaniel Harriman, one of the first land-owners in this part of Haverhill. She was admitted to the church by letter from the church at Danvers, Mass., November, 1754. The old farm remained in the family until Jan. 27, 1841, when a grandson, Caleb Harriman, sold the farm to Johnson Noyes, since owned by Stephen Harris, and deeded to Daniel Ayer, April 15, 1861, "excepting and reserving the burial lot at the southerly corner, as walled around, containing fifteen or twenty rods, to myself and heirs forever." In this lot are buried Reuben and Mehitable (Putnam) Harriman, and their colored servant Philo. (See inscriptions on tombstones, p. 313, Vol. 1.) The graves were also marked by memorial trees (noble ash), preserved by the children and grand-children before they left their home, about 1827. Feb. 3, 1902, those family trees, which measured nearly two feet in diameter at the ground and at least fifty feet in height, were felled and removed for lumber by trespassers, and other depredations committed in the burial lot. Prof. F. G. Harriman, for many years a teacher in California, and in 1902 a mining engineer in South America, visited the old yard, June 18, 1902, and counted the rings very accurately on the bases of the felled trees, which showed ninety-four rings on the tree cut at the head of Mrs. Harriman's grave, eighty-three at Mr. Harriman's grave, and seventy-nine rings for the servant's memorial tree, which date the ages of the trees.

Their children were all born in Hampstead, and nearly all removed to northern New Hampshire or Vermont. They were:—

- I. Mehitable, b. May 8, 1748; d. young.
- II. Rufus, b. July 8, 1749; d. young.
- III. Laban, b. July 10, 1751; mar. Molly Harriman, and lived for several years at the old homestead in the lane south of the Ayers house; in later years kept a hotel in Hookset. The house in the lane was moved to the street and the present house built of it. Laban Harriman's carpenter shop formed the north portion. The rocks from the old Harriman cellar are a part of C. Frank Noyes' house cellar in Atkinson, and the stone door-step is now the street door-step at the home of Joshua F. Noyes. Laban d. Mar. 26, 1830; wife d. 1822, aged 67 years. They had children:—
1. William, whose grand-daughter Elizabeth mar. Samuel Fellows of Sandown, 1835; whose daughter, Mary E., mar. Hon. Oliver Taylor, and son, Croydon H. Fellows, both of Haverhill, Mass.

 4. Putnam, mar., and resided in Vermont; a son, Fred Putnam, now resides in Washington, Vt.
 5. Caleb, mar. Lois Knight (widow of Richard, son of Capt. Hezekiah and Mrs. Anne (Swett) Hutchens), and lived at the old Hutchens home, now occupied by Edw. F. Noyes, and kept tavern there many years. He was converted in later life, and travelled through the towns preaching the "faith as shown to him." His cousins relate hearing him preach, and of his invariably commencing his talks by relating "how he was converted," as follows, in a very slow tone and drawling accent: "I see in this congregation a good many small boys. Once I was a small boy, a poor, sinful child, and I caught a blue jay, and I pulled out all of his tail feathers, and I pulled out all of his wing feathers, and I laid him on the stone of the door screaming, as he looked up to heaven. 'Caleb, Caleb, son of Laban, have mercy on my soul. Amen.' "

- IV. Zeniah, b. Dec. 20, 1754; mar. Caleb, son of Capt. William Marshall of Hampstead, and soon after moved to Northumberland. Several forts were built in that section during the Revolutionary war. One of them was located on the farm of Caleb Marshall. "Wild consternation filled the hearts of the settlers, who were scattered. The young wife of Marshall had her household goods hidden away, and with one child of two years of age and an infant in her arms less than a month old, mounted a horse and fled to Hampstead, a distance of more than one hundred and fifty miles, arriving in safety." (Hist. Lancaster, N. H.) (See Marshall, Appendix of this Vol.)
- V. Hannah, b. Nov. 30, 1757.
- VI. Sarah, b. Jan. 30, 1758; m. Nathaniel Noyes, who resided, until their three oldest children were born, in Atkinson, where Joshua A. Richards now resides, and then moved to Bosca-wen a few years, and then to Landaff, where they died. Their children were:—
1. Sarah, m. Joseph Hutchens of Bath.
 2. Moses, m. Sally Stone of Landaff.
 3. Enoch, m. Hannah Morrill, and resided in Landaff. (See sketch, p. 201, Vol. 1, by Rev. Henry A. Merrill, a grandson.)

No. 107.

John Calfe, b. in Newbury, Mass., June 13, 1741, was the oldest son of John and Naomi (Eliot) Calfe of Newbury, and grandson of John and Deborah (King) Calfe, who moved to Chester from Newbury, and owned proprietary rights in several towns in this vicinity, and much land in Chester, where he held various town offices. The grandfather John, was son of Robert Calef the emigrant, to Boston undoubtedly (who always spelled his name Calef; the next three or four generations spelled it as did Hon. John of Hampstead, but all of the name now seem to have gone back to the original spelling of the name). Robert Calef was the author of "More Wonders of the Invisible World." He emigrated to America before 1638, and later became conspicuous through a controversy with Cotton and Increase Mather, in which he emphatically denounced their witchcraft theories. There have been doubts expressed as to whether the author was the elder Robert or the son Robert. Hon. Arthur B. Calef, late of Middleton, Conn., who made a study of the Calef family in America, and collected many family records, wrote in 1899, "there is no reason to believe that the son Robert was the author, both by reason of his probable youth, and also, because there is a copy with the autograph of the author, in the Lenox Library, at New York, which was presented by Robert the elder to Gov. Bellingham, and the writing corresponds with that of Robert the emigrant, as seen on the records."

A sketch of Hon. John Calfe of Hampstead was published in Vol. 2, of the N. H. Historical Collection, and Monthly Literary Journal at Concord, in 1823, by J. B. Moore. The sermon preached at his funeral, Oct. 30, 1808, by Rev. John Kelly, is reprinted in Vol. 1, p. 273, and a partial history of his life is given in that paper. "He was said to have been a great man in intellect as well as in stature. He was five feet eight and one-half inches in height, and weighed over three hundred pounds."

He was admitted a member of the church, Oct. 16, 1763, and remained a member just forty-five years. He was elected deacon, in 1773, April 20, and served thirty-five years. He mar. his cousin Lois Calfe of Kingston (No. 108). His life work will be found in above mentioned publications. He resided where Mr. Charles H. Osgood now resides.

No. 108.

Lois Calfe, b. in Newbury, Mass., January 4, 1739, was a daughter of Deacon William and Lois (Sawyer) Calfe of Kingston. Her father lived in Newbury, where he mar. his first wife Sarah Cheney; she d. leaving him one child, Col. John, later of Kingston. Her father purchased 15 acres of land of Obed Elkins of Kingston, April 19, 1739, and moved to Kingston soon after. He mar. Lois Sawyer, Nov., 1740, and had ten children, Lois being the second, she was bapt. in Kingston, Jan. 13, 1740. She was adm. to the church, Oct. 16, 1763. She mar. her cousin Hon. John Calfe (No. 107), and was the mother of five sons and four daughters.

Abiah Hunkins, b. in Haverhill, Mass., Nov. 9, 1715, a daughter of Robert and Abiah (Page) Hunkins of Haverhill and Bradford, Vt. She married John Muzzey (No. 51), and was admitted to the church March 25, 1764, and died in Hampstead. Her children were born in Hampstead (p. 423, Vol. 1). Her son Thomas, b. July 17, 1845-6, married Martha Pearson, and had eight children, b. in Hampstead (see p. 423, Vol. 1); second, he mar. Tamer Little (No. 78, Covenant list).

No. 110.

Charles Johnson, b. in Hampstead, May 29, 1737, son of Michael and Mary (Hancock) Johnson. Some records say that Michael Johnson came, in 1730, from North Londonderry, Ireland, to Londonderry, originally from Scotland, but the birth of a daughter, Abigail, b. in Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 31, 1728, would seem to show that he was in Haverhill early. Their children, born in Hampstead, were:—

- I. Col. Thomas Johnson, of Revolutionary fame in Vermont; m. Abigail Carlton, daughter of Dudley Carlton, of Bradford, Mass.
- II. Robert Johnson, m. Abigail Kincaed; had daughter; m., first, Luther Bailey; second, James Bailey.
- III. Miriam, m. Eben Mudgett of Hampstead and Weare; second, Capt. Wm. Marshall of Hampstead.
- IV. John Johnson, died in Hampstead, 1756; buried with Michael, the father, in the village cemetery (p. 309, Vol. 1).
- V. Mary, m. Samuel Kincaed of Windham in 1752.

Charles Johnson was admitted to the church March 25, 1764, and married Ruth Marsh (No. 111). He was dismissed "upon his own request that they be received by the church in Newbury." He was a distinguished officer in the Revolutionary army, and captured a sword from a Hessian lieutenant, which has been handed down in his family, and was recently in the possession of Charles S. Johnson, of Lodi, N.Y. He removed to Haverhill in 1772, where he was a deacon of the church, justice of the peace, member of the General Assembly, and one of the founders and trustees of the Haverhill Library. He died in Haverhill, March 3, 1813. Many of the descendants of Michael and Mary (Hancock) Johnson spell their names Johnston.

No. 111.

Ruth Marsh, b. in Haverhill, Mass., June 22, 1739, a daughter of Ephraim and Hannah (Smith) Marsh of Haverhill. She married Charles Johnston (No. 10), in Providence, Rhode Island, May 13 or 16, 1762. She was admitted to the church membership March 25, 1764, and was dismissed to be received by the church at Newbury, at Coos, Feb. 27, 1774. They had children:—

- I. Capt. Michael, b. in Hampstead, April 19, 1764; married, Sept. 23, 1784, Sarah, daughter of Dea. Joseph and Hannah (Hale) Atkinson, of Boscawen. She was of the same family as Nathan Hale, the "martyr spy." Capt. Michael died at Haverhill, N. H., Oct. 12, 1848; grandparents of Miss Philena McKeen, for many years principal of Abbott Academy at Andover, Mass.
- II. Polly, b. in Hampstead, May 13, 1766; m. Henry Burbank in 1785; d. May 17, 1889. Other children were born in Haverhill.

No. 112.

Timothy Goodwin, b. April 24, 1743, in Hampstead, son of Nathan and Rhoda (Colby) Goodwin (Nos. 47, 48). He married Anna Gould (No. 113), and was admitted to the church July 28, 1765. He was prominent in town and church affairs, and was elected deacon of the church June 1, 1776, and continued until his death, about 1804. He lived at the present homestead of Henry Morgan, at East Hampstead.

No. 113.

Anna Gould, b. in South Hampton: bapt. June 12, 1743; daughter of Nathan and Abigail (Stevens) Gould, of Amesbury, Mass. She married Timothy Goodwin (No. 112), and was admitted to the church July 28, 1765, and died in Hampstead about 1790. She had eight children, b. in Hampstead. (p. 412, Vol. 1.)

No. 114.

Joseph Sawyer, bapt. in Amesbury, Mass., Oct. 31, 1736 son of Edmund and Sarah (Rowell) Sawyer (Nos. 45 and 46). He came to Hampstead with his father when about nine years old. He married Judith Kelly, and owned the covenant in town, July 30, 1759 (see list), and was adm. to full communion May 25, 1766. He settled on "Darby Hill," now called "Jeffers Hill," about 1756, and later moved to Warner, as one of the earliest settlers. He was a respected citizen, and was deputed to find the first minister for the town, and selected his wife's cousin, William Kelly (No. 135), of Hampstead. He was a justice of the peace, and was always spoken of as "Squire Sawyer." From the New Hampshire State papers, dated Dec. 16, 1788: "The petition of us, the subscribers, Humbly sheweth that whereas we understand that Commissions of the Peace are soon to be given, We wish that Joseph Sawyer, who has hitherto been honored with a Justice's Commission and has behaved with Integrity and Uprightness, may again be favoured with the Honour of that Office for the Town of Warner, and your petitioners shall ever pray." Nineteen signatures. He d. at Warner, Nov. 29, 1813.

No. 118.

Judith Kelly, b. in Amesbury, Mass., Nov. 17, 1737, a daughter of Richard and Hannah (Bartlett) Kelly, of Birch Meadow (now Merrimac). Her father was an extensive farmer and shoemaker, and during a large portion of his life he took notes of "passing events." Quotations and extracts of his papers have largely aided local historians.

"Her mother, Hannah Bartlett, was a woman of very strong will and almost indescribable power of physical endurance. At one time her pastor made some sensation remarks about her treatment of a slave, Reuben, and she left his communion and connected herself with the Presbyterian Church in Newburyport, where she would walk every Sabbath, no matter what the weather, a distance of ten miles, attend two services of two hours in length, and if she could find a sick person she would watch all night, walk home, and do burdensome work of a large family wash. Once her husband built a stone wall not where she thought it should be put, and she removed it all with her own hands and built it where she wanted it put, but age wrought its soothing balm, and she became a genial old lady."

Under date of Nov. 3, 1756, Judith's father wrote: "My daughter Judith removed from my house to Darby Hill, so called, in Hampstead, in the Province of New Hampshire, and this is an account of what I gave her, to make her equal to what I have given her sisters in portion." (Then follows a list of goods and value.)

And in 1749 and 1750 he wrote: "The later end of February and the beginning of March was again a very sorrowful time in my family, occasioned by ye canker or throat distemper, of which Judith was first taken and was exceeding bad with it, but through mercy recovered, but Moses and Richard died; John and William recovered."

Judith married Joseph Sawyer (No. 117), Sept. 9, 1756, and owned the covenant, July 30, 1758, and was adm. to the church May 25, 1766.

They had six children, b. in Hampstead (see p. 426, Vol. 1), and then removed to Warner, where others were born (see History of Warner, Antrim, and Sutton, N. H.) Their children, b. in Hampstead:—

- I. Abigail, b. May 31, 1757; m. Wells Davis, of Warner.
- II. Edmund, b. Sept. 2, 1759; m. Mehitable Morrill. Their son, Jacob Sawyer, was b. in 1794, was the father of J. Herbert Sawyer, of Boston, Mass., to whom I am indebted for much of the facts in relation to Edmund and Joseph Sawyer and their families (Nos. 45, 46, 117, 118).

No. 120.

Job Kent, b. in Haverhill, Mass., March 31, 1743, was a son of John and Mary (Godfrey) Kent, of Haverhill and Hampstead. John Kent lived for a time near the brook by Atkinson Depot, and later moved to the west part of Hampstead, near the home of the late Joseph G. Brown. Job Kent married Alice Little (No. 121), and was admitted to the church July 27, 1766, and remained a member seventy-one years. He was elected a deacon April 30, 1812, and died in Hampstead, Dec. 26, 1837, aged 94 years and 9 months. He served in the Revolution as a private soldier.

Thomas Kent of England came to Gloucester, Mass., prior to 1643. He had a house and land in what is now known as Essex, Mass. His oldest son, Thomas, probably born in England, was among those drafted in King Philip's war, Nov. 30, 1675. He purchased lands at West Gloucester, since known as Kent's Landing. He married Joan —, and their oldest son was Josiah, b. March 31, 1660, who married Mary Lufkin, at Gloucester, April 17, 1689. Their children, b. at Gloucester, were:—

- I. Mary, b. Jan. 26, 1690; m., probably, John Bond, 1722.

No. 135.

William Kelly, b. in West Newbury, Mass., Oct. 11, 1744, was a son of John and Hannah (Hale) Kelly. His parents soon after their marriage moved from West Newbury, to Salem, and lived first near the summit of Spicket Hill, but later, near the southern base of the road leading from Salem village to Scotland Hill, Haverhill, Mass. William graduated from Harvard College in 1767: studied divinity with Rev. Henry True. He was adm. a member of the church May, 1770, and Feb. 5, 1772, was ordained as pastor over the church in Warner.

While an undergraduate in college, he taught school several winters in Atkinson, and for a certain time after his graduation. He mar. Lavina, daughter of Rev. Abner Bayley of Salem, Feb. 24, 1773. He died of apoplexy in Warner, May 18, 1813, and was the parent of five children. From Long's sketch of Warner: "In the spring of 1771, Rev. Mr. Kelly was employed to preach as a candidate, and in November following, he received a call to settle in the ministry with a salary of 40 pounds the first year, to increase 1 pound and ten shillings a year, till it should amount to sixty pounds, and twenty cords of wood annually."

"On the day of his ordination, a Congregational church was gathered, consisting of seven male members." At that time there were but fifteen houses in Warner, and about as many glass windows. "The house built by him, was the first built in Warner with two stories." He was dismissed, at his own request, Mar. 1, 1801, and afterwards preached occasionally in Warner, and vicinity. It is also written of him, that "he was a small-sized, fair-looking man, rather liberal in his religious views, as compared with the orthodoxy of his times."

- VII. Austin, b. April 25, 1768; m. Sally Marston; d. Dec. 6, 1806, in Hampstead. (See p. 412, Vol. 1.)

Jacob Shute, father of Sarah (Shute) George, was of French origin. He was a son of a French Protestant, or Huguenot, who fled from Paris on the revocation of the edict of Nantes, and took refuge in Ireland. When 17 years old, disliking the trade to which he had been apprenticed, he ran away, with a man named Dawen, and took secret passage in a hold of a ship for this country. They remained concealed till driven out by hunger. On arriving in Newburyport they, having nothing with which to pay their fare, were sold (their service, for a time) to pay it. They were both bought by Capt. Ebenezer Eastman, of Haverhill, and served him until twenty-one years of age. He married Sarah George, and had children: Sarah, mar. Austin George (above): John and Elizabeth, born at Pennecook. His wife d. January, 1745, and he married a widow, Evan, and had two daughters, that died young. He died in Concord, Feb. 16, 1794, aged 94 years.

According to tradition, Ebenezer Eastman's team of six yoke of oxen was the first to cross the wilderness from Haverhill, Mass., to Concord, or Pennecook, and Jacob Shute was the driver, who, in order to get safely down Sugar Ball bank, felled a pine tree and chained it top foremost to the cart to stay the motion of it down the precipice (Bouton's History of Concord).

Shute afterwards settled in Pennecook, and was one of the first thirty-six men to settle there.

He and his wife owned the covenant in Hampstead (see list), Jan. 11, 1761. He was a deacon of the church at Weare, and "was very pious about keeping the Sabbath." It is related that "one day he was riding horseback, with his wife behind him, to meeting. As they jogged along they saw a fox chasing a rabbit, both jumping over and under a log, the rabbit dodging and very much frightened. Mrs. Emerson wanted her husband to get off the horse and scare the fox away. Deacon Emerson said it would be profaning the Sabbath. God would be angry with him if he did, and so he rode on and left the poor bunny to his fate." His wife, in telling the story, said "her husband was a little particular, but she could not tell this time whether he was too pious or too lazy." He died in 1814.

Rev. True Kimball, b. in Plaistow, Jan. 28, 1757, a son of Jonathan and Abigail (True) Kimball, who was elected deacon of the North Parish Church in 1739 (see No. 21). He was graduated in the class of 1778, at Harvard College, and studied for the ministry. He preached in Amherst and Newbury, Mass., and his final charge was at Hampstead as a supply, where he died. For several months before his death he was partially deranged, and was complained of by Dea. Joseph French "as walking disorderly before the church." He "was placed on probation" several times for the "fault of neglecting the public worship and ordinances of the gospel." "Deacon French said in church meeting that 'Brother True Kimball told him that he denied the entire depravity of human nature, and has also said, as nearly as I can remember, that the devils in hell are not wholly depraved.' On account of these things it is my desire that the church will admonish and deal with my brother Kimball according to the rules of the gospel."

On April 20, 1814, the committee of the church, Moses Little, Abner Rogers, and John True, presented resolutions recommending dismissal from the church fellowship, which was done.

The following account of his death appears on the church records: "On the 17th day of July, 1816, about 10 o'clock A. M., Mr. Kimball put an end to his life in his barn, with the long reins of his chaise, without being supposed of such a design, only as he seemed to be inclined to Universalism and infidelity."

No. 206.

Mary Harriman, b. in Hampstead, June 5, 1790, a daughter of Laban and Molly (Harriman) Harriman of Hampstead (see No. 84). She was adm. to the church "by faith and baptism," Sept. 7, 1806, "age 16 years." She was afterwards "found to be inclined to Universalism," and admonished in church meeting as follows from the church records. "Samuel Little made complaint that Mary Harriman was neglecting the public worship and ordinances of God's house, in consequence of which the church chose Dea. Moses Little, Job Kent, and Lt. John Harriman, as a committee to request Mary to meet the church, Nov. 27, 1810, at the house of the pastor, Rev. John Kelly, to give a report of her neglect." She did not appear. The church then chose Robert Chase and Dea. Little to wait on Mary, and show her the nature and importance of the discipline of the church, and to request her to attend the next church meeting.

The committee reported that they had conversed with her upon the subject of duty, and sentiments and views were requested, one by one, to report to the church, what reasons Mary Harriman assigned, why she neglected her duty, and why she did not appear and answer for herself to the church. And from all that was said upon the subject, it appears evident to all that Mary Harriman was unwilling to be subject to the ordinances of the gospel, or to submit to the order or discipline of the Church of Christ. It also appeared that she was utterly opposed to the doctrines of grace, as they are revealed in the holy Scriptures, and held by this church.

And as she also neglected to hear the church after being repeatedly requested to attend and answer for herself, the church came to the unanimous vote that Mary Harriman be cut off from being a member of this church, as an incorrigible offender against Christ, and his church. The church then chose Deacon Moses Little and Mr. Abner Rogers to join with the pastor in addressing a letter to said Mary Harriman upon the subject of her excommunication. And concluded with prayer to God,

A copy of the letter sent :—

To Mary Harriman :—

This letter is to remind you that, in compliance with your earnest request, and in hopes that you would adorn the Christian profession by walking in all of the commandments and ordinances of the Lord in a blameless manner, you was admitted into the church of Christ, in Hampstead, on the 7th of Sept., 1806. But as you have for a long time neglected the public worship and ordinance of the gospel, and our brother, Samuel Little, having taken the steps with you as Christ has directed in the 18th of Matthew, and you having neglected to hear him and others, he has told it to the church.

The church has, therefore, according to the rules of the gospel, called upon you to give the reasons of the neglect of duty.

And for purpose of attending to this subject, they met at the house of the pastor, on the 27th of November, 1810; but you did not appear as you were requested by a letter of the committee.

The church, therefore, willing to treat you with all tenderness, and meekness, and love, sent another committee to converse with you, to show you the nature and use of the discipline of the gospel and to request you to attend the next church meeting which was to be held at the house of Deacon Moses Little, on the 25th of December, 1810.

But as you did not attend nor hear the church after solemn prayer, serious consideration and mature deliberation, the church came to their unanimous conclusion that you appeared to be determined not to do your duty, nor to submit to any order or discipline of the church, and therefore the church was under the necessity, in obedience to Christ, of cutting you off from being a member of this church.

For Christ says, "If he neglects to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and publican," and the apostle says, "A man that is a heretic, after the first and second admonition, reject," Titus 3: 10, 11.

An heretic is one whether man or woman who adheres to his or her own opinions, and rejects the Scriptures as being the word of God, and neglects duty contrary to his or her own solemn covenant engagements, see also Rom. 16: 17, 18. Read also 2d Thes., 3d chapter, 6th and 14th verses, and you will see that if we obey Christ, and his inspired apostles, we must reject those who walk disorderly and openly neglect their duty, and will not hear the church.

But our earnest prayer to God is that you may be brought to see the sinfulness of your own heart and the evil of your ways, and that you may be brought to repentance of all of your sins, and humbly submit to the righteousness of God, through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and that you will give a proof of this by submitting to the rules and ordinances of the gospel, as he has commanded his people to observe them.

Should this be your happy case, then we should be under obligation to treat you as a true penitent disciple of Christ, according as we are directed in Cor., 2d chap. and 2d Thes. 3: 15.

But if you remain obstinate, and will not be admonished to hear the church, nor to return to God by humble repentance, and by faith in Christ, your case must be dreadful.

For Christ says to his church, " Verily I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall find on earth shall be found in heaven, and whatsoever ye shall lose on earth shall be lost in heaven."

Be persuaded to believe the words of Christ, and take warning and repent of your sins that you may be saved.

JOHN KELLY—Pastor.

No. 209.

Lucy Berry, b. in Middleton, Mass., June 12, 1778, a daughter of Nathaniel and Susannah (Esty) Berry of Middleton: was admitted to be a member in full communion with this church, Sept. 2, 1810. Nathaniel Berry was born Sept. 16, 1736, and died in 1812. Susannah Esty was a daughter of Jonathan and Susannah (Munroe) Esty, and was born Jan. 26, 1741, and died May 27, 1827. The Berrys of Middleton were farmers and highly respectable people, reputed to be possessed of considerable means.

Lucy Berry married Isaac Colby, born in Derry, then Londonderry, Feb. 15, 1777, at Middleton, where he was working as a carpenter, on June 23, 1801. After a brief residence in Danvers, Mass., they moved to Hampstead village. The land records of Rockingham county show that Isaac Colby, wheelwright, purchased from Daniel Kimball, blacksmith, for $850, on Dec. 29, 1804, a tract of land partly in Hampstead and partly in Londonderry, containing by estimation forty acres, more or less, and bounded as follows, viz.: Beginning at a stake and stone on the southerly side of the road leading from Hampstead to Chester, and by land of Joseph Brickett, thence southwesterly by said Brickett's land 160 rods to a road leading to Londonderry, thence northerly by said road about 40 rods to land of Jabez Hoit, thence northwesterly by said Hoit's land, about 160 rods, to the aforesaid road, thence southeasterly by the road about 40 rods to the bound first mentioned."

The place thus described was the family home for the next seven years.

In 1811, Oct. 28, Isaac Colby bought of Thomas Huse, for $4500, Governor's Island, in Island Pond, and the old Wentworth mansion thenceforth was the home of the family, until he deeded the island to Lucy Everett, of Boston, Mass., Sept. 8, 1815.

The Colbys then moved to what is now known as Herrick farm and mill, between Derry Dock and Island Pond, which previously had been owned by the father (David, 2d), and the grandfather (David, 1st), of Isaac Colby, and there they dwelt until 1846.

Isaac Colby, though a wheelwright and farmer, was best known in the region as a builder, and according to tradition framed many of the best houses in Hampstead street and in East Derry, one of the last in the latter village being that known as the "Elms Hotel."

His wife having become a member of this church, Sept. 2, 1810, and having five children baptized in the church May 6, 1812, the family apparently worshipped in Hampstead until 1833. At that time Mrs. Lucy (Berry) Colby was dismissed from the church to the First Church at East Derry, with which church her daughter Lucy united in 1831, her son, James Knight, in 1833, and her son, George W., in 1838.

In 1846, when the infirmities of age led Isaac Colby and his wife to give up the management of the farm and mill (now Herrick) to their son, George Washington, they went to live, after a short stay in Boston, with their son, James K. Colby, in St. Johnsbury, Vt.

Isaac Colby joined the church by profession of faith, July 10, 1853. The few remaining years of their lives were spent peacefully and happily in the home of their son.

Lucy Berry Colby died after a brief illness, Nov. 7, 1854, aged 76 years. She was surrounded by her daughter Lucy, her sons, Nathaniel and James K., and when the latter asked her, shortly before her death, if she would like to recover, she replied, "No, why should I? I have lived to a good old age," and then bolstered up in bed, surprised all by singing the verse beginning, "Fly swift around, ye wheels of time."

Isaac Colby died March 24, 1856, in his 80th year. The bodies of both Isaac Colby and his wife were buried in the Colby lot in the Mt. Pleasant cemetery in St. Johnsbury, Vt., where are also interred the bodies of their sons, Nathaniel B. and James K. Colby, and their wives.

The church records in Hampstead contain in the records of baptism the following entry, made while the Colby family dwelt in the Wentworth mansion on Governor's Island: "Nathaniel Baree (should be Berry), Jesse Hoyt, Allen Lucy, and James Knight (known as James Kelsea Colby in his mature years, but evidently receiving his name from their family physician, Dr. James Knight) (see 202). Children of Isaac Colby, baptized on account of his wife, May 12, 1812."

The biographical record of these children is as follows:—

- I. Nathaniel Berry, b. in Hampstead, Sept. 13, 1803; was for many years master carpenter and superintendent of bridges of the Boston & Worcester Railroad. He died in St. Johnsbury Vt., July 5, 1864.
- II. Jesse Hoyt, b. on Governor's Island, March 26, 1806; was a wheelwright and mechanic. He died in Boston, Mass.; m. Nov. 23, 1826; and buried in the cemetery at East Derry.
- III. Allen Colby, b. on Governor's Island, Feb. 24, 1808; was a builder and carpenter, and had charge of the construction of the Kennebec & Portland Railway, between Brunswick and Bath, Me. Afterwards for twenty-five years he was roadmaster and superintendent of bridges of that railroad. Upon his retirement, for three years he was agent for the Bruns-

- wick cotton mills, and a manufacturer of yarn, and a railroad derrick which he invented. He died at Brunswick, Me., Jan. 3, 1890, and was buried at that place.
- IV. Lucy Colby, b. on Governor's Island, Jan. 30, 1810; resided with her parents during their lives, and afterwards with her brother, James Knight. Dr. Isaac Tewksbury (No. 377), once wrote in a Boston paper, of Samuel Kelly, in regard to long fasting. “I have known of two persons, one of whom fasted fifty-five days, and the other forty-five days, but both died.

The first, was Samuel, son of Rev. John Kelly of Hampstead. He was of delicate constitution, and nervous temperament, and contrary to the advice of his physician, he studied medicine. After receiving his diploma, his health began to fail him, and he went west, where he remained two years, when becoming deranged, he returned to New Hampshire, and was found near Derry, fantastically attired, and a raving maniac. He was taken to an insane asylum, where he remained a few months, when he was returned to his father's home as incurable, and as he was daily becoming more violent, acting under the advice of his physician (Dr.

Tewksbury), his parents had a large cage constructed, and in this he was incarcerated. The cage was provided with a bed, and other needed conveniences, and although food was offered him, and placed in the cage at regular intervals, yet he persistently refused it for fifty-five days. He, however, drank a large quantity of water. At his death, he was greatly emaciated. A post mortem examination was held, and the interior organs were found to be greatly inflamed, no one more than the other. The physician who made the examination, found no evidence of food having been taken into the stomach for a long time, and as a strict watch was kept over him, both day and night, his long fast was attested to by the testimony of reliable persons."

Samuel Kelly was adm. to the church Feb. 8, 1824; d. Jan. 12, 1834, and was buried in the Hampstead village cemetery.

Dr. Francis Jewett Stevens. He writes: "Boxford, Mass., July 29, 1902. I was born in Gilford, June 20, 1824, the oldest son of John Sherburn and Lucy (Jewett) Stevens. My father was born in Kingston, and was a grandson of Col. Ebenezer Stevens, who was for many years a prominent man in that place. My home during my minority was on the farm, and my life was the same as other boys on a farm. My parents had both been school teachers, and until

I was seven or eight years of age they taught me at home, as the school was too far for me to go, especially in cold or stormy weather.

DR. STEVENS, NO. 419.

My academical education, or what would be now called High School instruction, was in Gilford and Pembroke academies, in which I passed some three school years. I worked on the farm, vacations, and taught school the winter before I was twenty-one years of age. In May, 1845, I went to Schenectady, N. Y., where I was a clerk in a book and music store for several months, when the store changed hands, and I soon began the study of dentistry, and for about three years continued the study and practice, and commenced the study of medicine. I then went back to New Hampshire, and continued the study of medicine with the late Dr. G. W. Garland, of Meredith Bridge (now Laconia), and received the degree of M. D. at the Albany Medical College, in 1851.

In July (I think) of 1851, I commenced practice in Hampstead, where I remained four years. Jan. 1, 1852, I was married to Susan Elizabeth Morrill, daughter of the late Zebedee and Lucy (Potter) Morrill. She was born June 20, 1826, and died in Haverhill, Mass., February, 1873. Soon after our marriage we took letters from the church at Meredith Bridge and united with the church at Hampstead (Dec. 26, 1852). Some time after moving to Haverhill (April, 1858), we transferred our church relations to the Center church in Haverhill, and when the North Church was formed we were among the charter members, from which I have not withdrawn.

I was married, the second time, to Miss Lydia Helen Gould, of Boxford, youngest daughter of the late Daniel and Lydia (Batchelder) Gould, April 16, 1874.

I remained in Haverhill until the spring of 1878, when I removed to Laconia, N. H., to care for my father, who was so old and infirm that I felt it to be my duty to go and attend to him. My health was also in such a condition that a change to the open air was desirable. After his death, in March, 1880, we moved to this town, November, 1880, at the earnest solicitations of my wife's parents, who were very old, and we still remain here. For some three or four years after coming here I had an office in Haverhill, but finding it was affecting my health unfavorably, I gave it up, and have done but little professional work in dentistry or medicine, since we have as much land as I care for or am able to cultivate. I occasionally do a bit of dentistry for friends and prescribe for their ailments, and once in a while survey a piece of land, and write some and read quite a good deal, so that I am not idle : I do not care to rust out.

I have never sought office, but I have held office a good deal of the time. I was a member of the school committee about three years in Hampstead, and for three years in Haverhill, and declined a re-election, and have nearly completed my twenty-first consecutive year on the school committee in this town : a large part of the time I have been superintendent in this town. I was twice elected representative to the Massachusetts Legislature from Haverhill, and was for several years a coroner while in Haverhill, and I believe I can truly say that I never spent a day in 'lectioneering for myself.

In closing I will add that I have long felt that I would like to visit old Hampstead, where I have not been for more than twenty-five years. I received invitations to the town and church celebrations, and in both instances had to forego the anticipated pleasure, for in that town I spent four years as happily as in any place I have ever lived, and I remember many kind friends, many of them gone.

While I do not remember the " little school girl " whom I relieved of odontalgia, I do distinctly remember your father."

No. 435.

James Thorndike Brickett, b. in Hampstead, April 5, 1841, a son of Moody H. and Laura A. (Putnam) Brickett (Nos. 292, 381). He was admitted to the church by letter from the Winter Street Church in Haverhill, Mass., July 1, 1859. Dis. and rec. to the North Congregational Church at Haverhill, December, 1864. After serving in the civil war, he married Mary Frances Parker, of Groveland, Mass., and settled in Haverhill, where they had three children born:—

- I. James Edward, m. Mary Moody; reside in Haverhill. Children: Margerite, Caleb, and Dorothy.
- II. Annette Putnam. After pursuing a course of training at Northfield, Mass., and Chicago, has served as assistant pastor in Minneapolis, teacher in the Indian schools at Fort Berthold, North Dakota, and of the Necess of Mississippi; mar. Dr. John Sturgis of Auburn, Me., Mar. 4, 1903.
- III. Helen Louise, m. Dr. John Sturgis, of Auburn, Me., in 1895. She d., leaving an infant son, in 1900.

James T. Brickett was killed in the autumn of 1876. "He was on his way to Groveland, where his wife was visiting, and as he stepped from the car it suddenly started, throwing him under the wheels. He was so severely injured that he died in a few hours."

Dr. Crowell of Haverhill spoke of him at his death: "In all of the walks and relations of life Mr. Brickett proved himself consistent. His convictions of duty were clear and decided, and based upon a consciousness of high moral obligations. Governed by this principle, he entered the service of his country in the hour of its great peril, and proved true to his professions of loyalty. In his Christian experience he was modest, humble, and sincere, but bold and uncompromising in his defence of truth, taking as his standard the revealed word of God, always ready to give a reason for the faith that was in him. His relation to the church, the Sunday school, to his associates and to his family, were strong and constant, tenderly endearing him to all who came under his influence. His funeral was largely attended by relatives and friends, members of his Sunday school class, with their teacher, and fellow-workmen." Dr. Kingsbury of Bradford conducted the funeral service.

Jona. Carlton Little. b. in Hampstead, Aug. 19, 1847, a son of Nathaniel H. and Almira (Tewksbury) Little (see Nos. 167, 227). He married Lucy Ann Sawyer, July 26, 1870, who was b. in Boston, Mass. He was a cooper by trade. He was admitted to the church Nov. 5, 1865. As a young man he always took a great interest in everything that would further the work for good in every department of the church. In the Sabbath school in which he was a teacher, he was beloved by the little children of his class, and left loving messages to them in his last hours. For the older members he was always thoughtful, and ready to step aside to give a welcome. He was chosen leader of the choir in 1868, and held the place as long as he lived. His father had been chorister many years before. John C. Little was a noble-hearted, Christian man. It has been said by a friend, "It was John C. Little's life that led me in the right way." Truly "His works do follow him." He died at the home of his brother, in Atkinson, March 5, 1874.

which was under the charge of the G. A. R. About fifty of the comrades, with as many members of the Relief Corps, and many Sons of Veterans attended. Ward Post No. 90, G. A. R. adopted the following resolutions at his death.

“Again the angel of death has taken one of our members, this time from among those comparatively young, one who was active and hopeful for our future life as a Post, and one on whom we had gladly placed the rank of senior vice commander. With saddened hearts we commemorate his virtues, therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of our senior vice commander, we have lost a true friend and comrade, the faithful soldier, the active worker, the good and upright neighbor. We tender to the family of the deceased, our sympathy in this hour of grief, and pray for heaven’s blessing upon his wife and children. Their grief is our burden, and we will do all in our power to help and comfort them.

Reminded by our loss that we must work while it is day, we will renew our efforts for the best interest of our Post, remembering the sick, and gladly ministering to their needs with a soldier’s zeal and kindness, awaiting the summons that must come to us all, in humble trust in God, our Father, who doeth all things well.

Resolved, that this minute be placed upon our records, and a copy be sent to the family of our late worthy and respected comrade, Frank H. Little. George J. Sanger, W. W. Eaton, and William T. Damon.”

His friends were many, as they found him always the same kind man, with a cheerful word for all. He always looked on the bright side, and even when near his end of life would always say, “I shall be better in a few days.”

No. 562.

Sarah Elizabeth Heald. It was a pleasure to call on Mrs. Chandler, the oldest member of the church, Oct. 24, 1901, at her cosy home, No. 10 Union street, Haverhill, Mass., and hear from her the life story of her ninety years. Showing very few of the infirmities of age, and with a remarkable memory, with heartfelt greeting, and with the deepest interest in my work of compiling the church family history, she said: "I was born in Carlisle, Mass., in poverty and want, Nov. 13, 1811, of poor, but highly respectable parents. My father, Paul Heald, was a carpenter by trade, and died in or near Buffalo, N. Y., of typhoid fever, in 1811, five weeks before I was born. My mother, Sarah (Nutting) Heald, died in Carlisle, and was buried there, in 1851, aged 67 years. My parents had three children. Paul married Elizabeth Richards of Atkinson, and had children: John, now of Springfield, Mass., Isaac (deceased), and Benjamin R. Heald, of Atkinson. Benjamin Hurd Heald married Francis Bowers of Billerica, Mass., and resided there until his death, in 1897, aged 89 years. He was a farmer and stone mason. He was a fine singer, and led the choir at the Unitarian Church in Billerica for a number of years. They had no children. My parents were very much devoted to music, an art which has descended to their posterity.

I united with the Merrimac Street Congregational Church in Lowell, Mass., in 1828, the year the church was built. I was about seventeen years of age, and remember the words used the day I was admitted. "Sanctify through thy truth, Thy word is truth." I was a leader in the church choir for several years in Rev. Mr. Blanchard's church, with Miss Abbott, an aunt of Emma Abbott, the celebrated singer. I was a member of the Handel and Haydn Society.

I married, first, Deacon Liberty Frost, in 1836, a son of John and Sarah (Adams) Frost, of Jaffrey, N. H., where he was born. He was an overseer in the dressing room in a Lowell mill, and died from a cold taken while washing sheep in Jaffrey, in 1838. He was a deacon in the Second Baptist Church in Lowell several years, a leader in the singing class, superintendent of the Sunday school, and a member of the old Mechanics' Association of Lowell. Dea. Frost was one of those Christians who exhibit the truth of the gospel. There was scarcely a meeting, either on the Sabbath or during the week, in which he was not in his seat, and his solemn exhortation and fervent prayer was not soon forgotten. He left behind a bright example of consistent piety, of fidelity and affection, which it would be well for Zion were it more extensively imitated.

We had one child, Lemuel Porter Frost, b. May, 1836, and d., aged six weeks. He was named for our minister.

I married Abner Woodman Chandler, b. in Atkinson,

WASHINGTON NOYES. (SEE NO. 563.)

April 6, 1815, a son of Joseph and Polly (Woodman) Chandler, in 1840. I bought the farm of Dea. Jonathan Kent in 1849, and moved there (now known as the Charles Damon place in Hampstead). The place is historic in interest, because of the Kent ancestors of Revolutionary times.

I united with the Congregational church in Hampstead by letter from the Lowell church, May 6, 1877, and am a present member there. I was always connected with the musical work of the church until we moved to Haverhill, in 1889. We had two children:—

- I. Orren Porter, b. Jan. 20, 1841; d., of consumption, unmarried, April 26, 1881.
- II. Abbie Frances, b. Feb. 9, 1849. She was educated in the public schools of Hampstead, and at Atkinson and Pinkerton Academies. Of natural musical ability, she was further educated in music at the Boston Conservatory of Music, and under such private teachers as Charles R. Adams and Guilmette. She was connected with musical circles in Hampstead, and sang at the North Church in Haverhill for sixteen consecutive years. She is now my faithful, self-sacrificing daughter, devoted to me in my feeble age." (See p. 132, Mem. Hist., Vol. 1, and the account of the 150th anniversary exercises of the church in this volume.)

No. 563.

Sabrina Drew Corson, b. in Lebanon, Me., Dec. 22, 1840, a daughter of Nathaniel and Mary (Fernald) Corson (see pp. 369, 358, Vol. 1). She married Washington Noyes, in 1868, who d. in Hampstead, Oct. 25, 1888, aged 63 years. She was admitted to the church May 6, 1877, by letter from the Free Will Baptist Church at Great Falls, having joined that church when about 16 years old. She is connected with the ladies' societies, and in other ways is an earnest worker for the church. She is favorably known as a writer of verse for neighborhood entertainments, and among her rhymes are "The Old Elm," "Wiwurna Cottage," and "The Sewing Circle."

Mrs. Little has from early womanhood been an earnest and enthusiastic adherent of the Methodist denomination: becoming a resident of Hampstead, she united with the Congregational Church as "a church home." She, however, true to her faith, was instrumental in having Methodist services, and a Sunday school, in No. 4 school house, as often as convenient, and about June, 1882, she mentioned to her Sunday school class the hope that some day they would have a building of their own in which to hold services, and asked who would bring the first ten cents towards it, which was brought the next Sunday by Estelle, the little daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Carr) Huston of West Hampstead. From then on, Mrs. Little used every effort to secure contributions, and succeeded in raising $500 before any others helped her in the work of collecting funds, and herself raised $800 of the $1100 of which their church building, which was dedicated in 1884, cost. She has been president of the Ladies' Aid Society of that church two years. They have children:—

She was admitted to the church March 1, 1885, and was dis. and rec. to unite with the Trinitarian Congregational Church at Northfield, Mass., Oct. 18, 1894. Miss Williams writes: "Carney, Lincoln County,

Oklahoma, March 29, 1902: After teaching for five years subsequent to my graduation from the Hampstead High School, in 1889, I went to Northfield Seminary in 1894, where I studied for two years. Here a desire to do Christian work was fostered and developed, and in December, 1896, the Lord thrust me forth to active service. At that time I went to Barrington, where I remained in evangelistic work until the following September, when I was permitted to extend my preparation for more active service by going to the Bible Institute founded by D. L. Moody in Chicago. While in the Bible Institute I studied and had different forms of Christian work assigned to me for every week, such as house to house visitation, meetings for policemen at the police stations, cottage prayer meetings, women's meetings, children's meetings, Sunday school classes. From there I went at once into evangelistic effort, and was engaged in Bible teaching for some evangelists. In June, 1899, I went to Kansas to engage in missionary and evangelistic work. While in Kansas I supplied one church for three months and another for seven months in the capacity of pastor, or partially so. I worked in other churches, too, but in those others my work was more like that of an evangelist.

In May, of 1901, I came to Oklahoma, where my summer was spent in working in two small, weak churches, and teaching the day and Bible school. In October I began my duties as principal of the school here in Carney, which is a small town. One of the churches is located here, and I have been acting as pastor of it, as well as teaching this winter. I was called to the pastorate last fall, and was formally aprobed in October, 1901.

I am glad of the help that the church in Hampstead gave me when I was younger. May God still use it in forming character and developing a Christian life for many another one."

Nov. 29, 1902, Miss Williams writes from Alvaretta, Okla., where she is stationed doing enjoyable work, and also is corresponding secretary of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Territorial Union of Oklahoma and Indian Territories, and sent the following original lines as "quite true to her life."

"THE MAGIC TOUCH.

The earth was dark, and dead, and cold,
 And bleak and desert the barren wold;
 No trace of life, no beauty fair,
 No charm of Nature to hold me there.

The soft rains fell, and soft winds blew,
 The touch was gentle, but each root knew,
 A thrill of life came rushing then,
 And earth burst forth into life again.

My life was dark, and dead, and cold,
 While back on itself it inward rolled;
 No trace of love that brightens life,
 No kindly action, but discord, strife.

My soul was swept by breath divine,
 And to that barren, cold heart of mine,
 A burst of love and kindness came,
 And earth its sisterhood then could claim."

March, 1841, and moved to Danville when an infant. He made a public profession of religion and united with the church in 1862. He was in the 8th N. H. Vol., and went with his regiment to New Orleans, and was dismissed on account of ill health. In 1866 he entered the theological school at New Hampton, N. H., and remained nearly three years, when failing health compelled him to leave the school. In 1869 he received a call to the church at East Andover. While he was there the church edifice was burned, and through his efforts mainly and his encouragement a more commodious structure was erected. In 1872 he went to Chicago, Ill., where he received a call, but the climate being unfavorable, he came to Boston in September of 1872, and entered on a pastorate of three years. There he effected the sale of the church property on North Bennett street, and secured a place farther up town for their church, the Freeman place chapel, where he preached the last part of his pastorate. In April, 1877, he again went to East Andover, in hopes that the climate might be beneficial, but preached two Sundays, and died Aug. 7, 1877. He married Mary Alice Hoyt. They had four children, two of whom died in infancy, and—

They owned the covenant, April, 1754. He died Sept. 21, 1759, aged 37 years. He was with Wolfe at the storming of Quebec, and while climbing the Heights of Abraham his foot slipped, and he fell to the bottom, which caused such injuries as to result in his death, and he was taken back to Oswego, where he died. Capt. Jacob Bayley's Journal reads, "Oswego, Friday, Sept. 21, 1759. Cool morning, but pleasant. About 2 o'clock in the afternoon dies Otho Stevens after a long and tedious illness of 22 days, much lamented by his relations and friends, he being a loving brother and a faithful friend. He was sensible to the last breath he drew, and sensible of his approaching near another world, which did not in the least ruffle his spirits. But he seemed to have his hope firmly placed in God." They had children, b. in Hampstead:—

- I. Abiah, b. Aug. 23, 1753.
- II. Simon, b. March 14, 1755; mar. Elizabeth Boynton. He died June 19, 1825. She was born Nov. 10, 1754, and d. Feb. 9, 1843. They lived and died in Canterbury, where they had twelve children, of whom John, who married Submit Newcomb, was one, who moved to Boscawen (now Webster), where their eight children were born, and his wife, Submit, died and was buried there. He married a second time, and moved to Illinois, with his sons. They have descendants in Princeton, Ill.
- III. Jesse, b. Jan. 22, 1757.
- IV. Jacob, b. March 16, 1759; d., aged one year.

After Otho Stevens' death, in 1757, Abigail, his wife, married Deacon David Morrill, of Canterbury, Dec. 28, 1763, and moved there with her children. The old house is still standing, and owned by a descendant, Mr. Charles Sargent, of Canterbury, and is in good condition. Abigail (Emerson) (Stevens) Morrill died June 30, 1833, aged 95 years and seven months, and was buried in the Center cemetery at Canterbury. She has been noted as "a remarkably fine woman." Her children, b. in Canterbury, were:—

- V. Reuben Morrill, b. Oct. 18, 1764.

Benjamin, on the death of his father, in 1759, succeeded to the care of his mother and younger sisters. Before the Revolutionary war he was a first lieutenant of a troop of horse in the N. H. militia. On the alarm at Lexington he literally left his plow in the furrow, and started for the scene of action, and was in active service at Bunker Hill, though not regularly enrolled. He m. Lydia, b. July 2, 1738, daughter of Nicholas White, of Plaistow, and granddaughter of Hon. John Gilman, of Exeter, Dec. 9, 1762. When the Revolutionary war broke out he was father of six children, ranging from one to ten years of age, and with his family he could not enlist, as he would, but more than half of the whole term of war he was, in one form or another, connected with the service of his country. He was present and took part in the battle of Saratoga, in 1777, and assisted in conducting the prisoners to their permanent quarters.

They owned the covenant in Hampstead, Dec. 15, 1765, and in June, 1780, joined the North Parish Congregational Church at Haverhill, and in November of the same year was chosen the first deacon of the Congregational church in Atkinson, under Rev. Stephen Peabody. In the summer of 1781 his health began to fail, and he died, of scrofulous disease of the throat, December, 1781. His wife died in Newbury, Vt., Nov. 14, 1791. Benjamin Hale made a will just before his death, which was proved in the probate court at Exeter, Jan. 8, 1782, in which he made his wife sole executrix, and the residue to his sons, Joshua and Nicholas, they paying debts, and a certain sum to the other children. He was supposed to be possessed of much property, but the losses caused by the war, it was charged through the bad faith of a neighbor who was the chief adviser of the family, they were left almost penniless, and an insolvent estate. Their negro servant, Cato, was given his freedom. The widow remained with her daughter, Hannah, in Atkinson, till 1789, when she was given a home with a bachelor brother in Newbury (Dr. Samuel White). Here she lived till her death, in 1791. "She was a woman of rare excellence, of sweet and gentle disposition, combined with great firmness and energy of character." They had children, b. in Atkinson:—

LITTLE.

Samuel Little, oldest son of Daniel and Abiah (Clement) Little (No. 13, ch. mem.), married, first, Sarah Sewell, in 1736, and, second, Sarah Follansbee, Dec., 1738. He resided in Atkinson, on the farm of the late Greenleaf Clarke, and later moved to Hampstead, where he died, Jan. 16, 1798. He was a prominent citizen in town, and served as selectman many times, and as moderator twelve times. He was an active patriot, and a member of the Provincial Congress. He also held a magistrate's commission, and did much legal business in town. He was a member of the church at North Parish, having been admitted May 22, 1737. A letter written by him to his daughter Sarah, when he was over eighty years of age, is of interest: "I, your aged father, have great cause to bless God for giving me so many likely children, and in so good credit in the world, and granting them so comfortable and affluent circumstances with respect to things of this life, and so virtuously disposed to secure a better life when this life shall end. May the best of blessings rest upon them and theirs to the latest posterity is the unceasing prayer of their affectionate father."

The children of Samuel and Sarah (Follansbee) Little were:—

- I. Moses, mar. Mary Noyes (see Nos. 180 and 181).
- II. Joshua, b. Sept. 17, 1741; mar., first, Lydia Brown; second, mar. Mrs. Ruhamah (Burnham) Blaisdell. He served in the Revolutionary war as lieutenant, at Castine and Crown Point, and as captain in the State militia. He was one of the first settlers in Whitefield, Me., where he was an extensive lumber merchant. They had five children, all b. in Whitefield.

- III. Mary, b. Aug. 10, 1743; mar. Stephen, son of Deacon Stephen Webster, of Haverhill, Mass. He was an officer in the Revolutionary war, and also took part in the battle of Bunker Hill. She was the mother of nine children, three of whom d. young. The oldest, Stephen Peabody Webster, mar. Mary, daughter of Rev. Stephen Peabody, the first minister of Atkinson. She was one of the two first ladies who demanded an equal education at Atkinson Academy, in 1793. The youngest daughter, Lydia, mar. John Vose, Esq., and were grandparents of John Vose Hazen, professor of civic engineering and graphics at Dartmouth College.
- IV. Abigail, b. Sept. 15, 1745; mar. Gen. Nathaniel Peabody, of Atkinson (see biographical and other sketches by William Cleves Todd, pub. 1901).
- V. Sarah, b. Aug. 20, 1747; mar. Enoch, son of Edmund Sawyer (see No. 45). They resided in Hampstead, later in Goffstown, and died in Antrim, Dec. 5, 1829. She was the mother of ten children. She has been spoken of as a noble Christian woman, who left her impress upon her children, all of whom were church members, and nearly every one of her many grandchildren.
- VI. Daniel, b. March 19, 1750; mar. Hannah Mooers, daughter of John, of Hampstead. He was a farmer, and died Jan. 13, 1841. Their children were:—
1. John, b. March 24, 1776; mar. Sarah Little, and removed to Union, Me., where he was engaged in the manufacture of lime casks. He died there, without issue, Dec. 21, 1855.
 2. Moses, b. March 15, 1778; m. Mary Johnson, of Hampstead. He was a carpenter and builder, also a farmer, at the homestead of Mr. Tristram Little, his son. He died March 10, 1831. They had children:

ISAAC HEATH.

Second son of Stephen and Mollie (Chandler) Heath. Born in Sandown, N. H., March 3d, 1798. His early life was devoted to the work which usually fell to the lot of the farmer's sons of over a century ago. His education was obtained at the district school in his native town. Remaining with his parents until the year of his majority, then engaging in several enterprises on his own account, including the management of the well-known "Emerson" farm at Hampstead (afterwards owned by the late Dr. J. C. Eastman.) for nine years, and here acquired a reputation for faithful work, which he retained through life. While engaged in this work he purchased of Josiah Webster, in 1833, the farm on which he spent the remainder of his days. (See cut, Vol. 1.)

On April 9, 1839, he united in marriage with Emma Chase Jaques, of West Newbury, Mass., who died Nov. 2, 1856. Three children, Mary Ellen, Charles Moody, and Isaac William, were born of this union.

In 1857 he married, for a second wife, Susan Jaques, who lived in Hampstead. She died in 1892.

Mr. Heath enjoyed the confidence and esteem of his fellow-citizens to a marked degree, representing the town at the General Court from 1844 to 1846, also other positions of trust in connection with town affairs. Living to the ripe age of 81 years, he passed away, March 15th, 1879.

Mary Ellen Heath, born June 14, 1840, married in 1883 to Ogden H. Smith, of Lynn, Mass. Lived in Leominster, Stoneham, and West Newbury, in which places Mr. Smith was engaged in the manufacture of shoes, in 1898 moving to East Derry, New Hampshire, and in 1902 to West Newbury.

Charles Moody Heath, born October 30, 1842, remaining at home until December, 1861, when he went to Haverhill, Mass., and engaged in the different branches of the shoe industry: also for a short time in Lynn and Marlborough, returning to Haverhill, which place he made his home for about thirty-five years. He is connected with the leading fraternal organizations, having held most of the offices of the different bodies, also represented ward four in the board of aldermen. July 11, 1883, he married Elizabeth Ayer Newcomb, of Haverhill, who died July 8, 1893. In 1898 he joined his brother-in-law, O. H. Smith, in the purchase of the Calvin Taylor farm, at East Derry, N. H.

Isaac William Heath, born July 3, 1846: left home in 1868 to engage in railroading in the West, settling in Galesburg, Illinois. He accepted a position on the C. B. & Q. R. R. May 2, 1872, he united in marriage with Laura Lyford Austin, to whom three children were born, Emma Almira, Charles, and Isaac William, the latter living but one year and seven months. In 1883 ill health compelled a relinquishment of his position on the railroad, and moving to Foster, Pierce county, Neb., purchased a farm, and soon became popular with his fellow-citizens, for soon after his settlement there he was elected sheriff of Pierce county, and re-elected for three terms in succession, but died Sept. 22, 1889, only a few days before the expiration of his office. Their children: Emma A. is a successful teacher in the public schools of Osmond, Nebraska: Charles remaining on the farm left by his father.

GROVER.

Edmund Grover, b. in England, in 1600, was of Salem, Mass., in 1633. He was made a freeman in 1678. His wife was Margaret ——. They had daughters, Mary, Naomi, and Lydia, bapt. May 17, 1646, and Deborah, 1648, who married John Bennett, 1671: a son, Nehemiah, who was administrator of his father's estate in 1683. They lived on the Beverly side of the river. The son, Nehemiah, was made a freeman in Beverly in 1678. He married, first, Ruth Haskell: second, Abigail —. Nehemiah and Ruth (Haskell) Grover had children, among them a son, Edmund, who, about 1719, moved from Beverly with a family and settled at Sandy Bay, Gloucester, where, upon the organization of the church, he was made a ruling elder. His wife was Mary —, who died in 1757, aged 78 years. He died Feb. 5, 1761, "at an advanced age."

A son, Josiah, b. in 1792, in Beverly: mar., in 1719,

Hannah, daughter of Richard Dolliver, of Gloucester. Nov. 12, 1724, Elias Elwell, mariner, and wife, Dorcas, of Gloucester, sold to Richard Dolliver, of Jamestown, in the same county, yeoman, for thirty-seven pounds and sixteen shillings, two lots, or parcels of land, in the town of Gloucester, one on the western side of the "Cutt," so called, the other lying below "Salem Path," so called, and June 12, 1736, Richard Dolliver and wife Hannah deeded the same lots of land and others, described as follows: "Two pieces of land on the south side of the way that leads to the house of William Davis, deceased, being about five or six acres, bounded northerly by said way, and southerly by Joseph Coward's land, southeasterly where the stone wall stands on the hill, then coming up the hill, as the fence now is, to the said way to the first bounds." A second lot at "the head of the marsh," and a third parcel "containing about five acres, where his house now stands, and also a small garden spot now being improved near Long Rock." It was deeded "for the love and affection which I have and bear for my son-in-law, Josiah Grover, now of Gloucester, and his wife, my daughter Hannah, and to their son Joseph after them, to hold forever."

Josiah and Hannah (Dolliver) Grover owned and lived near the tract called "Norman's Woe Pasture," now the site of the Gloucester Fishery. They had four sons, by one of whom only has the name been perpetuated, and that Joseph, born in Gloucester before 1736. He was a mariner, and married Sarah Page, of Haverhill, May 19, 1757. They resided at Fresh Water Cove until three children were born, then moved to East Haverhill, Mass., near their uncle Singletary's estate, and on March 5, 1777, purchased of his father-in-law, Nathaniel Page, ninety acres and buildings thereon, for £200, lawful money, in Atkinson. The house was situated a short distance from the present Grover homestead in Atkinson, and in 1779 Joseph Grover built the house lately removed by Stillman H. Grover, to make way for his present residence. The Grover farm descended by deed from Josiah to sons Edmund and Josiah in equal shares, April 9, 1804, and from Josiah, Jr., who had purchased his brother's part, to his son Joseph Grover, and thence to the only descendant of the name in Atkinson by inheritance, Stillman H. Grover, to whom I am much indebted for many facts of the Grover family. Joseph and Sarah (Page) Grover had twelve children, three born in Gloucester, seven in East Haverhill, and the youngest two in Atkinson, as follows:—

- I. Joseph, b. in 1758; was in Capt. Jesse Page's company during the Revolutionary war, and was lost while privateering after the close of the war. He was unmarried.
- II. A daughter.
- III. A daughter.
- IV. Josiah, b. April 5, 1764; mar. Susannah, daughter of Dea. Jeremiah Jewett, of Rowley, June 4, 1795; settled on the farm of his father, in Atkinson, except for a few years in Hampstead, at the farm of the late Isaac Heath, where the second, third, and fourth child was born. He died in 1856, aged 92 years. Their children were:—
 1. Betsey, b. Sept. 18, 1796; mar. Thomas Arnold.
 2. Sarah, b. April 5, 1798; mar. Caleb Jackson, Jr.
 3. Susanna, b. Aug. 14, 1799; a teacher in Gloucester and Rockport many years; d., unmarried, in Atkinson, aged 90.
 4. Dr. William, b. Feb. 20, 1802; mar. Sarah Taylor; resided in Barnstead, where they had a daughter, d. young, and Aleina.
 5. Rev. Nathaniel, b. Sept. 13, 1805; mar. Sarah, daughter of Hon. John Vose, of Atkinson; resided in Grand Haven, Mich.; had children: John, d. young; Martha, mar. — Hudson; Henry, William J., and Carrie, mar. — Mertz, and resides in Spokane, Wash. Rev. Nathaniel Grover was the author of the toast, which is as widely known as is the town of Atkinson. He sent the toast to the alumni of Atkinson Academy, at its celebration, Aug. 25, 1859, as follows:—
 "Atkinson—long known as the POOR, LITTLE, NOYES-EY town, inscribed upon some obscure PAGES of history, overshadowed by the darkness of many KNIGHTS; yet her POOR men have enjoyed an abundance of the good things of earth; many of her LITTLE men have been almost giants; her NOYES-ES have not been empty sounds. She has produced PAGES of sufficient size and importance to honor any author, and her very KNIGHTS have been employed to enlighten the youthful mind."

6. Joseph, b. Feb. 23, 1808; mar. Sarah Page; settled at the old homestead, and had children: Harlan, d. young; Loren, d. aged three years; and Stillman H.; Joseph d. Jan. 26, 1899, aged 90.
 7. Phebe, b. Oct. 1, 1811; mar. Rev. William Page, of Atkinson, and were the parents of S. Lizzie, of Atkinson, and Amelia, who died in young womanhood.
- V. Nathaniel, b. Jan. 21, 1766; moved to Wells, Vt.
- VI. Timothy Eaton, b. Oct. 14, 1767. He lived in Atkinson till about eighteen years of age, when he moved to Boston and engaged in the trucking business, which he followed many years, and later moved to Sandown, where he died. He married Rhoda Bennett, of Hampstead, pub. in town Aug. 17, 1805. Their children were Eleazer, Irene, John, who settled in Sandown, and parents of Charles and Horace T., now of Sandown, and Charles, who married Abigail, daughter of John Bartlett, of Hampstead. Charles was killed by the blasting of a quarry in Quincy, Mass., Feb., 1843, and the widow married, second, John Reed, of Haverhill, Mass. Their son, Charles Hamilton, b. Feb. 26, 1843, a few days after the death of his father, mar. Lois, daughter of Hanson and Clarissa (Chase) Whitehouse, and resides in Hampstead, where their children were born, as follows: Charles Hanson, mar. Alma E. Sears; Bessie G., mar. E. Cecil Mills; Frederick S. C. (see cut); and Abbie C. (see p. 367, Vol. I).
- VII. Ruth, b. Dec. 24, 1769; m. — Sloan.
- VIII. Hannah, b. May 6, 1771.
- IX. Phebe, b. May 18, 1772.
- X. Edmund, b. June 8, 1773; mar. Dorcas —; lived for a time at the half of the homestead in Atkinson, where two children were born: Roxanna, b. April 3, 1803; Stephen, b. Dec. 11, 1804. They had sons, who moved to Massachusetts, and were manufacturers of tinware, and both died of typhoid fever, unmarried, in young manhood. Edmund moved to Canterbury about 1807.
- XI. An infant, d. young.
- XII. John, b. in 1778, his mother dying at his birth. He followed the sea, and was an owner of a vessel which was washed away in a storm. His sea chest is now owned by Stillman H. Grover, in Atkinson. The following letter, written by his brother, Timothy E. Grover, to Josiah, records the date of his death: "May 9, 1805. John died in Boston, on Hanover street, at Mrs. Barynes' boarding house. He was under the care of Dr. Danforth in his sickness. He was sick twenty-seven days of fever, and then died. He died Nov. 15, 1804." In the same letter Timothy writes: "Josiah, take your horse and go to Hampstead and inform Miss Bennet of the death of your brother John, and ask her to write me a letter. Then you take the letter and you write me one, and wrap one in the other and send to me at Boston, at Asa Lawrence's, corner Merchant's row."

ATWOOD.

Mr. Charles Atwood, distinguished scholar and prominent lawyer, who died in Boston in 1887, made an extensive research of the Atwood family in England and America. From his MS., in the possession of Mrs. George W. Warren, of Somerville, Mass., a niece of Mr. Atwood, we read: "The name of Atwood originated in Coulsdon, a parish in Surrey county, twelve miles south of London, and adjoining Croydon and Sanderstead. As early as 1313 tenants of estates of the Abbey of Cherster were Peter, John, and Geoffrey Atte-Wodee, named from their residence "at the wood." This estate had 150 acres of land, and had been in the family 150 years. The first Atwood buried in the church in the village of Sanderstead was in 1520, A. D.

Nicholas, the third son of John Atwood of Sanderstead, served Queen Elizabeth from the second year of her reign, May 14, 1586, leaving a wife, Olive Harman, and sons, Harman, John, Nicholas, Thomas, James, John, 2d, or Jonathan, Richard, daughters Alice and Susan.

John Atwood, who came to Plymouth in 1635, was the second son of Nicholas and Olive (Harman) Atwood, and his nephew, Harman Atwood, was first mentioned as a freeman in Boston, Dec. 26, 1642. He was a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company in 1644. He married Ann, daughter of William Copp, and lived near Court House Square, in Boston. They had a son, John, baptized in Boston, Sept. 5, 1647, "when five days old." He married Sarah ——. He was a deacon of the North Church in Boston twenty-one years, and a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery in 1673. He died in 1714, according to a stone in Copp's Hill burying ground. It was the opinion of Mr. Charles Atwood, and also of A. Burnside Atwood, now of the engineering department, Boston City Hall, to whom we are indebted for much of this sketch, that James Atwood, born in Boston in 1673, had a son, John, b. in 1714, in one of the surrounding centres of Boston, that the son James was deceased before 1729, when the estate of the father, John Atwood, was disposed of on Middle street, Boston, and that the son John was brought up by his half uncle, John Atwood, who mar. Hannah Bond, and settled in Bradford, Mass. John and Hannah (Bond) Atwood were the parents of Joseph Atwood, mar. Sarah Chresdee, whose son, Moses, mar. Mary Tenney, and were the parents of Harriet Atwood, later the wife of Rev. Samuel Newell, the missionary. The Atwood family of Atkinson were descendants of John and Hannah (Bond) Atwood.

John Atwood, son of James, b. in 1714, was the pioneer of the family in Hampstead, being one of the original petitioners for the township in 1744, and probably came to the town in 1742. He built the house now known as the Horace Adams home, and it was one of the seven farms in town mentioned by Judge Smith, in 1849, as having been in the possession of the same family for one hundred and fifty years. This house descended from John Atwood to his son James, who married Molly Lowell, and then to their son, Moses, who sold it to Mr. Adams in 1851. Moses Atwood, son of John and Ruth (Whittaker) Atwood, built a house on the corner near by, about 1780, which was burned in 1884.

John Atwood married, first, Abigail Sanders, in Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 7, 1735, and had children:—

- I. Abigail, b. Aug. 13, 1735; mar. Alexander Hoog, Dec. 27, 1754, and resided in Alexandria.
- II. Jonathan, b. Sept. 29, 1736; bapt. April 27, 1737; mar., first, Elizabeth Plummer, Oct. 5, 1758; mar., second, Dolly Wells; removed to Weare, where he resided with his second wife. Children:—
 1. Elizabeth, b. Oct. 30, 1760 (see bapt. in Hamptead); mar. Thomas Colby, and removed to Sutton, Vt.

2. Joshua, b. April 16, 1762; m., first, Susan Cram; second, Mrs. Anna Russer; lived in Antrim, and had sixteen children, the second of whom married and lived in Weare; Dolly m. Squire Gove, and Rhoda m. Jesse Gove.
 3. Ruth, b. July 13, 1764.
 4. Philip, b. July 29, 1766; m. Sarah Dustin, and had one child, William D., b. 1789; mar. Sally Simonds, of Antrim; lived in Antrim until 1823, when he removed to Bridgewater, Vt., where he lived to a great age.
 5. John, b. May 18, 1768; m., Oct. 9, 1791, Dolly Prescott, b. Jan. 17, 1773, daughter of Joshua Prescott and wife, Ruth Carr. He died at West Campton in 1852.

They had seven children; Mary Emily, b. Feb. 28, 1846, m. in Placerville Co., Cal., Kirke White Taylor, Oct. 29, they had three children, Marion, b. Oct. 30, 1866; Ida, b. July 13, 1874, d. Nov. 24, 1877; Emily Marcia, b. July 14, 1879. Marion, m. in Martinez, Reuben Leonard U'ish, Apr. 3, 1899. They have one child, Emily, b. June 17, 1901.
 9. Dolly, b. Oct. 2, 1774.
 10. Elijah, b. May 7, 1777; m. Polly Dustin, and had a child, Peter P., b. May 12, 1796.
 11. Jesse, b. July 10, 1779.
 12. David, b. July 6, 1781; m. Polly Barnard, 1802.
 13. Mehitable, b. March 7, 1784; d. unmarried.
 14. Sarah, b. Dec., 1786; m. William Eastman.
- III. Caleb, b. Dec. 28, 1738.
- IV. Joshua (twin to Caleb); died a soldier in the French war.
- V. Joanna, b. July 7, 1740.
- VI. Ruth, b. May 29, 1742; mar. Bond Little (see list of those who "owned the covenant").
- VII. Sarah, b. March 29, 1746; m. — Straw.
- VIII. John, b. ; m. Merideth Roberts, of Hampstead, Sept. 28, 1769; removed to Weare, and settled on lot 76, range 2; he sold out early and returned to Hampstead. They had one child, b. in Weare, Daniel, b. June, 1770.

Abigail, wife of John Atwood, died Nov. 9, 1750, and he married Ruth Whittaker (see No. 76, ch. mem.).

Caleb, son of John and Abigail (Saunders) Atwood, had children:—

- I. Samuel, b. Sept. 22, 1763; m. Lydia Persons in 1787, and settled in Bradford.
- II. Abigail, b. Sept. 3, 1765; m. Charles Colburn.
- III. Caleb, b. Sept. 25, 1767; m. Hannah Persons.
- IV. Mehitable, b. Dec. 4, 1769; m. Hezekiah Emerson.
- V. Elizabeth, b. Nov. 6, 1772.
- VI. Eunice, b. Sept. 16, 1774; m. William Rowe in 1794.
- VII. Stephen, b. March 27, 1777; m. Fanny Seal.
- VIII. Joshua, b. June 26, 1779; m. — Patten; resides in Deering.
- IX. Moses, b. Sept. 21, 1781.

Caleb Atwood bought, Feb. 4, 1760, lot 60, range 2, in Weare, of his father, John Atwood, of Hampstead, for 42 Spanish milled dollars. His father bought of Moses True, Jan. 30, 1760, the same lot, for 12 pounds lawful money. Young Caleb Atwood moved to Weare from Hampstead in the spring of that year, and built a cabin on the side of Mt. Dearborn, the highest house in town. It stood just south of the house at present owned by Josiah G. Dearborn, which is now the flower garden, and was one mile west of Meadow Brook, on the road over the hill to Deering, "and was on the west side of the way," and soon after it was built a gale took the roof off, carried it over the road, and laid it down softly in the stumpy field.

Mr. Caleb Atwood was a prominent man in Weare, a soldier in the Revolution, active in town matters, and a member of the First Church. In his old age he went to live with his son Joshua, in Antrim. After that he lived in Deering, where he died, aged 76 years.

John Atwood, the father, died in Hampstead, Jan. 1, 1812, aged 97 years and 7 months. The story is told of him that "he weighed about 260 pounds, and was over six feet, and lifted a barrel of cider in his hands, and carried 500 feet of lumber up a hill."

James, the tenth child of John and Ruth Atwood, married Molly Lowell. Their fourth child, Levi, b. Nov. 4, 1781, mar.

Betsey Francis, of Sandown, July 27, 1806. They resided the last part of their life in Nashua, where they both died. Their son, Amos, b. in Thornton, Jan. 15, 1812, m. Mary C. Mills (No. 531), and parents of—

- I. Belinda G. (No. 516).
- II. Charles Edwin; a soldier in the 1st N. H. Regt. of Vol., 1864 to 1865.

Sylvanus, eleventh child of James and Molly (Lowell) Atwood, married Mary Leavitt, of Washington, Vt., and died in Andover, at the age of 74 years. He was a wheelwright by trade, and an earnest member of the Methodist church. They had one daughter and a son:—

- I. Laura Ann, m. George W. Cilley, of Hebron; d. in Andover, June 11, 1902, at the age of 77. They had eight children, six of them dying in infancy, and are buried in Andover. The two surviving children were Mrs. Rozanna F. Elkins of Andover and Mrs. Mary S. Peabody of Nashua.
- II. Moses, m. Mary Ann Emery, of East Andover; one child, d. young.

John, the seventh child of James and Molly (Lowell) Atwood, b. June 9, 1787, was drowned.

STEVENS.

William Stevens, from Gonsham, Oxford county, England, came to Newbury, Mass., probably in the ship "Confidence," in April, 1638. He married Elizabeth —, in Newbury, in 1645, and had children, b. in Newbury, of whom the eldest son was John, born Nov. 19, 1650, married Mary, daughter of Aquilla Chase. DEXTER.

Lydia Marsh, b. in Haverhill, Mass., Dec. 9, 1744, a daughter of Jonathan Marsh, mar. David Dexter, who was b. Feb. 18, 1748, and called of Atkinson Aug. 27, 1767. They lived in Haverhill, Mass., Hampstead, and Pembroke. He died in Boston, Nov. 24, 1821. She died in Hampstead, Dec. 30, 1785. Their home in Hampstead was situated nearly on the spot where the residence of the late Elbridge H. Noyes stands, and is still known as the "Dexter farm."

Elizabeth Dexter, daughter of David and Lydia, married Micajah Emerson, b. Jan. 29, 1798, a son of Stephen and Hannah (Marden) Emerson (No. 16). She was b. Feb. 28, 1773, and d. in Boston, Mass., June 12, 1848. They moved to Piermont.

Lydia Dexter, daughter of David and Lydia, b. Dec. 14, 1782, m. Abraham Richards, of Atkinson, April 24, 1800, and were the parents of Leverett E. P. Richards, late of Atkinson and Hampstead, Mrs. Cynthia Alexander of Hampstead, and nine other children. She lived to be one hundred years of age.

HAZEN.

Moses Hazen, a brother of Richard Hazen, Esq., of Hampstead, was one of the first land owners in Hampstead, and an early proprietor, as well, of the settlement of Pennycook (now Concord). He was born in Haverhill, Mass., May 17, 1701, son of Lieut. Richard and Mary, daughter of Capt. John and Hannah (Andrews) Peabody. He married Abigail, daughter of John and Lydia (Gilman) White. "The Worshipful William White," the first proprietor of Haverhill, was grandfather of John White. Their children were:—

- I. Abigail, b. Jan. 7, 1729; m. Moses Moors. Gen. Benjamin Moors of Plattsburg, N. Y., was a son.
- II. John, b. Aug. 11, 1731; m. Anne Sweet, Nov. 30, 1752, daughter of Timothy and Anne (Merrill) Sweet. Mrs. Anne Sweet (widow) became the second wife of Capt. Hezekiah Hutchens of Hampstead (see sketch of Capt. Hutchens). John Hazen was active in the settlement of Hampstead, and when the French and Indian war broke out distinguished himself for good service. He was a lieutenant in Capt. Jacob Bailey's company in the Crown Point expedition, in 1757, in Col. Meserve's regiment from New Hampshire. In 1758 he was a captain in Col. Hart's regiment, and in 1760 he was a captain in Col. Goff's regiment. After the war he and Col. Bailey joined in the enterprise of settling the rich Coos country, and in 1761 became the first settler in Grafton county, at Haverhill. His wife died Sept. 29, 1765. They had children, b. in Hampstead: John and Sarah, and two who d. in infancy. Their son, John, b. Nov. 29, 1755, m. Priscilla, daughter of Dr. William and Priscilla (Leonard) McKinstry. They had twelve children, and went to New Brunswick with an uncle, William Hazen.
- III. Moses, b. June 1, 1733; was in the old French war, and severely wounded on the Plains of Abraham, where he distinguished himself. He was retired on "half pay" for life by the British army. He settled at St. John, Canada. He mar. Charlotte La Saussee. They had no children. He then joined the patriot cause in the Revolutionary war, and sacrificed a large estate and his half pay for life. He raised a regiment of Canadians, recruited from all quarters as the war proceeded, variously known as "Congress' Own," or "Hazen's Own." The traitor Arnold honored him by baseless charges of subordination, but the record proves his good conduct. He was a brigadier-general at the close of the war. He cut the military road through northern Vermont, from Peacham to Hazen's Notch, in Montgomery, which still bears his name.

- IV. Anna, b. July 30, 1735; m. Robert Peaslee, son of Amos Peaslee of Dover, one of the first settlers of Gilmanton.
- V. William, b. July 17, 1738; moved to New Brunswick, Canada, from the establishment of the province. He married Sarah, daughter of Dr. Joseph and Sarah (Leonard) Le Baron, of Plymouth, Mass. They had sixteen children, among whom was Elizabeth, who married Hon. Ward Chipman, Judge of the Supreme Court, and acting Governor of New Brunswick at his death, in 1824. They had sons, William, Robert, an officer in the British army, a daughter, Sarah Charlotte, mar. Gen. Sir John Foster, member of the British Parliament, and Frances Amelia, who married Col. Charles Drury, of the English army, whose two sons were generals and resided at St. John, N. B.
- VI. Sarah, b. Nov. 1, 1741; mar. Major Nathaniel Merrill, of Haverhill.

HARRIMAN.

Thomas Harriman m. Martha Pool, moved from Hampstead to Plymouth. They were married at Rowley, Mass., Sept. 26, 1766. They had children, b. in Hampstead.

- I. Jane, b. Jan. 28, 1770; mar. Benjamin Gould, of Plymouth, Aug. 11, 1791.
- II. Miriam, b. Oct. 18, 1771; m. Nehemiah Snow, of Plymouth, April 9, 1789.
- III. John, b. Feb. 2, 1774; m. Hannah Green, March 20, 1799.
- IV. Anna, b. April 15, 1776.
- V. Thomas, b. May 15, 1778.

They had one child born in Manchester, and six more in Plymouth, N. H.

HOGG.

John Hogg, or Hoog, doubtless was a North Ireland man, who came to Londonderry, N. H., after 1719, and from there to Hampstead. His name appears on the early petitions for a township in 1743, and other places on the early records. He married Elizabeth Hambleton in 1739, possibly from Kittery, Maine. He refused to pay his rates towards the support of the minister, in 1752 [p. 26, Vol. 1]. They resided at the "old James Smith" house in West Hampstead, and both were buried in the village cemetery [see inscription of the tomb, p. 310, Vol. 1]. From the family Bible, printed in 1734, in the handwriting of John Hoog, is taken the following:—

"My own birth and marriage; the names and ages of my children. I, myself, born September, 1704. I was married to Elizabeth Hambleton, Nov. 6, 1729."

"My son, Samuel Hoog, born Aug. 13, 1730.

" daughter, Elizabeth Hoog, born April 29, 1732.

" " Agnes Hoog, born Sept. 2, 1734.

" " Ann Hoog, b. July 4, 1736.

" son, John Hoog, born Oct. 29, 1739.

" daughter, Mary Hoog, born May 7, 1742.

" son, David Hoog, born March 5, 1745.

" " Abasser Hoog, born May —, —.

" " Caleb Hoog, born Nov. 22, 17—."

The son, John, mar. Agnes —. Feb. 19, 1767. His descendants settled in Henniker, and changed their names to Raymond. It is recorded by some historians that "John settled in Dumbarton in 1752, with John S. Stinson and Thomas Mills, his brother-in-law, but it seems to some members of the family more probable that it was Samuel who settled in Dumbarton in 1752 than John."

John Hoog, Esq., senior, was a prominent man on the committees of Londonderry in the first years of the settlement of Dumbarton, although he resided in Hampstead. "He may have lived in Londonderry from 1752 for a few years."

MARSHALL.

"In the first generation of New England people were many families by the name of Marshall." Edmund Marshall was of Salem, Mass., in 1636. He was a freeman in Massachusetts, May 17, 1637. He had lands granted him there in 1638. In 1650 he bought lands at "Kettle Cove," about one half a mile from Gloucester boundary, upon which is now built the summer residence of the Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge, late minister to France. In 1651, with his son John and other Cape Ann people, he went to New London, Conn., in company with Rev. Mr. Blinman, but after a short stay returned to Gloucester. After 1657 he was of Ipswich, and later of Newbury, Mass. He was a weaver. Edmund Marshall and wife Millicent had children.

- I. Naomi, bapt. Jan. 24, 1637.
- II. Ann, b. April 15, 1638.
- III. Ruth, b. May 3, 1640.
- IV. Sarah, b. May 29, 1642.
- V. Edmund, b. June 16, 1644.
- VI. Benjamin, b. Sept. 27, 1646; m. Prudence Woodward, Nov. 2, 1677, in Ipswich. Had children, b. in Ipswich: Benjamin, b. Nov. 15, 1684, m. Bethia Goodhue; Anna, m. Samuel Page, of Hampton; Mary, b. July 21, 1686; m. Ralph Butler, of Hampton; Abigail, unmarried; Sarah, b. Dec. 2, 1693; Rachel, b. Dec. 28, 1695; Edmund, Ezekiel, John, and Joseph.

Benjamin Marshall and Bethiah Goodhue were published Nov. 24, 1711, in Ipswich. He d. Oct. 1, 1747. His will was admitted to probate Oct. 19, 1747. It commences:—

"In the name of God, Amen. I, Benjamin Marshall, of Chebacco Parish, in Ipswich, Yeoman." "He appoints his sons, Benjamin and Joseph, to be executors, mentions wife Bethiah, and daughters, Elizabeth, wife of David Burnham, Jr., Bethiah, wife of John Burnham, of Chebacco, Susannah, wife of Abner Day of Gloucester, and Anna." "To son Moses land in Cheshire and a cow and steers when he comes of age. He divides his homestead between sons Benjamin and Joseph, and to the son William, b. in Ipswich, April 3, 1726, as follows: "I give and bequeath to my son William, and his heirs and assigns forever, the whole of my land and interest in Almsbury Peak (so called), within the Province of New Hampshire. I also give to said William one cow and one pair of steers (upon demand) after my decease. The bequest to William is in every part in fee simple."

The son mentioned, William Marshall, m. Sarah Buswell, of Salisbury, Mass., moved to "Almsbury Peak," that part now

Hampstead. He built the house in East Hampstead at "Marshall's Corner," as seen in the cut following p. 320, Vol. 1, owned and occupied by the Marshall family from 1726 to the death of Miss Ellen Augusta Marshall, in 1901.

Capt. William and Sarah (Buswell) Marshall had children, b. in Hampstead:—

- I. Caleb, b. June 23, 1750; m. Zuranh Harriman (see No. 84, ch. mem.); moved to Northumberland, and had children: Benjamin, Sarah, Abigail, William, Betsey, Caleb, Susannah, Rhoda, Nancy, Fanny, Silas, and Mary, who mar. Joseph Dyer, and later joined the Shakers at Enfield, and ran away from the company, and became the author of several works exposing the teachings of Ann Lee. One of her works was published in 1847, entitled "The Rise and Progress of the Serpent from the Garden of Eden to the Present Day, with Discourse of Shakerism."
- II. Betty, b. June 3, 1753; d. young.
- III. Molly, b. July 30, 1754.

Sarah, wife of Capt. William, d. in 1755, and he m., second, Abigail Burnham, a cousin, of Essex, Mass., Jan. 1, 1756. They had children, b. in Hampstead:—

- IV. Sarah, b. May 4, 1757; m. Joshua Stevens, of Enfield.
- V. Silas, b. Jan. 1, 1763; m. Ruth Fellows, and were the parents of the nine children recorded on p. 422, Vol. 1, whose son, Andrew Burnham, was father of Arthur Ward Marshall (see sketch No. 424, ch. mem.).
- VI. Betty, b. Dec. 31, 1764.
- VII. Samuel, b. June 3, 1766; m. Lydia Eaton, of Plaistow; moved to Landaff. They were the parents of James Marshall, who m. Mary Dudley of Brentwood, and d. in Kingston in 1858, who were parents of James Frank Marshall, m. Mary Miranda George, whose son, Rev. Harold Marshall, of Porto Rico, m. Bertha Hills.
- VIII. Ann, or Abigail, b. in 1768.

Capt. William Marshall m., third, Feb. 3, 1790, Miriam Johnson, widow of the late Ebenezer Mudgett, of Hampstead and Weare (see Nos. 19 and 20, list of cov. mem.). He died in Hampstead, June 23, 1822, aged 96 years, 4 months, and 10 days. He was buried in an orchard near the old homestead.

He served in the Revolutionary war, "although in his fiftieth year when the battle of Lexington was fought," and was the first representative to the General Court under the new constitution. His granddaughter, Mrs. Mary Marshall Dyer (author referred to above), says of her grandfather in her book, "When I was sixteen years of age I spent two years at my grandfather's home in Hampstead to be near the seashore for my health. My grandfather, Capt. William Marshall, was much of a business man. Previous to the Revolution he had been a commanding officer in the King's Regiment. He was also a worthy merchant. He had a large farm where he lived, and owned rights in a number of towns. While in this situation the Americans began to be dissatisfied with British oppression. The stamp act began to arouse the inhabitants. He soon exclaimed, 'We can be an independent nation.' He renounced his gold-laced coat and hat: he would wear nothing but home-made manufacture, and abolished all costly ornaments in his family, of apparel or furniture, and declared himself independent of foreign powers. His influence had a good effect. In the time of the Revolution, he, with my father (Caleb), did much for the soldiers and suffering in Coos county. He continued an unflinching patriot through life. He was a large and robust man, and much was said about him because he wore his grey cloth clothes. He had a strong and persevering mind. His last counsel when he parted with his friends was, 'You must be honest and always speak the truth, let your circumstances be what they will: truth and justice will carry you through all difficulty.'"

(We are indebted to Charles H. Whittier, of Hampstead, for the gift of the book, by Mrs. Mary Marshall Dyer, referred to above. To Mr. Thomas Hills, of South Boston, President Hill's Family Association, for many items connected with the family of Marshall.)

In his "Reminiscences of Seventy Years," delivered by Dr. Jeremiah Spofford, in the First Church of Groveland, Mass., June 22, 1867, is found the following in reference to his home in Hampstead:—

"June, 1813. I made my second visit to Boston. Then I found it greatly agitated by the news, just arrived from Halifax, of the death of Captain Lawrence, and the circumstances of the capture of the Chesapeake, which had so mysteriously disappeared from off the harbor a few days before, after a single blockade. British ships of war were lazily blockading the port. Soldiers were parading the Common, which was well filled with piles of cannon balls, staked arms, and munitions of war.

After two days in Boston I took passage for Salem, and spent the night at Danvers, and arrived at my father's the next day (Groveland). After remaining at my father's a few weeks, and assisting him in his haying, I was induced to visit Hampstead, about nine miles north of Haverhill, Mass., where the kind attentions of Rev. John Kelly and J. True, Esq., principally conducted to my stay and settlement in that town, where I was kindly received, and found a remarkably steady, industrious people, among whom I spent three and a half years, with pleasure and advantage.

As I was not burdened with practice, in October I visited Dartmouth College, and attended the medical lectures. President Wheelock, the son of the founder, was spending his last years in office. The unfortunate quarrel which removed him soon after was already in progress, and my wonder was that he remained there so long. Dr. Perkins lectured on anatomy and physiology, Dr. Noyes of Newburyport on theory and practice of physic, and Dr. Graves on chemistry.

I received a certificate to practice in the State from Dr. Nathan Smith, the founder of the medical school there, and president of the New Hampshire Medical Society, then about to remove to New Haven.

Upon this journey I visited Jaffrey, N. H., where I was married, Oct. 25, 1813, consummating a union which had been five years in contemplation, and which has had an important bearing upon all the subsequent transactions of my life, a course of action which many would pronounce imprudent, but which I recommend to every industrious and prudent young man prepared to go into business, and especially to every young physician.

The acceding January we commenced housekeeping in Hampstead, which, with the blessing of God, which always rests upon a wise use of his institutions, still continues.

Hampstead, like all other towns at that time which had a good portion of active, intelligent men, was greatly agitated with politics. It was difficult even to acquire the personal friendship of a political opponent. I had opinions, and scorned to conceal them. The town was about equally divided, and my predilections were no sooner known than half the people were my firm friends and patrons, but as there was a Democratic doctor in town, it will be perceived that it was a difficult task to gain the other half.

Thinking outspoken honesty the best policy, but carefully avoiding all political discussions while attending the sick, I openly advocated my own views in social conversations and public occasions, but during the sickly season of 1815 politics were forgotten, and I had the patronage of many of the strongest Democratic families in the town.

With this circle of intelligent and active friends I remained three years and a half, and just about paid my expenses. In connection with my father, I built a good house and barn, which I furnished and occupied from November, 1815, to 1817, in full expectation of a more permanent residence. These buildings the present owner has finished and improved, so as to do no discredit to my plans or his own, and I did what few do with buildings they put up, sold them for the cost when I removed to this town (now, 1902, known as the Titcomb place, in West Hampstead).

For the people of Hampstead I have ever entertained the highest regard. They received us with great kindness; myself and my wife were made happy in our residence among them, and we left them with much regret. Mr. Kelly was my firm friend and warm adviser and patron, and his friendship did not cease when I removed; his frequent visits were welcome to my home, till he went to his reward in his extreme old age.

In December, 1816, Dr. Elias Weld informed me that Dr. Eben Jewett, then physician here (Groveland, or as it was then East Bradford), was in the last stages of consumption, and advised me to step into the vacancy soon to be made. I decidedly preferred a residence in Massachusetts to equal advantages in New Hampshire, but to leave my excellent friends, my newly acquired homestead, and throw myself, with the encumbrance of two families (my father and mother lived with me) upon the uncertain ties of a new location, and trust to acquiring new friends, these considerations bore heavily upon my mind and cost many hours of deepest consideration. In March I visited this place, and in April I removed my family.

I never saw a light or fire in any church previous to 1821, save once at Hampstead, to close a town meeting, though I was then thirty years of age, and had resided in different towns and states.

I have been a constant attendant of the ancient Congregational Orthodox service in all places where I have resided since I was ten years old. Myself and wife were admitted to the church Nov. 7, 1819. I have no bigoted attachment to any denomination. I have not adhered to that in which my fathers worshipped because they did so, but because, whatever individuals or local churches may have done, I do not see that others, as a whole, do any better, and all other things being equal, I prefer that religious connection which was earliest and has done the most to make New England and the country what they are.

To the people of Hampstead and Groveland and vicinity I have been under infinite obligation. Of the departed I would express my high estimate of their thousand acts and kindness; to the living my grateful thanks."

Timothy Sargent, b. in Haverhill, Mass., Aug. 17, 1747; m. Anna Whittier, of Amesbury; second, m. Deborah Smith. He d. in Hill, where he moved. Two of his children were born in Salem; next three, John, Abigail, and Moses Sargent, were born in Hampstead, from 1788 to 1799.

Phineas Sargent, b. in Amesbury, Mass., July 3, 1750, m., first, Rebecca Wells; m., second, Hannah Colby. He was one of the original settlers of Hill, and the father of twenty five children, twelve by first wife, and thirteen by the second. Resided in Hampstead from 1771 to 1780.

Joseph Sargent, b. in Sandown, March 18, 1802, m. Elizabeth Bartlett, of Amesbury. Children:—

- I. Benjamin, b. Feb. 9, 1825; m. Maria E. Johnson in 1840. Children:—
 - 1. Ellen M., b. in 1852.
 - 2. Warren B., b. in 1855.
 - 3. Mary E., b. in 1855.
 - 4. Henrietta, b. in 1857.
- II. Judith, b. Oct. 16, 1826; m. James Gibson.
- III. Almira B., b. June 12, 1828; m. Lorenzo Frost, of Haverhill.

James Woodward went from Hampstead to Haverhill in 1763, and purchased a farm, at 20 cents an acre. In 1764 he married Hannah Clark, and it was the first marriage service performed in Grafton county. He was prominently connected with the affairs of the new town, serving as an officer, committee, etc. In 1782 he became judge of the Court of Common Pleas. In 1783 he was chosen to represent the town of Haverhill in the General Assembly at Concord. Hannah (Clark) Woodward died Oct. 21, 1805, and he married, second, Elizabeth Hale, a daughter of Rev. John Hale, a surgeon in the Revolutionary army. Elizabeth Hale was married, first, to Dr. Samuel Poor, her father's assistant surgeon. James Woodward had a son, Joshua, a prominent man in town and church affairs in Haverhill. He was an Abolitionist, being a colleague of William Lloyd Garrison, Parker Pillsbury, and others. James Woodward died in 1821.

- Several accounts of the Townsend house as a parsonage have been given the writer. An authority says the true facts are the house never was a parsonage. Mr. Pratt, when he first came to Hamptstead, boarded for a time in the family of Dea. Jona. Kent, and later moved to the Townsend house, which was owned by a company consisting of Mr. Amos Buck, Henry Putnam, and R. Kimball Brickett, who controlled all of the land from the church to the Chase house, now occupied by Ellery Tabor. After a short time Mr. Pratt moved to the "Brick house," which he purchased for himself. The company of owners sold land to John W. Little, who built the house where Frank W. Emerson now resides, and sold the present Townsend house to Maj. Isaac Smith, and it was occupied by the son, Rufus C., until he moved to Haverhill, when it was purchased by Mr. Townsend.
